My dear friend Fish ;

I feel my duty and moral obligation to write you something about "Gold Diggers of 1933", which I had a luck to play on September 3-4-5.- If I would have more time and a better knowledge of language, I could write you very many pages and in a real poetical style, which this beautiful production deserves, but I have to be short and use only our dayly poor and tecnical words :

Beleive it or not, "Gold Diggers" is a great picture, and a Box-office SMASH. It did unespected wonders for me. My business jumpt over 300% over average. Sunday night I had them in line before my theatre, and they never have been lined since 1929. As you know my community is very small, but I dont know where they came from. Some pictures atract society, and some common people, but this one packed every living soul in; even those who have not seen the movie since 1929, and everybody came out with an happy smile. That is just what I wanted; not as much money as to see them once happy.-

As I wrote you, I wanted to play it only 2 instead of 3 days, because my "dear friend" Weed booked it close 3 days ahead of me, - and I am very much obliged to you having advised me to go on 3 days. My business was better on 3rd. then on the 2nd. day, and better then any Sunday with so called "special pictures".-

Notwithstanding our play conditions 50/50, I made so much money to pay my monthly house-rent, and beleive me, this means much; just as much as a nice and quiet sleep during the month of Sept., because those house-owners are very tuff fellows, and they mean business. I wish I could get one "Gold Digger" each month but I am afraid so. And you?-

The night I shipped it back to San Francisco, I had a sincere desire to stretch it among my arms, like my dearest sweetheart - (the one you met; with dark hair and blue eyes!), and tell to it: "Good bye sweetheart, I am losing you for ever".-

With best personal regards, I am, Sincerely yours,

Steve Chorak

Dear Steve —

You sure have done your duty —
Your memo of the 9th's a beauty!

You say you wish you had the time
To do "Gold Diggers'" praise in rhyme.
Forget it, kid! We'd gladly walk
A mile for your box-office talk ....
Besides, you'd better save that meter
For one that's infinitely sweeter.

That dame that handed you the air
We now consider only fair ....
Of course she had that certain figger —
But, frankly, she was just a "Digger"
Compared to one that we've just made —
A number called "FOOTLIGHT PARADE."

Boy! There's a gal that's got real charm!
When you stretch her "among your arms"
You'll be so filled with sentiment
That you can pay a whole year's rent
And also put by such a hoard
That you can send yourself abroad ....
And local social lights will shriek
That you must keep her for a week.

So dry them tears and don't be blue —
"Footlight Parade" has blue eyes too ...
And brother, there'll be plenty others

From, yours sincerely,

WARNER BROTHERS

IF NOT, WHY NOT?

SINCE Sally Rand's nudity in her Chicago fan dance has been attested and adjudicated as one hundred percent complete by the action of a court fining her some $200 and passing a sentence of a year in jail, now in process of appeal, one may wonder how her personal appearance and screen contract will be affected. The fair presumption would appear to be that she is now worth more.

Ancient mythology gave Eve a fig leaf, but Sally has efficiently abandoned any such handicap. She is out on her sheer merit. Her fortitude, among other things, is offered for admiration. What she can and will confer upon the motion picture will doubtless be much appreciated by those who appreciate it.

Stepping lightly from fig leaves to rose leaves, it would seem only fair that Sally be brought into the view of Mr. Sol Rosenblatt for the purpose of having her and her ilk properly provided for in the Code. The Washington scene would be brightened and enhanced, if not improved, by consideration of the elements of decoration and decorum concerned.

RHETORIC AND GEOGRAPHY

NOT yet can the motion picture's advertising craft yield any laurels in the art of adjectives and punch phrases, but here and there copy writers of the book trade are developing the promise of sincere competition. At the moment we are beguiled and charmed by an outburst, 100 lines on three columns, by staid, sober old Macmillan in The New York Herald Tribune, announcing the publication of "Mandoa, Mandoa!" which seems to be a high tension novel. Says Macmillan: "Jammed with exciting action, with thrilling unexpected crises, ... In brief magnificent entertainment. . . . There is action and wit and satire—and a gorgeous love story wherein a modern girl reaches the height of passion in the wilds of Africa." This is informative, too. We had previously thought that the height of passion was located in some Manhattan penthouse. "Mandoa," by the way, is the name of the place, not the girl.

WORDS UNSPOKEN

NOW that Mr. Ring Lardner, our one time friend and co-worker, has gone to "that other shore" it seems a pity that despite many plans and negotiations so little of his astonishingly faithful and dramatic recordings of the language of the American commonalty have ever reached the screen. "Elmer the Great," a Warner-First National picture, and "June Moon," Paramount, stand as the only Lardners of the screen.

Way back then, when Mr. Lardner wrote his first story of the "You know me, Al" letters, he got it back from Mr. George Horace Lorimer with a note saying in substance: "Very entertaining, but people do not write that way." Mr. Lardner responded by bundling up some fan mail from his desk in the sports department of the Chicago Tribune and forwarding it to the Saturday Evening Post with a note outside: "The hell they don't." When the letters arrived, Ring's magazine career began.

Mr. Lardner's fame was as a humorist. Mostly he saw it all as tragedy, the tragedy of the nobody millions.

WHAT PROGRAM?

THE Reverend William Harrison Short, director of the Motion Picture Research Council, Inc., and motivator of sundry activities and publications thereunto related, financed by the Payne Fund Foundation, considerably discussed in the press some months ago with the issuance of a volume of findings about the screen, is now, it appears, getting under way on a campaign of wider scope in its address to the public. With a technique that reminds one much of the methods of the defenders of the screen's artistic and moral status quo, the Reverend Mr. Short starts by seeking to enlist organized women. The initial approach is a questionnaire addressed to a "round table discussion" at the twelfth annual Exposition of Women's Arts and Industries held in New York this week. The questionnaire is a resume of the adverse elements of the Short-inspired book "Our Movie Made Children" and closes with an invitation to cooperate with the Research Council "in carrying out a program based on these facts." The program is still not disclosed. Mr. Short has declared that he is not advocating censorship. Is it not just possible the idea is the continued existence of the Motion Picture Research Council?

MICKEY'S BIRTHDAY

IT is our pleasure to record that Mr. Mickey Mouse is now five years old. He emerged from Mr. Walt Disney's inkwell October 1, 1928. Mickey was born grown up, giving him a considerable advantage over his human contemporaries. Also, being of parthenogenetic origin, he has not been handicapped by errors in the choice of ancestors. Bringing us again to our often made observation that the most dangerous animal in the world is the forebear.

INSTRUCTIONAL FILMS

Fully cognizant is the United States government, apparently, of the place films may take in education. On Monday was held a Washington meeting called by Commissioner of Education George F. Zook, to consider the educational influence of films, their systematic introduction into teaching as factors in national unity, international understanding and other relative topics. Prepared was to be a report for submission to the International Congress of Educational and Instructional Cinematography in Rome next April. Represented were virtually all industry branches, federal departments. . . .

PRECONCEIVED NOTIONS

Into the discard are going preconceived notions about "what the public wants," as producers get "down to earth," opined Hal Roach, MGM comedy producer, recently in Kansas City. Referring to producers, Mr. Roach said: "We are testing our pictures on ourselves. Strangely enough, the box office shows that pictures we like are the kind the public likes, too." All of which is not so strange, except that some producers have not discovered the fact sooner. . . .

HOUSEWIVES' "MOVIES"

Making of herself champion of a cause, demanding invocation of the New Deal, for housewives, one Mrs. L. T. P. Nederland, Texas, suggested last week in a modest letter consideration of the problem by President Roosevelt. Dinner out, dish washing assistance, sleeping late, house cleaning help are noted as important. Prominently placed is this: "Every housewife is entitled to a minimum of two 'movies' weekly." Simple mathemathics multiplies an expansive smile from the motion picture industry. . . .

A PLAYER PASSES

Last Sunday, in a Hollywood home, was written the last line of a saga, the saga of a great baseball player who thought he was a great actor, who deserted the diamond for the footlights' lure, who returned to the field for a comeback that failed, threw away his glove for stage—then screen, and who died at 57, never more than a "bit" player. The fans will never forget, however, the great hitting Michael Joseph (Mike, Turkey Mike) Donlin, who will rank always with Christy Mathewson on John McGraw's famed Giants of 1904-1908. In late 1907 he went to the stage, turned out a "busher," tried two comebacks on the diamond, in 1910, 1914, then semi-pro ball, and gave up in 1917. In "Raffles" he played his first screen role, followed by many another. . . .

U. S. "REVOLUTION"

In New York this week arrived James E. Abbe, once famed as "still" photographer for the silent screen, on a special mission. Representing the "Berliner Illustrierte Zeitung," German weekly with a 2,000,000 circulation, cameraman Abbe will report with camera and typewriter the "revolutionary" movement Germans believe to be going on in America today. Among his triumphs the bald little man numbers photographs of Stalin, Russian dictator, Hitler, other revolutionary leaders. Washington, not Hollywood, probably will be his locale on this assignment. . . .

CONTINENT TO COAST

To Hollywood, in December, will go Erik Charell, there to assume the duties, responsibilities of a Fox producer. Long has the stage, film producer, whose forte is comedy, enjoyed a brilliant Continental reputation, in association with Max Reinhardt, as director of "Congress Dances," as producer of the successfully current "White Horse Inn." To America, at the invitation of Otto H. Kahn, he came in 1923 to aid the staging of "The Miracle." Shortly he returns, Fox hopes, to be their musical "ace." . . .

VANDALS—AND HOMICIDE

One month ago the Brooklyn Windsor Theatre turned from Empire State union operators to the new Allied Union. Since then have Empire State pickets "covered" the house. On Friday night vandals broke in, slashed 300 seats, wrecked two projection machines, sound apparatus. Murderously attacked with a fire axe was colored night watchman James MacArthur, who hours later lay dead. Arrested were officers, a walking delegate of Empire, lodged in jail, charged with homicide. . . .

PUBLISHER, PRODUCER

Once a successful bond salesman, later a successful publisher, and most recently a motion picture producer, and eternally a foe of censorship, Horace Brisbin Liveright, but 49, last Sunday passed from the scene at his New York home, a victim of pneumonia. It is little known that some four years ago Mr. Liveright was in conflict with Will Hays of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., over material offered for the screen and held unsuitable by Mr. Hays. Mr. Liveright assigned the writing of a life of Mr. Hays to Silas Bent. Before the completion of the book Mr. Liveright left the publishing house bearing his name and entered the service of the production department of Paramount. The book was rejected by the publishing concern and Mr. Bent instituted suit. . . .

SUITABLE STORIES

No longer will Maurice Chevalier, ending a Paramount contract, tie himself to long term agreements, no longer will he take stories as assigned, he says. Rather will he take the best offer, that being the most suitable story, no matter who the producer. Vigorously he denied any intention of a picture planned, based on his own life, authored by a Frenchman. Planning no personal production. Chevalier is "willing to place my trust in" people "in the industry who know more about production than I do." . . .

JAMAICA CENSORING

For a completely unknown reason Tom Mix in his 1932 western romance, "Texas Bad Man," is distasteful to the censor of Jamaica, country of ginger and rum, and the film was banned. Through the American consulate at Kingston came a Washington inquiry, scenting possible discrimination. From the censor the sharp reply that, responsible only to the Jamaica government, he was not prepared to supply reasons. Well does Washington recognize the right of other countries to censor, but reserves the right to protest discrimination. . . .

ROSENBLATT WRITING FILM CODE AS CAPITAL TALKS ABOUT CODE "BOSS"

by TERRY RAMSAYE

We are in Washington—you the reader and I the recorder of the scene. We are sitting on a divan in the lobby of the Mayflower hotel. It is early this week.

It looks like things are happening—that is, it looks that way. A number of persons pass looking like something on its way to happen. The exhibitors, which is to say mostly the unaffiliated persons who run theatres on their own, are on their way to meet in the basement. The "majors," meaning those who represent those who hire those who cast those who make pictures, and sometimes show them on the big time, are on their way to the ninth floor. There goes the "right to buy" and there goes "right to sell." Meanwhile variously in their paths about, Labor goes on its errands about the "right to work" and Employment goes to talk about its "right to hire and fire."

ROSENBLATT EVERYWHERE, BUT 18 POUNDS LIGHTER

Shuttling back and forth, pale and eighteen pounds lighter than when he started, goes Sol A. Rosenblatt, deputy administrator for the NRA. He has heard interminably from everybody in the picture business, and from Franklin Delano Roosevelt, President of the United States, at least once. He may again.

There are meetings everywhere. Mr. Rosenblatt is going everywhere. He is said to sleep four hours a night.

Everybody is going everywhere. There go Pat Casey, upbound, Abram Myers, Ed Kuykendall, R. B. Wilby, Al Steffes, Sidney Kent, Charles O'Reilly, Gabriel Hess, Colonel Schiller, Ed Golden, Harry Thomas, the labor agents, the affiliates, the semi-affiliates and the unaffiliates.

Will Hays comes along. It is late in the day in Washington and early on the morning he will be talking on the 'phone from New York. On the move, always going.

Irrelevancies filter across the scene. A pallid picture of his days of pink whiskered glory, Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois goes by. Murray Garson, once upon a time a somebody somewhere in the motion picture, looking darkly, goes through on his daily, silent round of the Mayfair. A bevy of oil magnates pass.

What ho! With glowing, enthusiastic eyes, brief case laden and hopeful, a new delegation of new code makers for some new industry is arriving from the hinterland, overflowing the lobby. In a week they will know—nothing; but the glow will be gone.

Obviously the motion picture code pot is aboil, just as ever for all the weeks of travail.

The New York newspapers arrive. All the Washington regulars turn to see what's what about McKee—McKee and the administration and what is all this about New York Tammany and the mayoralty.

Over on the shipnews page there's an item they have not seen, and maybe never will. It appears that Joseph P. Kennedy of Boston, along with Mrs. Kennedy and Joseph, Jr., is sailing on the Europa. And on the same ship will be "Jimmy" Roosevelt, son of the President, and his bride. In fact, it is a party.

It is pretty well admitted that Mr. Rosenblatt is going to have to write everything in the code that is not agreed upon that has to be in the code.

Everybody in Washington knows that General Johnson and the NRA have a bear by the tail on the labor issue and sundry matters thereto related and that maybe that makes it no easier for the motion picture in its lesser spot in the very big scene of American industry.

Mostly it seems that when the code is done—if, when and as it is done—it will neatly avoid and eliminate and forget a lot of the controversial issues that the motion picture industry cannot settle and the Administration does not care about, or dare about.

Word comes that once again the leaders who want to can go back to New York for their second "recess," and that Wednesday of next week they can start over. Meanwhile it percolates that if Mr. Rosenblatt can get to it there will be a deal of code writing done before next Wednesday. But also Mr. Rosenblatt has within the next few hours, beginning Wednesday, September 27, to start hearing from radio on another set of the controversial issues that the industry cannot settle and the Administration does not care about, or dare about.

SOMEBODY WILL RULE IF THERE'S TO BE RULE

Weary of so many times of the saying of this and that, the interior inside picture persons begin to speculate about—if, when and as and if there is a code—who will do what about it. To be sure, in the regular order of events, there's supposed to be a committee of control, fifteen, three appointed by the NRA and twelve from the industry. But somebody, presumably with the weight of government in his hand, is after all to rule the show, if it is to be ruled.

Thoughts turn to that ship news item again. This Joseph P. Kennedy of Boston is going a-sailing over the seas with "Jimmy" Roosevelt. He and "Jimmy" are quite friends, it seems. One remembers something about parties in Florida last winter, too.

Here and there there have been wisps of gossip, or maybe they were trial balloons, on Broadway, saying that maybe this Mr. Kennedy was coming into a high governmental post. Up in New England on the big country club circuit, where there is much bridge and tea, long before the NRA was announced, it was being said that "Joe is going to be the administration's big boss of the movies." There was at the same time no little mention of reports of his considerable contributions to the campaign funds of the Democratic National Committee—something like $35,000 was mentioned.

Broadway has been wondering just what "Joe" was going to get—speculating if he was going to get at all.

Then all the motion picture talk subsides. It was said in Washington that Mr. Kennedy was a-gunning for the post that eventually went to Edward N. Hurley, one of the NRA legal aides.

That would have done, but it did not connect.

Back to the motion picture again. There are telephones and couriers between New York, Boston and Washington.

Somewhere it seems to be said that this idea of a post for Mr. Kennedy at the helm of the Administration's administration of the motion picture might not be a bad idea. Assuredly it would settle that campaign obligation. It might serve other purposes here and there.

Not many of the faithful on the lists of astute James Farley could lay claim to, if they had ambition for, motion picture authority and background. If Mr. Kennedy were, after just a manner of speaking, a problem, and if the motion picture were also, in a manner of speaking, also a problem, there might be a notion.

It is to be recalled that Will Hays found places of prominence in motion picture affairs and representation for Mr. Kennedy early in his days with FBO on Broadway, when he came in with the laurels of banking and association with the able Guy C. Currier of Boston some years ago.

Not Necessarily Turning His Back on Washington

Now that Mr. Kennedy is sailing for Europe on the Europa, with "Jimmy" Roosevelt, he is not necessarily turning his back on Broadway and Washington. One is to be reminded of that story of the confused German who had sent his son on an errand of importance, and seeing him in the distance, shouted to his wife: "There goes Heinrich coming back already."

Down the gangplank and once aboard the lugger may be just as ready a route to Washington as the Congressional Limited.

They say that Mr. Rosenblatt tossed over relatively quite a job to go to work for the NRA at $6,000 a year, quite a job on Broadway at twelve or fifteen or maybe eighteen thousand a year—and prospects.

Might he not be in nomination for a post in the bigger ultimate set-up too? He's working hard enough, fast enough, hearing sides enough. He's young but the oldsters are telling him a-plenty. He should presently know quite a bit about the motion picture. He was born about the time the nickelodeon was hatching.

Nothing Given Out; Everything Is Said

A covey of press agents, of reporters, flits across the lobby. Some one has heard from the Maryland foothills. The press agents are going to ask the reporters what is going on. The publicity men of the great war of the codes are working in reverse. They take in a little and give out nothing.

All the sessions are "in camera," but they just call them "closed conferences." Nothing is given out. Everything is said. Verbatim repeats on all the speeches of the secret sessions are made on the floor of the lobby within an hour. It is standard procedure.

Mr. Rosenblatt is going by again. We flag him. "How much of the code is already written—while you let them talk?"

Sternly—"Not a line is written—except I have most of it up here." And he taps a very busy forehead as he tries for a smile. He would like to be happy.

"The right to buy—the right to buy." The phrase keeps going and some are cursing Abram Myers for the invention of a slogan under the guise of an issue.

"What is the right to buy?"

Mr. Rosenblatt smartly refuses to say. "Every one has his idea and it has not been exactly defined."

It is the big issue of the code hearing, in the mind of the exhibitors.

Executives, some of them in fairly high brackets themselves, are not pleased entirely with promises of an attempted limitation of star salaries. The Academy has come in with a brief which says in substance, "Let 'em bid 'em up."

There is more gossip again of what President Roosevelt said about big salaries, what he said, or maybe just what was implied he said about double bills, and what he said about "protecting the little fellow."

"What the President said," related in a delicate manner in last week's MOTION PICTURE HERALD, has by now become the forgotten groundwork for a vast fog of tradition—tradition one week old, almost, from which one can find anything and everything credited to the White House. A lot of it never happened.

The White House is still mindful of the purposes of the National Recovery Act.

Tired, worn and laboring General Johnson of the Blue Eagle office has a picture of industry on his mind.

The White House sees industry clearly enough, and is aware, probably much more than the General, that the motion picture is not just an industry, that it is a voice to the people.

And so on—till Wednesday next, when we meet again.

The Europa is a fast boat, either way you take it.

BULLETIN

Word from Washington late Wednesday night indicated that Sol A. Rosenblatt, NRA deputy administrator, will have a tentative motion picture code, written by him, on Monday.

Fail of Code Solution; To Be Written by Rosenblatt

The motion picture industry is still struggling with a code for the National Recovery Administration.

A week of private conferences in New York and a second meeting with the NRA deputy at Washington over the weekend failed to bring together the various interests which have been locked in argument ever since code drafting activities started early in the summer, over the texture of the trade practices and labor provisions to be inserted in the pact.

Highlights of the week's code developments were:

Sol Rosenblatt, NRA deputy, verified a general impression that he will write the code. After it appeared that film leaders could not adjust any of their differences, Mr. Rosenblatt let it be known that a draft will be written from his own ideas, formulated from the many private and public hearings.

Executives returned to New York further to consider certain controversial clauses, with orders to be back in Washington October 4. It is expected Mr. Rosenblatt then will have ready his tentative draft.

NRA will insist that the right to buy must prevail; also that the industry should scale downward Hollywood's top salaries.

Highly contested issues—right to buy, labor, score charges, doubles, block booking, et al—remain unchanged either as to basic demands or code phraseology. NRA will determine where rights of buyer and rights of seller commence with regards to these and other points.

Adjudication of disputes over workings of an accepted draft, and its administration, probably will be placed in the hands of local zoning boards of exhibitors and distributors.

Resuming their Washington conferences on Saturday, following a week of private discussions in New York and the general public hearings of two weeks ago, representative producers, distributors and exhibitors, also leaders of labor, struggled through the weekend and until Tuesday morning, on code clauses. Mr. Rosenblatt hustled from one committee room to another, advising, ordering, listening.

By Tuesday it appeared that efforts of the various interests to adjust their differences were deadlocked, and Mr. Rosenblatt called a temporary halt, instructing the three groups, and labor, to be on hand next Wednesday.

NRA Will Decide "Vexatious Points"

Meanwhile, Mr. Rosenblatt was preparing to delve into the individual proposals with a view to corelating these efforts into one draft. At first the deputy had intended retaining a skeleton committee from each branch, but this idea was abandoned, which was considered quite significant of his intention to write a tentative draft on his own.

The Rosenblatt version of a code will be submitted to the industry groups for study and additional argument. But arguing will not be permitted to run on indefinitely, nor will Mr. Rosenblatt allow endless discussions. His viewpoints were gathered during the many private and public discussions.

Before returning to New York for further conferences on certain of the disputed clauses, Mr. Rosenblatt is said to have brought the right-to-buy

INDEPENDENT PRODUCERS FACING FIGHT OVER MUSIC COPYRIGHT TAX

Several Negatives Attached by Publishers' Association in Move to Break Up Three Years of Violations; Fines Threatened

Independent motion picture producers are to be made the target of stringent action for violations of music copyrights by the Music Publishers' Protective Association. For three years, the publishers claim, the small independents have used music illegally, without permission of the owners, and a great deal of it has been so restricted as to usage that even had permission been asked, licenses probably could not have been issued.

A concerted drive already is under way, the association announced this week, and those small companies will be made to conform to certain very definite requirements, as well as to pay fines for past violations. Further than this, the cooperation of state censorship boards in seeking out offenders will be asked.

"Trying to get away with something" has been a standing policy with some of the offenders, Harry Fox, of the Publishers' Association, said Monday, and losses in royalties to song-writers and publishers have amounted to many thousands of dollars annually.

Several Negatives Attached

"For three years we have been having difficulties with the small companies," Mr. Fox said. "They have been regularly using music in their films and probably figuring that they would pay on the basis of some sort of settlement when their violations were discovered. As a result, we have been forced to attach several negatives within the past few months, and until such time as we are able to obtain the aid of state censorship boards we will have to continue doing this."

In last week's HERALD it was reported that the MPPA has submitted a new contract form to producers which eliminates the previously used seat tax payment for music recording privileges. This is to be superseded by a flat tax for the three types of music used: visual and vocal; visual and instrumental, and background. Charges for these are, respectively, $150, $100 and $50, and have been charged to major and independent producers alike.

"Furthermore," said Mr. Fox, "the small companions would have been entitled to these rates all along, since the seat tax passed out, if they had been willing to 'play ball' with us.

"The association recently attached a certain negative. The producers had claimed that all music negotiations had been cleared, but the distributors found there was over $3,300 worth of unlicensed music in it."

According to Mr. Fox the producers of short subjects are the most flagrant violators of music copyrights, and travel pictures, with musical backgrounds for the countries they represent, are the worst of all.

"Without consulting anyone they dig up all kinds of music and inject it into their sound tracks," Mr. Fox said.

"The ridiculous part of it is that they are hurting themselves fully as much as they do the music publishers. For instance, there was a case recently in which a travel subject producer wanted some Spanish music for a background. He got hold of 'The Peanut Vendor' and put just enough of it into the film to make it recognizable. If he had used his head, come to us and consulted the catalogues, he might quite possibly have used a piece of Spanish music for which he would have had to pay no fee."

Say Most of 200 Films Are Violators

A West Coast representative of the MPPA estimated recently that most of the 200 independent features and short subjects in production contain music for which no licenses have been issued.

"The sooner the small companies realize that they have got to deal honestly with us the better it will be for all concerned," Mr. Fox declared.

The chief difficulty the association leaders have encountered the past three years has been the tracing of small company product in the field and for this reason they propose to go before boards of censorship in each state and ask that reports be made to them on every independent picture containing music. The censor boards will be asked to obtain cue-sheets from the companies of all pictures released.

Injunction Another Weapon

Under a law passed in 1909 which prohibits anyone from making a mechanical reproduction of a copyrighted musical score without a license, the music publishers, through their protective association, have authority to ask official intervention.

In the meantime the association will continue its fight against all such infringements by attachment of negatives now in the hands of distributors, through injunctions and eventually, they hope, with the aid of the censors.

"An even more flagrant violation than that of simply using music without license has been in instances where the producers have arranged to pay license fees out of their grosses and then failed to live up to their agreements," Mr. Fox said.

He pointed out that it constitutes a violation of copyright if only four bars of a certain piece of music are used in a film—provided, of course, that those four bars are enough for recognition. Major producers maintain special music departments, he said, whose duty it is to see that no violations are entailed. On the other hand, he added, it is not necessary for the smaller companies to go to this expense, if they deal squarely with the music publishers. He declared directors and players should be warned not to inject any parts of any tunes into pictures without previously checking them as to copyright, even to the spoken line of a song title.

SALES BEST EVER TO DATE: UNIVERSAL

Universal Pictures let it be known on Wednesday that its film sales are further advanced than ever before at this period of the selling season.

James R. Grainger, sales executive, left New York Tuesday on a three-weeks sales trip which will take him to the Coast, stopping off at key centers to "iron out" the few remaining difficult situations. While in Hollywood, Mr. Grainger will spend a week in conference with Carl Laemmle, Jr., on production matters.

Universal said that, with but few exceptions, every important circuit and every key point has contracted for its features and shorts, including the newsreel.

Columbia Finishes Foreign Expansion

Columbia Pictures, with the arrival of J. H. Seidelman, foreign manager, from a six-weeks' stay abroad, has announced the completion of its European distribution expansion plans. Nine exchanges are now operating in the United Kingdom, with branch managers appointed, headed by Max Thorpe, who will work as general sales manager under Joe Friedman, European manager. Hannah Kass will act as Mr. Friedman's executive assistant. Jack Cohn, vice president, also announced the establishment of new distributing facilities in Spain, Denmark and France.

The nine new exchanges in Great Britain and their managers are: London, A. Kutner; Manchester, G. M. Gill; Liverpool, A. S. Barber; Cardiff, W. E. Dovey; Birmingham, H. P. Jones; Newcastle, D. Fish; Leeds, A. Braithwaite; Dublin, T. Hanlon; Glasgow, R. Booth. John O. Neilson is supervising the Copenhagen office. The office in France has been reorganized.

Elliott Stops Coast Suit

Immediate calling off of the $39,000,000 suit filed by the I. A. T. S. E. local in Hollywood recently against all major producers and the IBEW, and Producers' Association as a result of the recent strike, was ordered last week by William C. Elliott, I. A. T. S. E. president.

Nichols Audio Sales Head

W. G. Nichols has been appointed sales manager of Audio Productions, Inc., by W. A. Bach, president. George J. Kilgore and A. L. Reinitz have been added to the sales staff under Mr. Nichols.

IT'S "THUNDER" OVER SINCLAIR NOW

Internecine Strife of Radicals Bedims Opening of Eisenstein Film But Inundates Daily Press

[Comment on "Thunder Over Mexico" appeared in "Showmen's Reviews," issue of May 20.]

"Thunder Over Mexico" — Cloudburst Over the Left Wing—or Lightning Over Upton Sinclair—the Sergei M. Eisenstein picture produced by Mr. Sinclair, came to New York last week, the subject of controversy, propaganda and more than slightly "pink" haranguing, all of which brought to the film and to Mr. Sinclair vast stretches of newspaper type.

Charged with "butchering a great work of art," Mr. Sinclair also came to town to face his tormentors at the film's premiere Friday night. Nor was the publicity dimmed by the presence of a score or more of Police Commissioner Bolan's stalwart's who from the rear of the Rialto theatre watched for any signs of disturbance from those who usually confine their discussions of "red" economics to soap-boxes in Columbus Circle or Union Square.

Accused of "Double-Crossing"

The socalled "intelligensia" of the ultra-liberals had accused Mr. Sinclair not only of mutilating the picture but also of double-crossing Eisenstein, duping the Mexican people and wreaking "carnage" in general upon the Russian director's work.

"If those guys (Communists) keep up the fuss about my picture, I may get back the $100,000 negative cost," the author-producer had said in a private interview Friday afternoon. He described the production as "the bastard child of the shot-gun wedding of Hollywood and Moscow, and like most such children, a great deal prettier than either of its parents."

The Communists had set the stage on the preceding Monday. A special preview was held at the New School for Social Research and was attended by artists, students and Communists—mostly Communists. An explanation as to why and how the Eisenstein masterpiece had been cut and edited in Hollywood, instead of by Eisenstein in Moscow or Mexico—something certain ardent upholders of "the cause" had been wanting to know for a long time—was to have been a feature of the preview. But a literary gentleman, one Lincoln Kirstein, the son of a millionaire Boston merchant, interrupted the proceedings and was hustled out of the hall without much ceremony. Mr. Kirstein is editor of the "Hound and Horn," a magazine opposed to Marxism, Socialism, Communism and Upton Sinclair. Mr. Kirstein, however, seeing an opportunity to further his cause, decided to side with Communism for once, and directed a series of charges against Mr. Sinclair in the form of an open letter, to which was appended the following postscript:

To the Reader of This Letter:

Wait until you have heard Mr. and Mrs. Upton Sinclair's famous sob-story about the mortgage of their house "for Eisenstein's sake," their "martyrdom" to Eisenstein, and other round-table tales of persecution. Then communicate for authentic information on the case with the International Defence Committee for Eisenstein's Mexican Film, Room 610 -- 545 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Although Mr. Kirstein had not signed the letter, that he was responsible for it was vouched for by Mr. Sinclair. Then a HERALD reporter went to the given address to get such "authentic information," but those in charge were "out."

Sinclair's Hotel Stormed

The Communists, however, whipped into action by Mr. Kirstein's letter, stormed the doors of the Algonquin hotel with letters, documents and a few personal representations to the Socialist author.

The Kurstein letter had accused him of destroying the conception of Eisenstein's picture, "all for your Sinclair Foundation, for your wife's profits, for your wealthy investors. . . ."

It also had charged that Mr. Sinclair had sold parts of certain bull-fight episodes to Samuel Goldwyn for use in Eddie Cantor's "Kid From Spain." To Mr. Sinclair's oft-repeated defense that "Thunder Over Mexico" had been edited in exact accord with Eisenstein's ideas, the letter declared this was "a lie," and asked about the fate of a number of episodes.

Denies Selling Bull-Fight Episode

At the Rialto showing Mr. Sinclair explained that the reason Eisenstein did not personally cut the picture in this country or Mexico was because he had overstayed his leave of absence from the Soviet studios and the U.S.S.R. had cabled him to "come back" pronto. The novelist-producer denied he had sold certain bull-fight episodes.

"Besides," he said to this interviewer, "Neither Eisenstein nor Eddie Cantor had any labels on their bulls."

On the Rialto platform Mr. Sinclair made it quite clear that he thought Eisenstein had spent too much time, too much money, too much film and too much everything in the making of "Thunder Over Mexico."

And to this interviewer Mr. Sinclair explained his connection with the picture. About three years ago, he said, Eisenstein went to him complaining that his work in Hollywood had been a failure, that he could not return to Russia without having created at least one successful film, and that all he needed was $25,000. He guaranteed it would be non-political and said he would give the entire negative to whosoever sponsored it "just for the privilege of making it."

"Mrs. Sinclair and I went to our friends and raised the necessary money. Eisenstein went off to Mexico and started work. The only trouble was that he fell in love with the country," Mr. Sinclair said. "Once he got started, he couldn't stop, and what was originally intended as a sort of glorified travelogue was expanded into a prologue, three features, and an epilogue, totaling some 280,000 feet. He tried to make a sort of 'Ring of the Nibelung' out of it.

"When he finished, and it was discovered he had to return to Moscow, we attempted negotiations with his government, by which the negative could be sent to Moscow for cutting. These we could not work out, and so, rather than jeopardise the investors' money the next best thing was to have it cut on the Coast."

Cut to 40 Reels and Then—

Accordingly the film was cut to about 40 reels, and Principal Pictures agreed to complete the work and distribute it. The picture took 35 hours to run at this point—and Mr. Sinclair sat through it four times. The principal episode then was selected for distribution, and titled "Thunder Over Mexico," and a prologue and epilogue were provided.

"Then the fur began to fly," said Mr. Sinclair. "We became the immediate target for all kinds of requests and demands. Seymour Stern, a brilliant young man who is a devotee of Eisenstein, said he was the only person except Eisenstein who was capable of cutting the picture. However, he wanted $200 a week for his work and told us it would take at least eight months. Mr. Stern's proposal was rejected. That young man immediately turned around and started spreading propaganda of a most unpleasant sort all over the country."

Kirstein, who had been asked to contribute money for production, started the same thing in the East, according to Mr. Sinclair, and another Eisenstein "cohort," one A. A. Leiva, began whipping the Mexicans into a fury.

"So there we have the situation," Mr. Sinclair said. "The Mexicans think we've made a picture which debases them—but they haven't seen it; the Communists say we have murdered Eisenstein's conception of revolutionary Mexico—there was no such conception in his scenario, which was approved by the Mexican government. And the funny part is that both Kirstein and Stern are rabid anti-Marxians."

Ten detectives from the Radical Squad, escorted Mr. Sinclair to the Rialto. Policemen lined the pavements. Persons carrying parcels or bundles were required to check them in the cloakroom. All of which duly found its way into the columns of the daily press.

But the most violent happenings were some catcalls and "Bronx cheers" directed at both the film and Mr. Sinclair.

Meanwhile, M. Eisenstein is sitting back in Moscow, saying nothing, leaving all the talking to Mr. Sinclair, whose newspaper clippings are piling up.

SIME SILVERMAN'S DEATH CLOSES 28 YEARS AS "VARIETY" PUBLISHER

Editor Dies in Los Angeles; First Wrote Broadway Items for New York American; Launched Own Publication Dec. 16, 1905

To Sime Silverman, who was "Variety," came the end, in Los Angeles, on Rosh Hashonah, the birth of the New Year by the reckoning of the faith and history of his people.

And so the final curtain has fallen on a career that was uniquely of, for and on Broadway, not the thoroughfare which used to be Bloomingdale Road, but that mobile region which made its capital in Fourteenth street and flowed northward through three decades to hover about Times Square, with the while an evolution of the variety show into vaudeville, the fading of the roadshow industry and with the motion picture coming into domination and radio rising to compete. That dapper, bespatted and night clubbing showman, James J. Walker, then mayor, once gayly suggested the district might be called "Sime's Square." For and with these people of that Broadway, steeped in tradition of the three-a-day and "the road," the marginal life of the region in the Forties east and west, starting as the Tenderloin of yesteryear and becoming the theatre and night club belt, Mr. Silverman founded his "Variety" as a weekly publication, twenty-eight years ago.

"Variety" and "Sime" Indivisible

"Variety" was "Sime" and "Sime" was "Variety," an indivisible floration of the soil on which they were nurtured, speaking, writing, breathing the air and argot of their showland.

To the people, the performers and the traders in performers and performances in this Broadway island within the island of Manhattan, "Variety" has been their newspaper, the singer of their sagas, the recorder of their adventures, triumphs and woes, in their own strange beche de mere dialect, a language which took its own where it found it, from backstage to marquee, and from race track to speak-easy and night club up and down the Great White Way and the by-streets along.

The larger world has known of and will remember Sime Silverman and his "Variety" because it has been the sole scriptorium of the language of the clansmen of the footlights and bright lights.

In this generation two persons have come into an order of fame by the force of their manners of dealing with what is loosely called the English language. They are Gertrude Stein of that strange esoteric state of mind called Paris and Sime Silverman, indigenous minnesinger of the state of life, mind and conduct that is called Broadway. Miss Stein's patois is the apogee of self-consciousness, while Sime Silverman's oozed and congealed into form from the air as simply as dew forms on the meadow. It was no analyzed, studiously achieved instrument of narration and communication, like Ring Lardner's astonishing recording of the lowbrow lingo. It was in fact a manner of saying that entirely disregarded the manner of saying.

Conscious recognition of Sime and "Variety" from this larger outside world came a few years ago with an article on the subject appreciatively and sympathetically written by Hugh Kent for Henry L. Mencken's American Mercury. In his published references to the article the editor of "Variety" betrayed no little embarrassment mingled with pride. It was awkward to have been charged with something akin to artful performance.

Confessor, Councillor, Companion

But to the world for which and in which Mr. Silverman lived and worked all such considerations pass as "hooey." It was Sime of "Variety," around the corner in Forty-sixth street, that they knew. To him, sitting there on a rostrum, supervising a roaring, rattling, chattering editorial office, bestrewn with the chaos of hectic, fevered paper making, they went with their boasts of "wowing 'em" in Pittsburgh, their plaints about agents and bookings, their choicely whispered bits about the personal and professional affairs of the other fellow, the "inside" of this and that. In his paper they bought space to boast to their fellows that they were "booked solid on Pan time" and they published "in memoriams" to the tender memory of their dead. To countless troupers and no few of those in higher station in the world of amusement "Sime" was confessor, councilor and companion. His benefactions were many, and secret. In the words of a dedication that Kipling wrote for a volume of Indian tales, Sime might have said:

"I have eaten your bread and salt,
I have drunk your water and wine;
The deaths that you died I have watched beside
And the lives that you led were mine."

For all that, Sime and his "Variety" recorded in knowing ironic measure of the "hot spots," the night clubs and the preposterous play places of his Broadwayland, it was there that he, too, chose to work and play.

Funeral Services Conducted Wednesday Night at Riverside Chapel by Theatrical Associations; Staff Are Pallbearers

Officially Mr. Silverman's home was in Central Park West, but it was more really with "Variety," where up four flights of stairs, above the offices of his paper, he had an apartment that was at once his club, a staff rendezvous, and betimes, when he was so minded, a "hideaway," for contemplation.

Sime was full of enthusiasm for this establishment when it was new.

"We've found a way to beat the night club racket," he remarked at a typical gathering, as the tinkling tray arrived. Young Mr. Morton Downey, a slight sort of figure then, was at the piano crooning and the Duncan sisters were both talking at once about two shows, three contracts and an idea in costumes, while the rest of a roomful of "names" impatiently waited for an opening to seize the spotlight of Sime's attention.

But Sime did not want to beat the Broadway racket. It was the breath of life, the racket and its people. To the same hot spots, the spots where the goofs, suckers, mugs and and the stooges went, he went, too. He saw most of the new acts, and sat at most of the ringside tables in the play places all the way from the Hudson to Massapequa. His favorite toy was a thundering Hispano-Suiza, built to bore holes in the night. He received more confidences than he gave and played a neat hand at getting his way in places where it mattered to him.

In a show world of strutting mimes, Sime did not strut. It was more interesting to look, listen and call the turn. There was a commonly well suppressed philosophy of futilities, with an endless delight in them.

Sime would be much surprised if it were given to him to read the columns of attention that the metropolitan press has been giving him since his passing Friday last.

Came "From the Sticks"

Like mostly every one else on Broadway, Mr. Silverman came "from the sticks." He was born upstate in Cortland on the nineteenth of May, in 1872, the son of George and Rachel. The New York Times records the Variety statement the father was "in the financial business." Sime went to school in Syracuse and learned about troupers and Broadway. He came to New York and got a job writing Broadway items for the New York American, moving on presently to the Morning Telegraph. The Morning Telegraph was the journalistic institution of gay little old New York's sporting fraternity, the Great White Way and all that pertained. The Telegraph was already something of a

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

Mr. Felix Feist, Metro's sales chief, should commend his Kansas City exchange people for the heroic and vital part which they played in saving an exhibitor client's young daughter from becoming a paralytic.

Early one morning last week, O. E. Briles, operating the New Era theatre at Stafford, Kan., frantically phoned Frank Hensler, MGM manager at Kansas City, to rush through some serum for his youngster, who had been seized with an attack of infantile paralysis. Chartering a plane, Mr. Hensler assigned his booker, Joe McGuire, to ride with the serum to Stafford, where half of the town had turned out and formed a circle in a pasture field to indicate a landing place. Needles in hand, doctors were awaiting McGuire at the hospital door. The girl is recovering.

Around Times Square it is agreed that few performances have equalled that of Charles Laughton, Englishman, in "Henry the Eighth," London-made production shown privately last week by United Artists, and commented upon at length in last week's issue.

At about the same time the Astor theatre's sound machine was unreeling this masterpiece of acting, Mr. Laughton was busy in a hotel nearby packing his bags for a return trip to his native heath. After a year with Paramount in Hollywood, Mr. Laughton decided to appear in some Shakespearian pieces in England, at a salary of approximately $100 weekly, plus food. Paramount's Manny Cohen is said to have offered him a fat four-figure check for each week that he would continue working in Hollywood. Mr. Laughton prefers Shakespeare.

Mr. Laughton is only 32; looks much older. He has been in theatricals only six years, becoming an actor in 1927 despite vigorous protestations by a stern English father. Kelcey Allen tells us that Charlie's father "framed" him into getting Hamlet as his first stage part, in order to discourage the lad. But Laughton loved it. He's going back for more.

The appearance of a bit of circus life in Mae West's "I'm No Angel" necessitated some research work by Paramount's people into the history of the magic land of sawdust and spangles. They discovered that President Washington visited Rickett's circus in Philadelphia in 1793, but he saw no elephants, for the first pachyderm did not arrive in this country until three years later.

This behemoth, purchased in Bengal by Captain Crowningshield, first touched American soil at Salem, Mass., in 1796. It amazed the staid New Englanders by demonstrating a fondness for alcohol, and was said to remove corks from bottles with the "finger" end of its trunk, imbibing, in one gusty swallow, an entire jugful of whisky. ("Pre-war" stuff, too.)

Item in Mr. C. F. Zittel's theatrical newspaper, page five, current issue:

Stupidly acted and misdirected with a consistency that indicates genius. . . You've got to be good to be that bad . . . Skolsky (New York columnist) could get a columnful of boners on it if he were out bone hunting . . .

Item on page six, same issue, same paper:

> There is hardly a dull moment in "F. P. 1". . . Conrad Veidt is his usual competent self . . . Jill Esmond does some excellent work, as does Claire Lennartz . . . Mere telling of the story cannot give an idea of the actual excitement it produces. . . . The sets are striking and impressive . . . Photography far better than most British Gaumont films . . . Story is convincingly told with the aid of good direction. It more than satisfies.

Mr. Zittel's boys should get together. They are making "boner-collector" Skolsky's job much too easy.

"What's the big idea," shouted the "super." "Why dontcha bury him?"

"Well, boss," replied the chief grave-digger, "we've been waiting to give him a grave on the aisle."

Nunnally Johnson called Alexander Woollcott's attention to the following paragraph clipped from some unidentified movie magazine:

> A beautiful close-up to Claudette Colbert for her thoughtfulness. When Claudette and her house-guests were about to take a swim, Miss Colbert saw that some birds were enjoying baths in her pool. She insisted that her own swimming party be delayed until the feathery visitors concluded their plunges and preenings.

"Out here," said Mr. Johnson, "we all feel that Miss Colbert did a mighty big thing when she let those little birdykins finish their baths, and in a way it is a kind of answer to those irresponsible people who go running around accusing movie stars of not letting birds finish their baths. A sign of the times is this advertisement in the Times of New York:

> ACTOR, preferably one who can drive truck. Box Y 2091.

THE "world's richest man" now has become one of its poorest. Fourteen years ago Edward J. Meyers, village blacksmith of Bancroft, Neb., called himself the "world's richest man." He gained wide attention when he wrote to a Nebraska editor a letter so filled with homey philosophy and optimism that it later was reprinted the world over. It was read from pulpit and platform, and made the subject of sermon and lecture.

Money never counted with this backwoods blacksmith-philosopher. That wasn't what Meyers meant when he wrote about his "riches." His wealth was a "wonderful little wife, a little home, a beautiful daughter, a son grown to maturity and now in life's game for himself," and last, "a good gun and a good old hunting dog."

Mr. Meyers retained his wealth down through the years. All of it remained intact until one night late in August when the son, Leslie—"grown to maturity and in life's game for himself," as the projectionist at the Columbus theatre, at Columbus, Neb.—left his post after the last show, and disappeared in the darkness.

The next morning his clothes were found on the river bank, but a search of its shallow waters has failed to give up the body.

The blacksmith-philosopher is holding an open mind. He is not ready to accept any of the theories so far advanced—suicide, murder, desertion, amnesia.

We are told that the night following Leslie's disappearance was the first in fifteen years that he missed tending the projection machine at the Columbus theatre.

New Jersey Allied Hears Samuelson On Code Hearings

by A-MIKE VOGEL

The annual eastern regional convention of Allied of New Jersey got under way Monday in Atlantic City at the St. Charles hotel. Sidney E. Samuelson, the unit's president, had to be in Washington because of code matters and Irving Dollinger, secretary, sounded the opening gavel.

The highlight of the first day's session came when Maurice Benn, Philadelphia exhibitor, made an impassioned plea for the banning of double bills. Mr. Benn said he felt double featuring would eliminate short subjects necessary for diversified programs to encourage juvenile patronage. Mr. Benn was followed by Maurice Brown of Sheepshead Bay, L. I., and a West New York exhibitor, who declared duals would soon lead to triple featuring.

Control Boards Discussed

On Tuesday Mr. Samuelson arrived from Washington and immediately launched into discussions of the code and the special hearings.

Considerable discussion developed over proposals for authority to be vested in local control boards to be set up under the NRA code. Other subjects included theatre leases, disclosure of theatre receipts, discontinuance of rebates in the form of two-for-ones, scrip books and service passes. Suggestions were offered on clauses covering the checking system, transfer of ownership to evade contracts and substitutions. Mr. Samuelson planned to take all such submitted suggestions back to Washington the end of the week.

At the banquet Tuesday evening a speaker was A-Mike Vogel, chairman of the Managers' Round Table Club of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, who discussed theatre advertising and exploitation under the NRA.

All officers of the New Jersey association were re-elected for another term and included Sidney E. Samuelson, president; Julius Charnow, I. M. Hirshblond and Harry I. Waxman, vice-presidents; Irving Dollinger, secretary; Frank I. Warren, treasurer; J. Unger, assistant secretary; L. Gerofsky and W. D. Hunt, assistant treasurers.

SOAP AND STARS AD COMBINATION

The woman who sees the photograph of a film star in a soap advertisement in a newspaper usually is impressed, according to "Advertising Age." If she sees the same actress in a film immediately thereafter, she is likely to buy the soap credited with creating the beautiful complexion, the business paper says.

This appears to be the theory of Lever Brothers, soap manufacturers, who in their newest tieup with motion pictures in behalf of Lux Toilet soap are going after film star endorsements "in a big way." The most recent example of this type of advertising was a tieup with "Lady for a Day," featuring Glenda Farrell. Advertising copy read, "I longed to know the secret of Glenda Farrell's charm," and the copy went on to relate the usual romance story of the girl "who finally won her man after using Lux for three days."

Fox Signs White To Do "Scandals"

George White, well-known Broadway producer of George White's "Scandals," has been signed by Fox Film to produce and direct an annual edition of his "Scandals" for the screen for five years. The first will go into production at the Fox Coast studio November 1, and is expected to be ready for release early in 1934.

Sidney R. Kent, Fox president, in announcing the contracting of Mr. White, indicated the producer would have the entire resources of the studio at his disposal and would be given free rein in the production of his films. The film versions of the "editions" will be originals and will be written expressly for the screen medium. Mr. White leaves New York for Hollywood shortly to begin preliminary work on the initial production.

Exploitation Booklet for Fox-Educational Shorts

A loose-leaf booklet with exploitation material for Fox and Educational short product has been conceived by Gordon S. White and worked out with Gabe Yorke and Joel Swensen of the Fox advertising department. The first issue, with its 28 pages, has material on Fox Movietone News, the Magic Carpet series, and a number of two-reel productions.

Irene Thirer Goes to Rialto In Charge of Publicity

Irene Thirer, motion picture critic for the Daily News, New York, and credited with originating the "star" rating system, has been placed in charge of publicity for the Rialto theatre by Arthur Mayer. She also will assist in bookings.

Call for Immediate Return of German Players Reported

Though the German consul disclaimed official knowledge, much was made last week in the Los Angeles Times and in the Examiner of a report that the Hitler government of Germany was demanding immediate return to their native land of the German players now engaged in film production in Hollywood, most of whom are under contract.

Dorothea Weick, Paramount player, who scored recently in "Maedchen in Uniform," said: "Before I left Germany I obligated myself, if Paramount chose, to remain in Hollywood for a definite term of five years. That contract would have to be taken into account by any German government agency before it considered requesting my return."

Marlene Dietrich, also a Paramount player, during her three months abroad, never once crossed the boundary into Germany, and she returned to the United States on a French boat, though she had sailed on a German steamer.

Before sailing for New York she was quoted as saying: "I have a long contract in Hollywood and I shall probably never again make films in Germany."

Nazi control of the film industry in Germany had its inception long before it was officially announced by the Hitler government, it was revealed in Kansas City this week by Toby Brenner, owner of downtown theatre property, who recently returned from an extended visit in Germany.

Move Begun Before July 1

Mr. Brenner, who claimed to have gained his information first hand from expelled German film workers, said that before July 1 the government had taken steps to dissociate Jews from film work. As early as May, according to Mr. Brenner, Ufa, largest German producer, had discharged 296 out of 310 Jews employed, while more than half of those dismissed were kept secretly on half-pay by the company, pending a possible relaxation of the stringent regulations.

Numerous German directors of highest rank are reported to have migrated to the French Hollywood, notable among them Eric Pommer, producing for Fox at the Joinville studios, near Paris. Approximately 5,000 German players are listed as unemployed. Actors and actresses under contract to "legitimate" producers, according to Nazi regulation, are not permitted to work in a motion picture studio or to engage in radio work, without a special permit.

Theatre attendance in Germany is reported at a very low ebb.

Charles Chaplin and Max Reinhardt are included in a suggestion by a Nazi propagandist to German "patriots" all over the world to "get" the "enemies of Nazi-dom," according to the New York Daily Mirror. In a document by Dr. Johann Von Leers, titled "Jews Are Looking at You," the comedian is characterized as "this boresome as well as repellant yapping little Jew."

In the statement is the word "unhanged" at the conclusion of each paragraph. Mr. Reinhardt, producer of the famous "Miracle," is designated: "'Professor' Reinhardt (born Jew Goldman): Ruled not long ago as High Priest of the Stage over no less than four Berlin theatres—the Comedy, the Chamber Playhouse, the Theatre of Berlin and the Kurfuerstendamm. None of them thrived under his regime. His worthless and soul-less art was passionately preached to a deluded German people by the Jew press."

BRITISH EXHIBITORS LOOK TO FALL AND GOOD FILMS AFTER HOT SPELL

Exception Is "Cavalcade" With Eight Weeks Business Done in Eight Days; Gaumont-British Steals March on the Trade

by BERNARD CHARMAN
Of London Correspondent Staff

Exhibitors of England are pinning their faith to fall and winter business and the promising product ahead both from Hollywood and London studios, after a prolonged hot spell from July into September that held the box office to spasmodic activity at best.

An exception to the rule is "Cavalcade," which has been coining money quite oblivious of the weather. As this is being written, it has had 23 weeks in the West End here and looks set to run on well into October. Pre-released at several leading holiday resorts it was reported as doing phenomenal business. One exhibitor said the picture did eight weeks' normal business in its first eight days at his theatre.

Gaumont-British Feat

Gaumont-British have just slipped a gag across the trade and deserve a medal. They have completed a production that Wardour Street knew nothing about, and at the same time have destroyed the old-standing belief that British producers were ignorant of exploiting topical incidents.

The film is titled "The Fire Raisers" and deals with a gang who make their money out of fire insurance frauds. Though the film story is said to have been conceived before the news broke, Great Britain was currently intrigued by a criminal case in which a band of crooks came before a judge for carrying out frauds of an identical nature.

In order not to lose any of the remarkable gratuitous publicity that the case awakened, the picture was set for an immediate West End run, its general release following at once.

Legal advice as to the advisability of continuing with the film while the case was before the court was obtained, and it was agreed to submit scenario and all stills taken during shooting to the leading attorney in the case. All the players and studio staff were pledged not to divulge details.

Nothing To It

Wardour Street was startled by announcement that Herr Hitler was about to break into the English exhibiting field, in order to disseminate Nazi propaganda. The story said Hitler had sent an emissary to give a number of circuits the once-over, with a view to buying. Nothing to it, says the trade.

Acrimonious Debate

We are still feeling a bit burnt up over the New York American's panning of Douglas Fairbanks' association with British pictures. [Details of Fairbank's plans appeared in last week's issue.] The American appears to have taken the attitude that Fairbanks has been letting off a lot of hooey about employing his magnificent physique for the job of bodily shifting the center of world production from Hollywood to London.

What Fairbanks actually said, of course, was something very different. He was merely suggesting that the swing of the pendulum probably would become more marked from Hollywood to Europe as the latter continent improved in its production methods.

We over here have got far more sense than to think that the acquisition of one actor is going to bring about the downfall of Hollywood.

The acrimony evidenced between the British and American papers is a much more distressing phase of the matter. It is all so needless, because there is plenty of opportunity for the two big English-speaking countries to work hand in hand.

Advance in Television

A big advance in television is foreshadowed by the latest news from British Broadcasting Corporation.

Already the B. B. C. have, I understand, installed two separate transmitters for televising motion pictures on an experimental wave length of about 7 meters.

Naturally, nobody here anticipates that any system of television which the B. B. C. may be using will affect the kinemas for a very long time ahead.

Columbia announce with a boom of the drum their arrangements to inaugurate the new era in which they emerge as distributors in their own right in the British market.

"Lady for a Day" is to be the subject of their first presentation here, and instead of trade showing it in the normal manner, they have gone to elaborate preparations for a grand dinner and dance at the Dorchester hotel, at which the picture will be screened.

Hollywood Personalities Abroad

Quite a number of Hollywood personalities floating around London in the last few days. In a week we have had Raquel Torres and Greta Nissen, B. P. Schulberg with Sylvia Sidney, H. B. Warner and James A. Fitzpatrick.

"Dinner at Eight" in London

"Dinner at Eight" had a great send-off in the West End a week ago. Its premiere at the Palace theatre was a gala occasion for London, and was staged on a scale to which this little town is not accustomed. All the "bigwigs" from every part of society were in the audience, and there was quite a sprinkling of notables from the film business. The theatre was decorated on a most lavish scale, and the searchlights outside made the whole place look very bright and gay.

Wallace Beery ended up his London "holiday" by appearing in person, and was subsequently mobbed by the enthusiastic crowds as no star has ever been mobbed in England.

Creditors File Bankrupt Claims

The filing of claims in Kansas City against Fox Rocky Mountain Theatre Company, adjudged a bankrupt last March, was completed last week before Referee Fred S. Hudson. The six-month period in which claims may be filed having expired, no further claims, other than for taxes, will be accepted.

The largest single creditor is Fox West Coast, holding company for the bankrupt, with a claim of $6,333,066.34. Another claim, in behalf of Herbert M. Woolf and M. B. Shanberg, was for $486,927.79, plus interest.

Among other major claims are: Chase National Bank, $701,182; Fox Film Corporation, $3,263.47; Grand Opera Company, $510,000; Grand Opera Company, $28,333.28; Murphysboro Opera Company, $510,000; Paramount Pictures Distributing Company, $6,233.93; Publix-Nebraska, Inc., $6,155.09; National Theatre Supply Company, $2,854.90; MGM Distributing Company, $868.56; RKO Distributing Corporation, $572.11.

Keith-Albee Loss Equal to $355,695

Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation and subsidiary companies have reported a net loss of $355,695.33 for the six months ended June 30, 1933. The net loss for the first quarter equaled $76,742.74 and for the second quarter was $278,952.59. The first quarter loss includes net loss of Orpheum Circuit, Inc., and its subsidiaries, amounting to $124,836.16 from January 1, 1933, to January 27, 1933. Orpheum Circuit was adjudged a bankrupt on the latter date.

The profit from operations during the six months period was $289,662.80, the figures for the first and second quarters being $274,280.03 and $15,382.77, respectively. Depreciation and amortization for the two quarters were $351,022.77 and $294,335.36, respectively.

Ontario Allied Exhibitors Elect Gordon Fillman

Gordon Fillman of London, Ont., is the new president of Allied Exhibitors of Ontario, elected at the annual meeting at Toronto last week. Harry Alexander of the Park theatre is first vice-president; M. Gebertig, Blue Bell theatre, second vice-president; William Brady of the Madison, secretary-treasurer; H. B. Wells, assistant treasurer. All are of Toronto. Oscar R. Hanson was re-elected general manager.

Free admission to the unemployed was voted by the independent exhibitors for the next five months in cooperation with the Citizens' Friendship League, of which Colonel John A. Cooper is president.

ZONE CONTROL BOARDS DISCUSSED

issue to a head when he told the producer-distributor executives that the NRA will insist that this right must prevail; also that they must prepare to "put their house in order" by reducing excessive star salaries in Hollywood. And, if both points are not accepted, the NRA will write a formula providing for both, according to Mr. Rosenblatt.

"Vexatious points"—including the right to buy, block booking, labor, double features, score charges, protection, and others—especially with regard to the rights of buyer and seller, will be determined by the NRA, said the deputy.

Asked before adjournment of this week's Washington conference whether or not the code had been written, Mr. Rosenblatt replied: "Considerable progress has been made even if some of them don't know it."

May Eliminate Some Clauses

He indicated that some of the clauses may not be found in the final code, but would not reveal the nature of those which he had in mind for possible elimination. It is assumed that they have to do with controversial subjects. Such clauses, however, if not a definite part of the code, might be handled by local committees which will be appointed later to supervise the code machinery.

Meanwhile, not a single point of issue has been settled, either between labor and exhibitors or between exhibitors and distributors. The producers' code clauses 9 and 10 will be discussed by this group in New York and revisions forwarded to Mr. Rosenblatt in a few days. These deal with a ban on "star raiding" and relations between studios and agents.

It appeared that producers, distributors and exhibitors within the next few days will designate individual skeleton committees to go back to Washington next week, permitting the majority group of each field to return to their regular business. Distributors already have named Sidney R. Kent, B. B. Kahane, George Schaefer, R. H. Cochrane, E. A. Schiller and Harold Bareford, Warner attorney.

Almost equally as important as the contents of the code itself is the manner in which it will be administered. Wide and almost unlimited powers to local zoning boards, with complete judicial authority, to pass upon disputes and code violations, in all probability will constitute the method by which Mr. Rosenblatt will endeavor to satisfy all elements in the motion picture industry.

Distributors Said To Favor Local Boards

Mr. Rosenblatt is understood to have stressed this point several times in exhibitor committee meetings, and while he has made no definite ruling, the majority of exhibitor representatives are of the opinion that this is the course which will be followed.

The deputy administrator said Tuesday that this problem will be dealt with before the industry's return to Washington on Wednesday next.

Distributors are said to be fully in favor of a local zoning board code authority and reputedly are attempting to tie in such activity under the code with the Film Boards of Trade. Existing machinery, such as the Film Boards, will be better suited for the work of enforcement and administration than any new boards which might be set up, the distributors probably will claim in presenting their ideas to Mr. Rosenblatt.

Mr. Rosenblatt has been receiving communications from exhibitors in the western section of the country asking that members of the code authority be appointed by the Administration in order to prevent "political" campaigns.

Allied has been arguing for boards to include eight members, two for first runs, two for distributors and four for subsequent runs, but first run representatives have objected to this on the ground they could be out-voted on any dispute.

Right to Buy Films Still a Main Issue

It is known that Mr. Rosenblatt favors the local zoning board arrangement as it automatically would keep disputes localized and act as a clearing house for all complaints.

Every organized group represented in Washington during the past three weeks has been fighting for some sort of representation in the "supreme" code authority—the academy, labor, affiliated theatres, major producers and distributors, independent producers, theatres and distributors. Who ultimately will have a voice in the proceedings still is a matter of much speculation.

Continuing this week to be one of the biggest points of issue, of prime importance to the entire industry, is right to buy film in an open and unrestricted market. The National Recovery Administration, it was understood Tuesday, will insist upon the inclusion of this privilege in the final code for the industry, and exhibitors who have fought hard and vigorously for this system will, if the proposal is adopted, be presented with an open market for the first time in many years. What result this will have on the industry generally is impossible to determine at this time, but large distributors are unanimous in the opinion that they cannot operate on an economically sound basis when, as and if all exhibitors, from the smallest subsequent run house to the de luxe first-run, are allowed to bid for film in an open market at the same time.

Regardless, however, of the NRA's intention to uphold this point, it is understood that exhibitor representatives themselves have been unable to determine upon an exact definition of what the term really means and how the system could be worked out. Nineteen different interpretations were voiced at the exhibitor committee meeting Monday.

Some of the many interests who advanced their equally varied theories maintained, for example, that the type of theatre involved is the vital point in determining this issue. Others believed that all runs should be on a day and date basis, thereby literally throwing the market "wide open" and permitting all exhibitors who meet distributor terms to play any given picture at the same time. On the other hand, E. A. Schiller, of Loew's, pointed out that a distributor of necessity would experience considerable difficulty in determining his buyer if a 200, a 700 and a 2,000-seat theatre all bid for the same picture.

Asks Circuit Buying Power Be Barred

Mitchell Klupt, attorney for the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors Code Protective Committee, started an argument which lasted more than three hours when he declared that circuit buying power, as such, should be barred under any and all circumstances, and that in any case where pictures are licensed in bulk, or for a number of chain theatres operating in a number of competitive areas, the total purchase price of such a bulk license should be fairly allocated to the several competitive areas for the purpose of determining the proportionate price or rental of such pictures which are to be used in a particular theatre.

Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, immediately attacked Mr. Klupt's proposal, saying that any clause which is adopted on the right to buy must be in phraseology understandable to every exhibitor and must be in direct opposition to the Klupt clause, which would allow simultaneous playing of a picture in three theatres in one situation. If exhibitors knew what would happen under this clause they would descend upon Washington in a protesting mob."

Star salaries also came in for their share of denunciation, but at the hands of the NRA, which insists upon reductions of those financial remunerations which it considers "excessive and wasteful." The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, however, is reported bitterly opposed to any such mass paring proceedings.

In a lengthy brief, subscribed to by all chairmen of the various Academy branches, and submitted through Lester Cowan, secretary, the Academy declared for freedom of open bidding for personal services, a practice which long has been recognized as one which automatically serves to "jump" a player's salary allegedly far beyond his actual box-office value. The brief was submitted late Tuesday after reports, subsequently denied by Mr. Rosenblatt, to the effect that the NRA intended to establish a salary control board. It stated that the value of the "unique, personal services" which go into

PUBLIC TO DECIDE CODE PRICE-FIXING

Public reaction is to decide whether the principle of price-fixing is to be included in codes other than basic industries such as coal and oil, it is understood in Washington. The retail trade and drug store codes are the trial horses, NRA Deputy Administrator Whiteside having made public the code texts before submission to General Johnson.

Mr. Whiteside contends adding a fixed percentage to wholesale costs as a standard for retail sales is not price-fixing. Opposition to the plan is understood led by Professor O. W. M. Sprague, economic adviser to the Treasury Department, while many prominent business leaders are supporting the plan.

"RIGHT TO BUY" STILL A LEADING ISSUE

Screen and Stage Set NRA Rally

The drive in support of the NRA by the newly constituted National Stage and Screen Legion, headed by Harry Schulman, chairman, will get under way in New York on Friday of this week with a rally in Times Square, and will be concluded the last week in November with a national stage and screen week during which every motion picture, vaudeville and legitimate theatre in the country will show pictures or present speakers urging support of the NRA. Radio entertainers are expected to do likewise over the air this week as well as during the final drive.

Two large torchlight parades are scheduled, one for Broadway the last week in October, the other in Hollywood the first week in November, in both of which stage and screen celebrities will participate. The Times Square rally, postponed a day because of the death of Sime Silverman, is to be the first of a series of bi-weekly gatherings on Broadway and in every city of the country of more than 50,000 population. A speakers' platform, decorated to resemble a stage, has been erected in Times Square opposite the Palace theatre.

Ring Lardner Dies; He Wrote 'Elmer'

Ring Lardner, playwright, author and sports writer, died of heart disease Monday at his home in East Hampton, L. I. He was 48. Best known for his baseball stories and plays, Mr. Lardner was also known to motion picture goers for his "June Moon" and "Elmer the Great," both produced by Warner-First National.

Born in Niles, Mich., he started his career early as a sports writer and was an avid follower of baseball. As a young man he once said he had three "great ambitions." First was a desire to see all the baseball he possibly could, the second, to write stories for magazines, and the third to have a play produced.

Among his best-known stories, books and articles were: "You Know Me, Al," 1915; "Gullible's Travels," 1917; "Own Your Own Home," 1917; "Treat 'Em Rough," 1918; "My Four Weeks in France," 1918, and "The Young Immigrants," 1919, and later, "Symptoms of Being 25," "The Big Town," "How to Write Short Stories," "What of It?" "The Love Nest," "The Story of a Wonder Man," and "Round Up."

For years he wrote sketches for the Ziegfeld Follies and his "June Moon" and "Elmer the Great" were legitimate stage plays.

Radio Code Hearing Held

With little of a controversial nature involved, the code for the radio broadcasting industry was discussed at a public hearing Wednesday in Washington before Deputy Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt. The code is now in the process of negotiation on the few points over which there were differences of opinion.

TURDAY'S
ILLIONS

With ROBERT YOUNG, LEILA HYAMS, Johnny Mack Brown, Andy Devine, Lucille Lund (the All-American Girl), Mary Carlisle, Grant Mitchell and All-America Football Stars. Story by Lucian Cary. Produced by Carl Laemmle, Jr. Directed by Edward Sedgwick. Production arranged by Christy Walsh. Presented by Carl Laemmle.

UNION OPERATING METHODS ARGUED

production cannot be determined by the revenue derived from their pictures because the pictures are sold in groups along with others of varying talent value. It goes on to say that so long as pictures are sold in blocks there cannot possibly be an accurate estimate of an individual picture's worth and, consequently, the value of an artist's services cannot be accurately determined.

Studio Payroll Up To Normal of 30,000

Nearly 30,000 men and women are now on studio payrolls, the studios reported this week, bringing the industry's production employment up to normal for the first time in three years. Forty-eight features are in work, with plans to get 67 new features under way within the next 30 days.

B. B. Kahane, president of Radio Pictures, and official spokesman for the studios at the code hearings, said that a plan has been worked out between a committee of extras and the Academy, with approval of major studios, whereby extras are to be re-registered. He said this will go a long way toward settlement of that problem, in regard to both wages and working conditions. There are thousands in Hollywood at present who place themselves in extras' ranks, when, as a matter of fact, they do not belong there, Mr. Kahane said. Through re-registration it would be possible to segregate extras recognized as such through prior employment and they would be given preference at all times.

The labor unions were still causing considerable difficulty this week, particularly insofar as their code proposals affect the exhibitor. The International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees refused to budge from its previous stand that theatres should be compelled to employ one man for each projection machine.

On Monday the exhibitor committee, headed by Jack Miller of Chicago, flung down the gauntlet and demanded a 44-hour week for operators, as against the 36-hour demand of the IATSE; the per-hour wage scale in effect July 1, 1933, where contracts existed between theatres and the union, or the 40 cents per hour minimum specified for mechanical workers in the federal blanket code where no contracts exist, and a ban on strikes until the National Labor Board settles any disputes which may arise. These demands constituted their final say in the matter, the committee stated, and it was said that Mr. Miller told Deputy Administrator Rosenblatt that if he or labor did not approve of the terms, the Administration could write its own.

It was understood Tuesday that the IATSE might "reconsider" its demand and that a considerable amount of disagreement over this question was noted in the ranks of the union itself.

Method of Operation of Unions Discussed

One of the most important topics of Monday's committee meetings, however, was not the question of labor conditions, wages or hours. Something which may have a more far-reaching effect than any of these was broached and caused no little excitement, both on the part of exhibitors and Mr. Rosenblatt. This was the subject of the "method of operation" of these theatrical unions. Coming on the heels of the sensational charges made at the public hearings by Robert Wilby, of Valatenga Theatres, Atlanta, that labor unions were operating under a regime of intimidation, dynamiting and stench bombing, the committee presented factual evidence to the deputy administrator that such conditions do exist and are being carried on quite openly throughout the country.

Of special interest in the Wilby case, was a recent editorial from the Chicago Tribune, which said, among other things: "Moving picture exhibitors are particularly vulnerable to criminal attack because their patrons can easily be frightened away by bombing and other acts of violence. . . . Nothing really adequate can be said of such a situation permitted to exist in control of the most popular amusement offered in town. . . ."

This editorial was brought on by a series of criminal actions involving theatrical labor union locals in Chicago, in which several operators had been beaten and one killed.

Pat Casey, labor contact for the major producers, declared Sunday that there has been no change in the attitude of the producers toward cameramen's demands for limitations on hours and replacement by others while production is in work. Mr. Casey indicated that the producers will not grant this concession.

It also was understood that a 40-hour week including rehearsal periods, for performers working in vaudeville and presentation picture houses, would be a definite part of the final film code.

Mr. Rosenblatt, in reply to a direct question Sunday, said that increased overhead in all industry branches under the NRA appears to be more than probable, and the film industry's overhead will go up along the same lines as that of other industries. He also said that increased buying power will reflect itself proportionately.

The double feature situation again was discussed by both sides this week. In Washington agitation for local voting on the dual question resulted in the statement of Jacob Schechter, counsel, that independent distributors will go to the courts, if necessary, to test the legality of any restrictions imposed upon twin bills.

Special Hearing For Independents

Mr. Rosenblatt, however, put a temporary halt to the fears of any and all parties with the announcement that before any final decision is made on this subject a special hearing will be held for independent distributors to state their cases. On the other hand, it was understood that Mr. Rosenblatt had conveyed the information to exhibitor representatives Monday that major distributors would be entirely satisfied with a code which entirely eliminates any mention of double features in any way whatsoever. Earlier in the week various interests had proposed leaving decision in any locality to 75 per cent vote of active affiliated theatres and 75 per cent of active independent theatres. Independent distributor leaders, protesting this proposal, threatened to walk out of the proceedings, and it was then that Mr. Rosenblatt announced the special session.

Final decision on premiums has not yet been made, although the matter had been thoroughly discussed with manufacturers of china and pottery who supply theatres. Proposals were made Sunday which would ban premiums by a 75 per cent majority vote of active affiliated and active independent theatres in a situation. This plan may be adopted, Mr. Rosenblatt indicated.

The MPTOA will continue its fight for elimination of score charges in spite of the unofficial attitude of the Consumers' Advisory Board that score charges are not a matter of public policy but of price between buyer and seller. Independent exhibitors are standing solidly with the MPTOA on this point.

Seek Reconciliation on Agents and "Raiding"

While producers had not as yet been able to come to an agreement on their clauses relating to agents and star raiding, efforts to reconcile the various groups on agency restrictions under Article 9 of the proposed producers' code were continued Tuesday under the chairmanship of B. B. Kahane, and the results were described by him late Tuesday as "satisfactory."

Overseating is going to be effectively disposed of, it was understood this week, with exhibitor committeemen inquiring as to the amount of protection which would be afforded established theatre operators against new construction in situations already overseated. The exhibitors also inquired about the reopening of darkened theatres in such localities by new interests entering the business. Just what steps will be taken along these lines has not been determined, but it was understood that Mr. Rosenblatt will take up the matter as soon as public hearings on the radio code have been disposed of.

Arthur Lee Warns On Restrictions

Warning to American distributors and exhibitors that any attempt to restrict the importation of pictures made abroad might result in "serious retaliatory measures" was sounded Wednesday by Arthur A. Lee, executive vice-president of Gaumont-British Picture Corporation of America. Such restriction was suggested in the proposed code for the industry at the NRA hearings in New York and Washington.

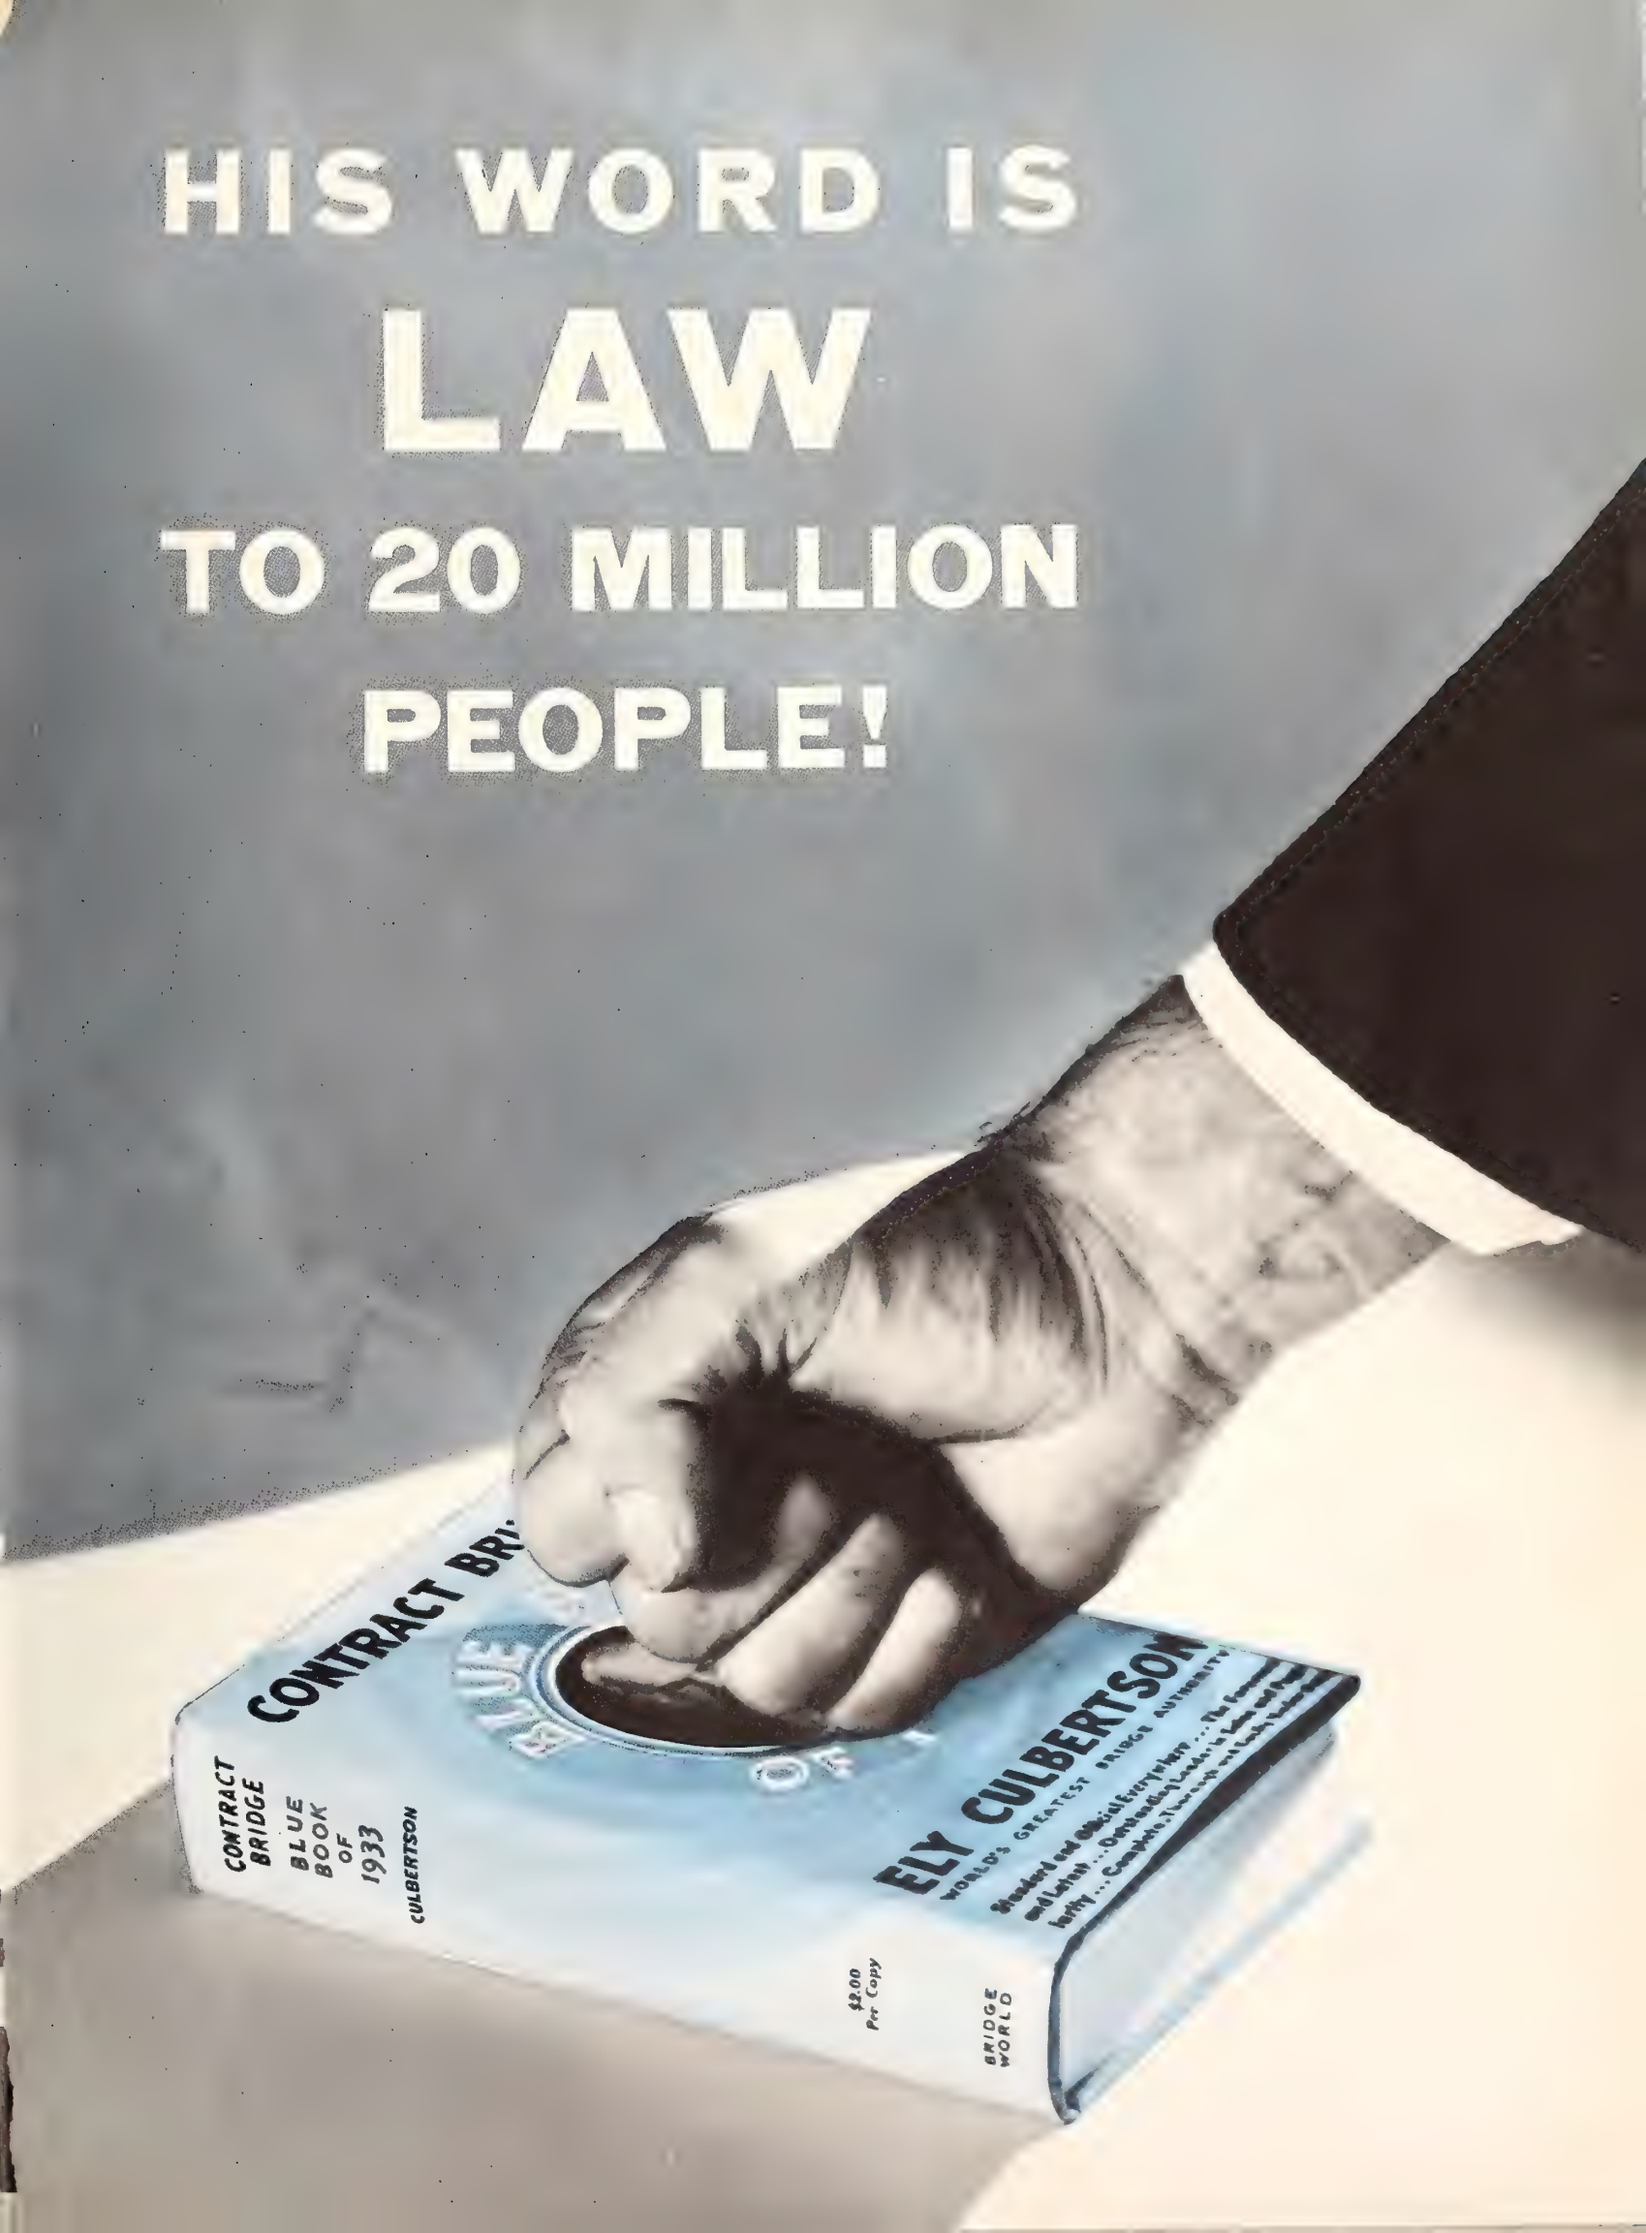
"American distributors receive from 20 to 30 per cent of their gross from the British Empire alone, and any attempt to throttle the distribution in this country of British films would be viewed with a degree of disfavor which might imperil American distribution in Empire countries," Mr. Lee declared. Other nations, he said, probably would "feel the same way about it," and take retaliatory steps.

"Gaumont-British is one of the biggest users of American pictures in England in its circuit of more than 400 houses, and feels that in return its pictures of merit are entitled to fair consideration by American distributors and exhibitors," he continued. "If steps of retaliation were taken abroad, the resultant drop in distribution grosses would be reflected in higher film rentals for theatre owners in this country."

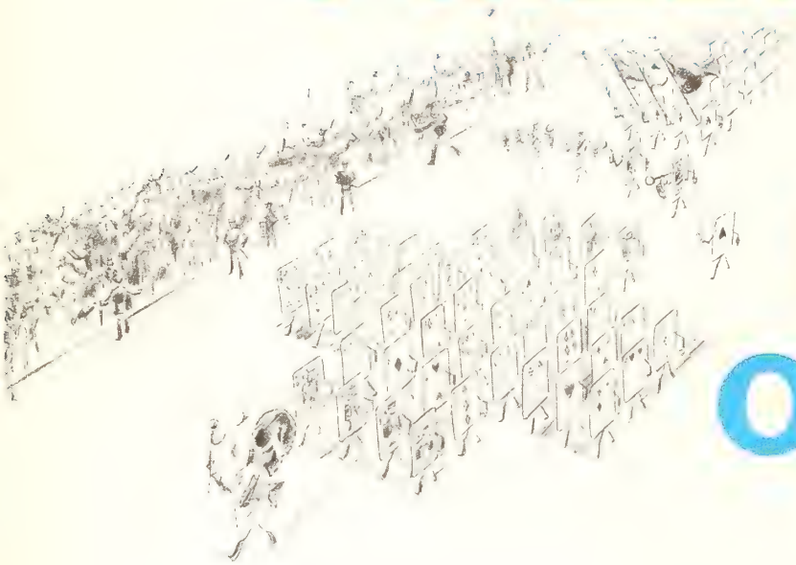
Heiman, Former President, Orpheum Bankruptcy Trustee

Marcus Heiman, former president of the Orpheum Circuit, has been named trustee in bankruptcy for Orpheum, succeeding the Irving Trust Company, New York, which resigned the post this week. Conflicting interests resulting from the coincident trusteeship of RKO and Orpheum caused the resignation, it was understood..

HIS WORD IS LAW TO 20 MILLION PEOPLE!



I MEET BARNUM WITH A DECK OF CARDS!



I have just met a man who could have given P. T. Barnum aces and kings and still have beaten him at his own racket!

We folks in show business are inclined to think we have a first mortgage on showmanship and it's a great surprise to us to run up against someone else who can twist the tail of the great God Ballyhoo and make it sit up and do tricks.

Ely Culbertson whose card plays are as thrilling as Babe Ruth's home runs.

Before calling upon Ely Culbertson I expected to find a professor of Mathematics. Instead, I found a man who thinks in newspaper headlines, knows mass psychology as we showmen think we know it, who took a game of cards and built it into a fabulous industry, who gets more fan mail and has more followers than the greatest of movie stars and who has made his word into law for twenty million people.

Culbertson had just returned from Europe after winning the International Bridge Championship played in London for the Charles M. Schwab Cup. Every day during the tournament the front pages of American newspapers had carried the returns, like box-scores for the World Series. It was hot news! . . . just as hot to more people than the outcome of a heavyweight championship. During the tournament there were two short-wave broadcasts from London picked up and rebroadcast over the great NBC red network. It was hot news for Radio and its millions of tuners-in. In addition, almost 400 newspapers throughout the country were running the cabled syndicate articles of Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson while the 600,000 pupils of the 4,000 Culbertson licensed teachers formed the greatest cheering section any sports event ever had.

On Mr. Culbertson's desk were photographs of the scenes at Selfridge's, London's greatest department store, where the match was held. More than 27,000 people paid admission to sit outside a glass enclosure and watch the world's greatest bridge player perform while in the store's auditorium a giant electrical scoreboard recorded every card, play by play. Publicity! . . . yes, publicity on a grand scale, world-wide in scope and front page in results . . . but the touch of showmanship genius lay in the periscopes! Yes, they installed a flock of them, like the World War trench periscopes and rented them out so that the kibitzers in the back rows could look over the heads of those in front and get the thrill of a ringside seat. Surely you saw pictures, hundreds of newspapers published them.

It's amazing what this man can do with the drop of a card. During the Culbertson-Lenz match the whole world was held in suspense for six weeks. Millions, reaching for the milk bottle and the morning paper every day, read that front page story of the evening's play in their pyjamas before glancing at the so-called important headlines of a cock-eyed world.

Culbertson has injected that same showmanship into his series of short features "My Bridge Experiences" which RKO-Radio now has ready. Primarily they are comedies . . . and they're crammed with laughs . . . but you get the same suspense and dramatic kick when Culbertson plays a card as you would watching "Queen Bess" nose in, a 20 to 1 shot in the big Futurity. Whether you're a bridge player or not, you'll be on the edge of your seat when Culbertson makes a three-spot turn handsprings and do the work of a quartet of kings.

When you play these Culbertson pictures, go after them as you would your biggest feature. You're picking your own pocket if you don't . . . for this country has a ready-made audience of twenty million players . . . and to those twenty million Culbertson's word is law! They read him, quote him and they'll pay at the box-office to see him. They form a big chunk of the population you should pull into your theatre . . . and nothing but Culbertson will do it! Bridge is here . . . and there's an old Indiana political maxim that fits the situation, "If you can't lick 'em . . . join 'em".

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 192.—(A) Just what is meant by one part of an electric circuit being "grounded" to another part? (B) Does it necessarily follow that because there is a ground there is current leakage. Explain. (C) Is the neutral of an Edison three-wire system always grounded? Give reason why it is or is not. (D) Explain the action of a true ground, as illustrated in Figure 101 of your Bluebook.

Answer to Question No. 185

Bluebook School Question No. 185 was: (A) Suppose a fuse blows. You install another, which holds all right for, say, an hour, and then blows. There seems to be no ground and no overload. Where would you look for the trouble? (B) What would be the effect of loose or dirty fuse contacts? (C) May a contact that looks clean be unclean and offer considerable resistance? (D) Name one source of overload which supplies visible evidence on incandescent circuits.

Stellegos; D. Holler and D. R. Peters; C. H. Blaum; C. Cummings and T. Kelley; A. L. Berry and Sarecky; L. M. Oglesby and Son.

Concerning Section A, we will listen to our old friend, J. Wentworth, who sets the matter forth thus:

"Under the conditions named in the question I would suspect either a defective fuse, which is unlikely, or mechanical heat set up by poor contact. I would immediately feel each contact of the fuse that let go. If the contact felt normal as to temperature, it certainly must be either a defective fuse or current leakage sufficient to set up overload enough to slowly raise the fuse-wire temperature to the melting point. Probably, however, poor contact would be found to be the seat of trouble."

(B) Regarding this one, H. Cohen and G. C. Cottrel say: "Loose or dirty contacts offer higher resistance to current flow than do clean, tight ones, and since resistance makes itself manifest in the form of heat, it follows that such contact would become heated in proportion to the resistance set up by the dirt or looseness. In few words, the effect of such a condition would be to heat the contact."

(C) Concerning this one, D. Danielson says: "A very thin film of metallic oxide may form on contact surfaces. Such film usually is practically invisible to the eye, but may nevertheless offer considerable resistance to current flow. Contact surfaces must, to offer minimum resistance, be perfectly clean, shiny and smooth."

Our old friends, Evans and Rau, answer Section C after this fashion: "A contact may look clean, yet not be so because of metallic oxidization, which offers considerable resistance. Such oxidization should be cleaned off, preferably with No. 00 sandpaper. A thin, almost invisible coating of oil or grease may also set up resistance to current flow at contacts."

Van Buskirk and Kroll say: "Contacts may look clean to the naked eye, yet be dirty, and would offer considerable resistance. Dirt causes heat and as the heat increases the resistance increases. Here is the law governing this subject. 'The increase or decrease of resistance of metals to electric current is directly proportional to increase or decrease of temperature.'"

(D) W. Ostrum says what almost every one else does, namely: "A voltage rise is a source of overload supplying visible evidence on incandescent circuits because it forces more current through the circuit, thus causing an amperage increase (overload), which makes the lamps burn above candle power. Merely an amperage rise has the same effect."

Shanghai Up-to-Minute In Fire Protection Devices

Motion picture theatres in Shanghai, China, are equipped with the very latest devices for fire protection, according to H. A. Crickman, assistant engineer of the Shanghai Fire Brigade. This is especially true of their projection rooms, Mr. Crickman said in a recent letter to fire protection authorities in New York, in which he made inquiries regarding the port shutter system now being used in the Chinese city.

"Shanghai theatres are using a method which is supposed to be in use in the United States," Mr. Crickman wrote, "running the shutters off one long overhead bar, this bar being operated by a counterweight. Release cords hold the bar in position normally so that the automatic shutters are held up, leaving the apertures open, but if the release is used, the bar rotates due to the counterweight, thus allowing all shutters to close the apertures.

"The release line is run horizontally across the projection room just over the film spool as it is when fitted into the machine and a fusible link is fitted in this line over each film spool."

Mr. Crickman's letter went on to ask whether this system is the latest development in projection room protection and whether it conforms to specifications current in this country.

According to the report of the projection practice committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, as presented at the 1931 Spring meeting in Hollywood, the Shanghai theatres' system is in almost exact accordance. The paragraph in the report dealing with this subject reads as follows:

"Projection port shutters shall be constructed of not less than 16-gauge iron guides built of iron flats, 2 inches wide and ⅛ inch thick, with spacers 1 inch wide and ¼ inch thick for the shutter to slide in. The shutter shall be made of not less than 10-gauge iron, provided with leather bumpers on sill at the bottom to take up the shock when the shutter drops. Each port shutter shall be connected to a master rod by a string and ring attached to a pin on a master rod. The master rod is to be fastened securely to the front wall, approximately 18 inches below the ceiling. It should be provided with a sufficient number of bearings properly aligned to assure smooth operation, connected through pulleys and fusible links located over each projector and capable of being controlled at the exit so that it may instantly be tripped.

"All large openings in addition to the above shall be provided with an individual approved counterweight which will permit the shutters to be easily opened and shall be controlled by the master rod. All observation ports shall be provided with metal guides to receive ¼-inch clear glass, this glass to be at an angle opposite to the projection angle and arranged to be easily removed for clearing."

The Way to Love

(Paramount)

Romantic Comedy

Very much different from the usual Chevalier picture, "The Way to Love," while a combination of comedy and romance, has much of its fun in hokum of the old fashioned slapstick variety. The remainder is the result of dialogue, action and situations. The romance is novel and humanly appealing. The music is just enough to satisfy the Chevalier fans' craving to hear him sing, and though it is directly related to the romantic and light dramatic atmosphere of the show it is of minor consequence. Always there is an animate sparkle that intrigues; light suspense building anti-climaxes stimulate keener interest.

The basic story is simple, yet it has a strong emotional appeal. Character portrayals and the humorous asides are the values to which audiences should really warm. Their sympathies will be evenly divided between the sad-eyed Madeleine, who never knew any happiness, and the happy-go-lucky poet, philosopher, advertising sandwich-man of the sidewalks, Francois, whose greatest ambition is to be a guide and who lives to make others happy. Their romance is tinged with a little menace as her carnival knife-throwing guardian tries to get her back, and made more poignant as Joe tries to win her for himself. These situations develop the dramatic reactions that stir the feelings.

Against that background the laugh-provoking asides are silhouetted. Francois is the walking ballyhoo for the jack-of-all-trades Bibi, who can do anything from taking your photo against any locality in the world to providing artificial coats of tan for chiseling wives. There's lots of fun in those episodes, as there also is in the way Francois talks himself into a job with Agent Chapusard and the hokum that follows when he is selected. More hilarity appears as Bibi celebrates Francois' attaining of his ambition and they make a day of gay carousing, culminating in a cocktail checker game.

The romantic theme returns, occasionally with Rosalie taking the heart out of Madeleine by telling her that Francois is to marry her niece, Anna-Marie, and Francois saving the little dog further to establish his idyllic character. Hokum gets under way again in the tie-snipping episode, reaching its climax in the burlesque slapstick wrestling match between Francois and Wladek. Then the way is made clear for love and happiness.

There's oodles of entertainment value in "The Way to Love." The title is a natural for an interest-stimulating teaser campaign from which all kinds of tricky gags can be developed. Chevalier has proved his box office draw. It should be more potent if you go to unusual efforts to tell them they are going to see him in a much different but just as charming character. Other names, particularly Ann Dvorak (the "Scarface" girl), Horton, Minna Gombell, Blanche Friderici, John Miljan and Arthur Pierson are adequate for marquee and other advertising purposes.

Because of its carnival tone, the show should be exploited with a sideshow atmosphere; a barker, freak lobby exhibits, a knife-thrower, marionette shows, pennants and banners and any other colorful devices of which you can think. Not forgetting Chevalier's own job as a walking ballyhoo, there's the sandwich-man idea. And make your patrons understand that "The Way to Love" is clean, clever, entertainment for the whole family.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Directed by Norman Taurog. An original screen play by Gene Fowler and Benjamin Glazer. Additional dialogue by Claude Binyon and Frank Butler. Music and lyrics by Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin. Photographed by Charles Lang. Running time, to be determined. Tentative release date. October 20, 1933.

Strawberry Roan

(Universal)

Western

No ordinary western, this, but entertainment that should hand any kind of audience a thrill. A wild horse, Strawberry Roan, is the center of interest. Around him is built the action. Humans, of course, contribute the romantic, dramatic, comedy and fine musical atmosphere, but the horse is the one that people will be talking about.

The story is formula; the hero, the heroine and the villain—the comedy relief, wild riding and the expected man to man battle, they're all there in typical western fashion, but the horse atmosphere is gripping. Naturally western fans should eat this show up. But for any exhibitor, anxious to provide his patrons with something really different, "Strawberry Roan" more than fills the need.

Here's what happens: The horse is an outlaw, suspected of driving other animals off the range. Determined to capture him, the Colonel puts a sporting proposition to Big Jim's determination by offering his ranch as a prize to anyone who can break the stallion. Humans really fade from the picture then and the horse grabs the spotlight. There's broncho busting, such as any rodeo might envy. Action is as explosive as untamed nature, and through it runs the romance, drama and villainy, made spectacular by a stampede in which Ken saves Alice.

It's great stuff for kids, wholesome, exciting throughout, and it's an unusual feature for showmen who have the courage to play up something radically different. Stuck up on the marquee as a "Ken Maynard Western," it will do the business of a western, but if concerted effort is exerted to convince your audiences that you have a picture that will thrill them through and through, it should prove unusually profitable.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Suggested by the song, "Strawberry Roan," by Curley Fletcher. Story and dialogue by Nate Gatzert. Directed by Alan James. Photographed by Ted McCord. Running time, 60 minutes. Release date to be determined.

Ann Vickers

(RKO Radio)

Drama

The picture retains much of the Sinclair Lewis novel atmosphere. Quite a bit has been eliminated. Still it is a biographical turning of the pages from one sexy chapter to another in a modern woman's life. Illicit love furnishes the motivating power. It finds Ann Vickers, a wartime settlement-house worker, swept into love with Captain Resnick, to be deserted before her child is born, and, with action suggesting something more sinister, dies. Atwell's proffer of legitimate love and marriage is spurned as a social-service career becomes Ann's fetish. An episode wherein the woman becomes a prison matron, and depicting the harrowing cruelties practiced on rebellious prisoners, is wiped out in a somber frameup. Then, as head of a girls' industrial home, highlighted by interpretations of modern criminal correction, Ann meets and loves the undivorced Judge Dolphin. His wife refuses a divorce. Dolphin is jailed for accepting bribes, another child is born to the unwed mother and she is forced to resign her position.

The anti-climax has Ann dramatically beseeching her old admirer, Atwell, now an influential figure, to obtain a pardon for Dolphin, and being refused. The finale brings in the pardoned (reason not given) Judge, now divorced, ready to marry Ann and make a happy future for their child.

The show is equally vivid, daring and sensational. As such it has definite showmanship values; values, however, that must be treated with the utmost delicacy. Not the least is the Lewis novel, which has been widely read and is consequently familiar to many. But for advertising and publicity purposes the copy trend should establish the show as a searching character drama of a woman who wanted first a worthwhile career, but could not resist the lure and thrill of love beyond sanction.

Irene Dunne plays the part of Ann with force, sincerity and understanding. Her acting, as well as that of others, is a distinctive asset. The little contrasting comedy is typical Edna May Oliver. The men in Ann's life, Cabot, Nagel and Huston, and the other characters move in the spirit of the story. Obviously in pictures of this type, direction becomes exceedingly important and it is notable that despite the many handicaps that surely were recognized, John Cromwell preserved a colorful realism, daringly handled, that is another asset.

The show's field is presumably as an exclusively adult attraction.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Ace of Aces

(RKO Radio)

Exciting

With its war-flier theme, "Ace of Aces" offers little that is new or different. It follows the customary thrill-spectacle motif, with numerous sky fights, and it depends upon personal war reactions to develop the romantic and dramatic accompaniment. Generally it is depressing; the predominant gruesome tone outweighs the meager comedy contrasts. Its greatest appeal undoubtedly will be to war film devotees and Richard Dix fans.

The story concerns Thorne, an idealistic sculptor, shamed into enlisting by his ultra-patriotic fiancee, Nancy. He is afraid to kill, but after forcing down his first Boche plane blood-lust grips him and he becomes a ruthless, almost unsporting killer. With 42 planes to his credit he is the ace of aces, unloved by friend and foe alike.

Meeting Nancy, war-worker, in Paris, the wartime night of love follows. Now the mental attitudes are reversed. Thorne wants to go on killing. Nancy is sick of the misery, blood and muck.

In a hospital, Thorne lies beside his latest victim, a youthful German cadet, shot down by the ace as he was delivering a good-will message. The boy's death is hastened as Thorne makes it possible for him to get a fatal drink. Back on duty, retribution sets in and though offered a soft instruction berth, he solos out to battle a flock of enemy fliers. Endeavoring to become a martyr, he is shot down while his own guns remain silent. The finale has the lovers back home ready to pick up their romance that war interrupted.

Action is made particularly exciting by the fine camera work of Henry Cronjager. Many of the sky and panorama shots add punch to the otherwise depressing story.

Title and star names appear to be the most effective selling mediums. Supplemented by punchy explanatory character copy, they should be pushed to the limit.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by RKO Radio. Executive producer, Merian C. Cooper. Associate producer, Sam Jaffe. Directed by J. Walter Ruben. Screen play by John Monk Saunders, H. W. Hanemann. It's a Boy

(Gaumont-British)

Fine Nonsense

Gaumont has devised this one as a vehicle for Leslie Henson's individual brand of humor, and has attempted at the same time to give a little scope to the veteran mirthmaker, Edward Everett Horton. The result taken from the steller point of view is humor thick and fast. There have been better comedies if story material is under review, but very seldom have two stars clowned a way more cleverly through a chain of absurdities which finds Dudley Leake (Horton), a bachelor about to marry, and ends after multitudes of delays, with the nuptial knot still to be tied.

Leake has had an affair years before, and just as he and his best man Jimmy Skippet (Leslie Henson) are leaving for the Registry Office a gawky youth, claiming Leake as "Daddy," turns up at the Leake flat. Skippett, in order to help Leake out of the jam, engineers a variety of ruses, each of which lands both the men in worse complications. At one time Henson is posing as an authoress called "John Tempest" who is held responsible for the delay, and it is in this disguise that Henson puts over some of the funniest comedy of his successful career. The end is never in doubt, the "son" is in reality a professional blackmailer.

It's a scant story on which Gaumont has spread a fine layer of gags which should not be difficult for American audiences. It is all a piece of fooling and showmen should find plenty of scope for the selling of it as such.—MOORING, London.

Produced by Gaumont-Gainsborough. Directed by Tim Whelan. From the play by Austin Melford. From an original by Franz Arnold and Ernst Bach. Scenario by John Paddy Carstairs and Leslie Gordon. Photography by M. Greenbaum.

Wild Boys of the Road

(First National)

Drama

Although the theme of First National's "Wild Boys of the Road" undertakes to picture a sociological and economic situation which to an extent has passed from the public mind, it is still sufficiently timely to offer excellent selling opportunities to the exhibitor. It can be made particularly effective with a selling reference to the current New Deal arrangement of the Civilian Conservation Corps, serving to take thousands of boys and young men from the streets and freight cars. In many cases the picture may strike directly home to the community, a thought not to be overlooked by the showman.

In drama often tragic, with few light spots of relieving comedy, is recounted the story of the boys—and girls—many of good homes and families, who, driven by a desire to relieve their sorely pressed parents of the necessity of providing for them, have taken to the road. Starting, they have hopes of an immediate job in a large city, only to find jobs completely minus, only to become wanderers, their vehicle the freight car, their dining room the back door, their earnings a panhandler's handout. The boys become expert at the several devices known to the hungry and follow the trail of steel across country and back. They assume a surface of hard-bitten toughness, necessary if they are to maintain themselves.

The title is an excellent line for selling purposes. It should attract attention, and it can be sold. The cast has few names of salable value, though there are several familiar, and the leading role is taken by one of the most capable of the young juvenile players, Frankie Darro. He will be remembered for his unusual performance in Warner's "The Mayor of Hell," a fact which should be emphasized. In what is virtually the leading feminine role is Dorothy Coonan, the freckle-faced newcomer, who may well be sold for future appearances. She represents the "wild girl" of the road. Edwin Phillips as the young pal of Darro, whose leg is lost under the wheels of a train during one of the gang's frequent rushing escapes from train detectives, is appealing and capable.

There is thrill, excitement and suspense in the film, which, combined with an underlying note of significance of the boys' story and their tragic existence, makes a strongly sentimental, definitely human story. That angle presents an unusual feminine audience appeal, while the action and rushing pace of the story should attract the men. It is, of course, a "natural" for all parents, no matter what their circumstances, and treatment from that viewpoint should bring results.

Here are action, drama which is close to tragedy, a grim sort of humor, an enormously significant film and an excellent cast to sell. Women's clubs and parents' organizations should be contacted in the community. This is the sort of picture in which they definitely should be interested. The film is worthy of the best playing spot in the week.—AARONSON, New York.

My Weakness

(Fox)

Comedy with Music

Contrasted with what has gone before in the current happy cycle of musical concoctions on the screen, Fox's "My Weakness" is not a musical comedy, since there is an absence of the spectacle, the group dancing and the chorus boys and girls which is virtually the backbone of musical comedy on stage or screen. Consequently this is rather a comedy with music, of which there is a fair portion, both of background and vocal variety.

The focal point for the exhibitor comes in the initial screen appearance of Miss Lilian Harvey, German actress who has been emphatically sold in advance by Fox. Not to be overlooked is the fact of the extremely large attendance at the Radio City Music Hall in New York, where the picture opened. However, a note of caution in that respect. In certain communities in the hinterland, a large attendance at a New York theatre may have the effect of an adverse reaction along the lines of "If New York liked it, we will not."

The music is tuneful and appealing. The personality of Miss Harvey should be found effective by the majority of patrons. She has an attractive voice, physically she has the necessary attributes, and her performance is lively and capable. The playing up of a new star therefore becomes a prime selling point for the exhibitor. The additional fact that Lew Ayres, Charles Butterworth and Harry Langdon are cast at the head of the list, also makes the film strong marquee material. Sid Silvers, stage comedian, as a sullen and rejected suitor of Miss Harvey, though unknown, supplies much of the comedy. That B. G. DeSylva alone did the story, and with Richard Whiting and Leo Robbins prepared the music, is a fact worth noting in the selling.

The story idea is novel, the amusing Langdon appearing initially and at intervals as an annoyed and busy cupid, having no difficulty with Ayres the playboy, but all sorts of trouble with Butterworth, the timid vegetarian. Then the story is taken up. Ayres' income is cut off by his uncle, Henry Travers, who offers to replace it if Ayres can prove his contention that a woman, properly dressed, can marry any man. Miss Harvey, housemaid and unlettered, is the subject. Ayres contrives, with the able assistance of some half-dozen of feminine friends, to transform Miss Harvey. She goes after Butterworth, succeeds, then turns her attention to Travers, the while being secretly in love with Ayres, hoping to waken his pity if she were to marry an old man. She eventually succeeds and Ayres makes her dream come true. Cupid Langdon on his cloud is content and says so in song, amusingly.

Tuneful, light and fairly entertaining comedy, "My Weakness" has numerous good touches, amusing situations, and with the current interest in musicals on the part of the mo-

Falling For You

(Gaumont-British)

Love Among the Icicles

American fans who liked "The Office Girl" and "Jack's the Boy," should welcome another with Jack Hulbert and Cicely Courtneidge teamed this time as a couple of newspaper reporters out for scandal sheet copy in the playground of the Swiss Alps. Their disguises and their encounters make a pretty fast round of comedy. Although there is very little story for them to tell, the settings and pursuits are at least fresh. Hulbert skis and skis and skates and skates—at times over real Swiss ice, but there is little or no thin ice. Cecily stops at nothing to get her stories, and eventually they both alight on one concerning a charming Royal heiress (this role finds a beautiful newcomer called Tamara Desni), which leads them back to London. There is sleuthing and fooling and falling in love (of course!) until the game is up. Then in the nick of time, Hulbert gets the girl by saving her from the most villainous villain who ever villed.

A few songs are interpolated—not quite so good as in some previous Hulbert features, but still lively—and the gags have a crispness which but for being overworked might have been more effective than any encountered in a British comedy. American exhibitors who devise strong publicity may expect this to repeat the outstanding success of "Office Girl" although there seems something lacking in the romantic interest when the two are compared. All the same they may set out to sell Hulbert and Miss Courtneidge in big letters. They will not let them down.—MOORING, London.

Produced by Gaumont-British. Directed by Jack Hulbert and Robert Stevenson. Story by Sidney Gilliat. Screen play by Jack Hulbert, Douglas Furber, and Robert Stevenson. Music by Vivian Ellis. Photography by Bernard Knowles. Recorded on RCA by A. L. M. Douglas.

Cuba

(Principal)

Timely

Of a timely nature is this travelogue of the island of Cuba, at the moment a hotbed of hectic political unrest, and the center of world attention. The subject was made by Harold McCracken, the explorer, and the narrative is rendered by David Ross, radio announcer of note. It contrives, with the addition of a goodly portion of beautiful scenery, to give a very complete and interesting picture of the island. Seen are Morro Castle, the harbor and city of Havana, the scenes and mode of life of the inhabitants of the interior, dances and sports, including a moment of a fast cock fight, and San Juan Hill of Spanish War fame. The current situation in Cuba makes the film of more than usual travelogue value at this moment.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Movie Struck

(Columbia)

Fair Cartoon

Scrappy and his brother get a job with a movie company, but it's scrubbing and operating the lunchroom. Interest begins when cartoon likenesses of stars come in for lunch, those of Joe E. Brown and Greta Garbo promising well, particularly in the smaller theatres. One or two bits depart from the main track of cartoon comedy construction; for example, when the kid brother mounts a ladder with a pile of plates and a rotating fan picks them off, one by one.—Running time, 7½ minutes.

The Old Timers

Entertaining

One of the Rowland-Brice "Down Memory Lane" series featuring the columnist, Louis Sobol, in which famous troupers of another, and in its own way equally hectic day, strutted their stuff. In a replica of one of the old bar room and theatre combinations of grandfather's day, Lewis Dean acts as master of ceremonies, and with the vocal assistance of the baritone, William O'Neal, calls on various old timers for a moment on the stage. Included are Annie Hart, Harry Brooks, a marvel on the banjo despite his age; Danny Simmons, Josephine Sabel, Tommy Harris, 86, who danced for Abraham Lincoln 69 years ago in Washington. Though the names are for the most part unknown today, there is a real element of entertainment and interest in their appearance.—Running time, 21 minutes.

Pied Piper

(United Artists)

Splendid

The latest of the Walt Disney Silly Symphony numbers ranks with the best of this unusually fine cartoon series in color. It is the legendary story of the town of Hamelin, which was rid of rats by a pied piper. When the town's mayor refuses his bag of gold, the piper pipes away the children of the town, into a land of perpetual childhood. The color is of excellent quality and the subject matter, especially for children, is splendid. It is a short worth special billing.—Running time, 7 minutes.

"Boss" Tweed

(Columbia)

Weak

The subject "Boss" Tweed, first of the "March of the Years" series, produced and dramatized by the March of the Years Association, presents primarily the story of the graft ring that smothered New York just after the Civil War. This page from history is followed by the first appearance of corsets and then the greater freedom of movement that came with the invention of the flying machine by brothers Orville and Wilbur Wright. The subject has its melodramatic interest but is handicapped by disjointedness, the corset episode being particularly weak despite its strong theme. There is running dialogue from the background. Running time, 9½ minutes.

All At Sea

(Universal)

Fair

A number of rather popular entertainers, notable for their performances on the air and stage, herein exercise their talents in a manner only fairly effective in the setting of an ocean liner, in the course of a benefit performance. Taking their turns are Joe Laurie, Jr., as master of ceremonies; Hal Forde, Vincent Lopez, Gregory Stone, Three X Sisters, Pat Rooney, Ethel Barrymore Colt and others, while Hugh O'Connell, as the tombstone maker from the Middlewest, who attempts to sing, but does his best work at the bar, supplies what little there is of comedy.—Running time, 21 minutes.

Paul Revere, Jr.

(Vitaphone)

Fair

Only fair is this Broadway Brevities number, where Gus Shy, playing Paul Revere Watson, is invited to a birthday party at the club in his honor. Drunk, he imagines he is Paul Revere, and steals a policeman's horse. At the club the scene shifts to Colonial times, with a burlesque on the Paul Revere ride theme, with the town crier a la Winchell, dance numbers and the like. Paul awakes from his stupor in the club, is thrown out, and again appropriates the policeman's horse. Several of the song numbers are clever and musically effective, but the subject on the whole is only fair.—Running time, 21 minutes.

Confidence

(Universal)

Good

Novel, timely and lively is this Oswald cartoon comedy, in which the Rabbit is foreman of a chicken farm. The hens stop producing in their usual, or any style when Depression sweeps around the corner. The doctor tells Oswald only Dr. Roosevelt can help him, so Oswald flies to Washington, there obtains the necessary serum of cheerfulness and confidence. When it is injected the hens go back to work with a will and the barnyard band strikes up the music. A good cartoon.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Who Said Weaker Sex?

(Columbia)

Good

A collection of shots from the realm of women's sports, essentially field and aquatics, is followed by a bit of merriment in a picnic amusement, hurling rolling pins at a dummy. The subject matter otherwise is quite familiar, though there are a few bits taken from unusual camera angles. A "lecturer" comments on scene and action.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Seasoned Greetings

(Vitaphone)

Entertaining

There is a fair portion of entertainment in this musical subject which has to do with musical greetings set on records to be sent to friends and relatives, a scheme devised by Lita Grey Chaplin as a means of bolstering her failing greeting card business. The yarn affords her opportunity to sing several songs, in an effective popular manner. Comedy comes in with the small colored boy, who buys a chocolate record, eats it before playing it, and has music coming from his stomach. An entertaining musical number.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Goofytone Newsreel

(Universal)

Weak

Goofytone Newsreel, produced by Gem Pictures Corporation, is a rather weak and ineffectual attempt at the burlesquing of an ordinary newsreel. The champion woman floater, held in the water by her husband, tells of what she thinks. The hiccough champion is seen in action, and the foreign diplomat of the country of Renig explains why his country will not pay its debts and would not if it could. Not very exciting, and hardly entertaining.—Running time, 8 minutes.

FOX manpower welcomes

TWO MORE PRODUCING GENIUSES TO ITS ALREADY BRILLIANT ROSTER

GEORGE WHITE

To direct and produce "George White's Scandals" exclusively for FOX . . . one a year, for five years.

Producer of 14 Broadway hits in a row . . . including the famous "George White's Scandals", "Manhattan Mary", "Flying High." Gave George Gershwin his first chance. Developed Ann Pennington, others. Introduced many famous dance steps.

ERIK CHARELL

His first: a subject startling in nature, entirely novel for films, on a scale commensurate with his other outstanding successes.

Producer of "White Horse Inn", current hit of all Europe. Max Reinhardt's associate in "The Miracle." Successfully produced "The Merry Widow", "The Three Musketeers", "Madame Pompadour", many other hits, in Berlin's Grosses Schauspielhaus.

● George White! Erik Charell! Internationally famous producers of musical hits. Now members of the aggressive FOX producing organization. Further assurance that today's mighty achievements of FOX manpower will be maintained . . . surpassed. The records of these two men are a guarantee of your profits. Read them!

J. C. Jenkins--His Colyum

Neligh, Neb.

Dear Herald:

AN OPEN REPLY TO CHARLES LEE HYDE OF PIERRE, SOUTH DAKOTA

Dear Charles:

Some time ago we noted a letter from you in boldtaced type and given a box position in "What the Picture Did for Me," in which you intimate that we were derelict in our duty in not calling on you. Were it not that we have been endowed with an angelic disposition and a lifelong custom of being tolerant with erring humanity, we might construe your letter as an attempt to befog the issue.

Something like eight weeks ago, in company with Sherm Fitch, purveyor of RKO service out of Sioux Falls, we drove from Chamberlain to Pierre, a distance of something like one hundred miles over the barren hills and through the grasshopper district and in heat that was 108 in the shade, for the express purpose of visiting one Charles Lee Hyde, and when we got there what did we find? We repeat, what did we find? Well, this is what we found. We found that the aforesaid Charles Lee Hyde had hied himself away to northern Minnesota on a fishing trip. And that wasn't all we found. We found that we had two flats. Sherm was flat on one side and we were flat on the other and neither of us had the address of your favorite bootlegger. If you wish to verify this statement you can call on your brother, who has a long-distance connection with the Board of Trade in Chicago.

Agrees Mrs. Hyde Is Champion Cook

In our ramblings hither and yon we have called at Pierre three times; once we found you at home, and we have concluded that the only way to catch up with you is by airplane.

You suggest in your letter that Mrs. Hyde can fry chicken and bake huckleberry pies as well as any woman on earth. This statement requires no proof; it is admitted by every one who has been entertained at her home, and there is only one thing we know of that would suit us better than parking our dogs under her dining table, and that would be to park them under there the second time.

You intimate in your letter that there are a flock of theatres in your state that we failed to call on. Again our spirit of tolerance comes to the fore and we attribute your indictment not to an intentional error, but rather to a lack of knowledge of the facts.

Outside of three or four theatres in the drouth stricken and grasshopper infested districts of the Bonesteel country, and one or two theatres in the extreme northwest corner of the state and that boy at Sisseton, in the extreme northeast corner, the map doesn't disclose a single town we missed. Some were away from home, others had closed, and in justice to your well known reputation for truth and veracity we would suggest that you write the HERALD and correct this error, and it might be well also for you to state a reason, if you know of any, why the government took South Dakota away from the Indians simply to make a great state out of it when they already had Nebraska to fall back on. You are all right, Charlie, and we are for you 100 per cent, but you need fixin' once in a while. Therefore, BE IT RESOLVED, etc., etc.

New Surgical Discovery

If you've got hay fever and false teeth and you sneeze forty times in succession, there is only one safe thing to do: have them either riveted or vulcanized to your jaws. We sneezed ours over a barbed wire fence into a calf pasture.

Billy: "Say, grandpa, the merchants in several towns around here met in Neligh and adopted a code. What is a code?"

Grandpa: "Well, Billy, a code is a set of rules adopted for the government of their business, but few of them pay any attention to it."

Billy: "Well, if they don't pay any attention to it what's the use of having a code?"

Grandpa: "Billy, are you asking us?"

The worst scourge that can strike the theatre business in the small towns is night baseball. When that epidemic hits a town the exhibitor might as well lock up his theatre. In a town of a thousand people, where they are having this game, you can find at least two thousand around the diamond watching the game. Everybody and his pup will be there except the exhibitor and Uncle Jerry's mule. It's a worse scourge than smallpox, scarlet fever and diphtheria combined, and the only thing that will check it is cold weather, and then it is only a case of "suspended animation" and will break forth the next summer in a more violent form. It should be quarantined.

We wish somebody out in Hollywood would send us a picture of a Hollywood baby. Won't somebody please call Louise Fazenda's attention to this? She's neglected us entirely too long.

"Tugboat Annie." We have seen a number of criticisms of "Tugboat Annie," none of which have suited us; therefore we are going to tell you what we think of it. Marie is captain of a tugboat and Wallace Beery is her drunken husband, but in spite of that he's a good-natured pup and you can't help liking the whelp. In fact, we always liked him in anything he ever did. Where we thought the picture might be a little weak was in the failure of Marie to take a marlin pin and knock the soup out of him occasionally, but she stuck to him like a porous plaster through thick and thin and that will make you like Marie all the more. It's a tugboat story, played by the screen's two most delightful performers and that's all we are going to say for it except that when you play it you will agree with us that—

When "Tugboat Annie" comes to town
She'll turn the whole town upside down.
She'll make you laugh, she'll make you sigh,
And then again she'll make you cry.
She'll make you glad that you're alive,
She'll make your front look like a hive
Of bees, in a balmy summer clime
When they come out at swarming time.
You'll hear the quarters plunk until You'll say "By gosh! they'll bust the till."
And you'll not see a single frown
When "Tugboat Annie" comes to town.

M. M. Swank of the Nova theatre at Stockton, Kan., is still in hopes that the public will acquire a desire to see a picture occasionally, but he says it is a long time between drinks.

Ralph Winship still presides over the Majestic at Phillipsburg, Kan. Ralph has those staying qualities that are characteristic of all those Jayhawkers.

Bert Hepp operates a department store and his father is postmaster at Greeley, Neb., and between the two they are able to keep the doors of the Idylhour open in case anybody wants to come in.

Henry Carlin of the Carlin theatre at Spaulding, Neb., mixes hardware and movies in about equal proportion. He says he has to take a bromo seltzer occasionally to clear his mind.

Our wife and Ruth have gone to Portland, Ore., and other Coast towns for the winter and that leaves us to flock by ourself. But there are a number of Reno widows around here, so why worry as long as the pastures are green and the fences poor. If we could get rid of our hay fever and our desire to go fishing, we ought to come out all right. Whatja think about it, Ernie?

MICKEY MOUSE HAS FIFTH BIRTHDAY

Mickey Mouse, Walt Disney's famed brainchild, and noted film star, this weekend will celebrate his fifth birthday. Fitting celebrations are planned, with merchants handling the products of 38 manufacturers using the Mickey trademark taking part. Mickey's share will probably be a large cheese cake, with or without candles.

Six Coast Executives Join Warner Ad Council

Six advertising and exploitation managers on the Coast have been added to the advertising council organized by Warner-First National to prepare selling campaigns on the company's product. They are: Richard Spear, Fox West Coast Loew's Warfield, San Francisco; E. I. Parker, Consolidated Amusement Company, Honolulu; Frank Regan, Warner Theatre, Fresno, Cal.; N. O. Turner, Fox West Coast division manager; Harry Brown, Fox California Theatre, Palo Alto; Phillip Phillips, general publicity manager, Fox West Coast, San Francisco.

Columbia

ANN CARVER'S PROFESSION: Fay Wray, Gene Raymond—A real "down to earth" picture with a real story to it. I can't recall when a picture has given more satisfaction than this one did. The story is so human, so logically put on, and so well acted that one forgets it is just a picture. We played it with a radio act, and everybody got their 30c worth and then some. —A. N. Niles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

BELOW THE SEA: Fay Wray, Ralph Bellamy—Good picture but it did not draw as well as it might have. It pleased. Sound and photography are excellent. Played September 7-8.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

BELOW THE SEA: Ralph Bellamy, Fay Wray—Made a good Saturday show. Pleased and drew average business. Played August 4-5.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

PAROLE GIRL: Mae Clarke, Ralph Bellamy—A very good program picture, both stars and cast fine. Story interesting. Played on double bill with "On Your Guard" (Talmadge). This picture was just a picture. Talmadge is a great stunt man but the story was not there. But the two played together they let us live with a promise never to do it again.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

WHEN STRANGERS MARRY: Jack Holt—A mighty good program picture.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

WHIRLWIND, THE: Tim McCoy—Played on a double bill with "Phantom Broadcast" (Monogram) and made a fine Saturday show.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

CABIN IN THE COTTON: Richard Barthelmess—Played this just ahead of our County Fair and did not do any above average business. A very fine production and many excellent comments. This came as a relief after several weeks of mediocre shows. For the small town it is certainly one of the best pictures of the year.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

ELMER THE GREAT: Joe E. Brown—This a mighty good picture. I call it one of Brown's best. The baseball fans eat it up. Gave good satisfaction. Clean and entertaining. Played September 17-18.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

ELMER THE GREAT: Joe E. Brown—A surprise from all angles. Two seasons ago Brown was only an average bet. Since this series of athletic pictures he has grown rapidly and everyone likes him. The story is rapid and ending as punchy as any could be. They will all like this. A great picture whether your patrons are fans or not. I played this at time of Columbus-Minneapolis series. Running time, 74 minutes. Played September 12-13-14.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

LITTLE GIANT, THE: Edward G. Robinson—A very good program picture. Satisfied all. This star does not draw here. I don't know why. I consider him one of the best in pictures and always makes a satisfactory entertainment but does not draw at box office.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

LITTLE GIANT, THE: Edward G. Robinson—One grand picture and I have never been a Robinson fan. Not a dull minute. Robinson is great, while Mary Astor and Helen Vinson are always good. Just an all around good picture that everyone liked. Running time, 74 minutes. Played September 6-7.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Fox

ARIZONA TO BROADWAY: James Dunn, Joan Bennett—Fair and that is all that can be said of it. A lot of Southern dialect that did not ring true. Some action and some comedy, but just another program picture that will get by, but won't buiid any patronage.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BEST OF ENEMIES: Marian Nixon, Buddy Rogers—Good program picture. It did not draw but it pleased the majority. Played August 31-September 1.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

CAVALCADE: Clive Brook, Diana Wynyard—Wonderful picture. What a pity this production is not properly appreciated. The draw was light the first night and much lighter the second. The few who saw it praised it. Fox Film from New Orleans loaned me the beautiful painting during the run. Played September 12-13.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

DANGEROUSLY YOURS: Warner Baxter—So many complaints that people could not understand what was being said. Slim business.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

HOT PEPPER: Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe—Even the roughnecks kicked on this one. Plenty of dirt and no sign of a moral. Some of the dirty pictures sneak in a moral to help get by, but this one doesn't make excuses for anything. May please about 35 per cent, but you can't face the other 65 per cent when they go out.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

I LOVED YOU WEDNESDAY: Warner Baxter, Elissa Landi—Drew about average business and pleased about 50 per cent. Played August 29-30.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

IT'S GREAT TO BE ALIVE: Raul Roulien, Edna May Oliver—"Certainly different"; "absolutely goofy"; "just grand"; "perfectly delightful" were some of the comments on this. Of course, it is fantastic but it was so well put on that I can't see how anyone could help liking it. I sure did. However (and this is the main thing), it fell terribly flat at the box office.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

IT'S GREAT TO BE ALIVE: Edna May Oliver, Raul Roulien—A crazy picture but good entertainment. Played on a double bill with "Silk Express" (Warner), this is an extra good program picture. The two made a very satisfactory show. Both quality and quantity. Played September 7-8.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

LIFE IN THE RAW: George O'Brien—Draw average for westerns. They liked it. Played September 9.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

SMOKE LIGHTNING: George O'Brien—Out-pulled any western we've played this year. Everyone liked it. And that little nine year old Betsy King Ross made a big hit.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

SMOKE LIGHTNING: George O'Brien—Usual Zane Grey that pleased the usual midweek fans and drew the usual business.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

SUNNY SIDE UP: Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell—I find re-issues very disappointing. This drew above average but not half what I thought it should. It is too long. Running time, 120 minutes. Played August 26.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

Mascot

LAUGHING AT LIFE: Victor McLaglen—A good action picture. It is big and entertaining. A great cast. Gave good satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

MGM

BARBARIAN, THE: Ramon Novarro, Myrna Loy—Not a bad picture. Nice songs, good story, enough action. It pleased the patrons and myself. MGM can produce good pictures, but it seems as if they are holding back on account of the depression hitting too hard into their financial standing; but every now and then they release a pippin to let you know they can do it if they wish to. However, there is no depression when good pictures are offered. Running time, 83 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

FAST WORKERS: John Gilbert, Mae Clarke—Not a very high class production but it seemed to please most of the patrons. John Gilbert's best for some time, while Robert Armstrong and Mae Clarke give a very good performance. Running time, 66 minutes. Played August 30-31.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HELL BELOW: Robert Montgomery, Jimmy Durante—Here is a picture that will please them. Jimmy Durante puts on a show by himself, plenty of comedy. Go big on this one and remember you need not hide when the patrons pass out. Running time, 105 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

HOLD YOUR MAN: Jean Harlow, Clark Gable—A pleasing picture for this pair. While not as good as "Red Dust," it still has extra drawing power and is better than average grosser for my spot. Running time, 89 minutes. Played September 3-4.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

MADE ON BROADWAY: Robert Montgomery, Sally Eilers—Saw this one four times and am still at a loss to know what it was all about. Ticket seller wanted to know why the few who saw it looked bewildered when they went out. One of those pictures that put murderous thoughts about the producers in the helpless exhibitor's head. Oh me! Running time, 70 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

MELODY CRUISE: Charles Ruggles, Phil Harris, Greta Nissen—This is a very interesting picture. Put it on for a baseball benefit and everybody was well satisfied. Give us more of this style pictures. Running time, 75 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

PEG O' MY HEART: Marion Davies—I rate this as one of the best pictures of the year, with everyone, from Marion, the star, to Michael, the dog, giving an excellent performance. The kind of a show that makes the proprietor want to stand out in the lobby when the show is over instead of sneaking up to the booth to avoid the patrons. If we can get more pictures like this we may, sometime, pay off the mortgage. Running time, 85 minutes. Played September 1-2.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PEG O' MY HEART: Marion Davies—A pleasing picture. Davies good in this one. While these Irish home folk pictures never have drawn for me, those that came liked it. Somewhat draggy in spots, but rate it a better than average production. Running time, 84 minutes. Played September 17-18.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

RASPUTIN AND THE EMPRESS: Ethel, John and Lionel Barrymore—A masterpiece of acting by the Barrymore family that was absolutely flawless. Every scene according to history as taught in school, so has its educational value too, but just a bit gruesome at the end and not recommended for children. Too highbrow for this district and did only fair business. Running time, 122 minutes. Played September 1-2.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

REUNION IN VIENNA: John Barrymore, Diana Wynyard—It seems we must have this Barrymore name to sort of keep the standard of the theatre high. It is always a losing proposition for me as far as the money end goes; but I cannot help but recognize the fact that what we term the better class of people invariably attend, and this is wonderful advertising to the masses. He must be showing the best pictures or else Mrs. Jones would not go—etc., etc. Masses follow classes! Running time, 100 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

REUNION IN VIENNA: John Barrymore—Another class picture that is hard to find a spot for. Some of my patrons thought it the best ever and the majority didn't care for it. Several walkouts. Running time, 99 minutes. Played August 29-30-31.—E.

The codifiers codificate but some 14,000 theatres are much more concerned about filling a few million seats.

Double bills or single bills, this or that, there are 365 playing days ahead and they do deserve attention.

Let's think picture business instead of code and let the committees write the code.

New product needs more attention and is going to get it in

The Annual NEW PRODUCT NUMBER of

COMING IN THE ISSUE OF OCTOBER 21

A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

STORM AT DAYBREAK: Kay Francis, Nils Asther, Walter Huston—Based on the assassination in Serbia that brought on the World War. A highly dramatic story with Walter Huston and Nils Asther fine in their roles, as was Kay Francis. What an actor this Huston, versatile, putting everything that he has in all of his roles. He was marvelous in the last scene, where he was kidding and plotting the death of both himself and the officer that was on the trail of Asther.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

STORM AT DAYBREAK: Kay Francis—Certainly Walter Huston and Kay Francis warrant better material than this story affords them. They did well with what they had to work with but my patrons are tired of these foreign locations, garb and customs. We need present day stories, with fast moving action, lots of comedy and light gay music. Running time, 78 minutes. Played September 5-6-7.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

TODAY WE LIVE: Joan Crawford, Gary Cooper—Eleven reels of pitiful attempt at entertainment. Dull, tiresome, monotonous. Highlight of picture is dark photography, the kind that keeps patrons in good humor as they try to discern the features of the players, etc. The several unlucky patrons who came commenced walking out in orderly fashion; but if I had had a crowd there would have been a panic in the rush for the exits. Running time, 115 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

TODAY WE LIVE: Joan Crawford, Gary Cooper—Crawford isn't the B. O. for me she used to be. Another war picture that takes two hours to unwind. Some spectacular war scenes, but on the whole would rate it no better than average picture. It did only average business and fell second night. Running time, 112 minutes. Played September 10-11.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

TUGBOAT ANNIE: Marie Dressler, Wallace Beery—Oh, for more pictures like this one! I could then pay up my back service charges and taxes, and I could quit asking the exchanges for favors! All the chairs were dusted and the old SRO sign that was discarded two years ago was brought to light once again. The floor sank several inches. They want to tell us that the public wants youth and jazz, but I'll stick by old Dressler and Beery. Of course, I had no business the preceding week nor the week following because everybody saved up to see "Tugboat Annie." Running time, 85 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

TUGBOAT ANNIE: Marie Dressler, Wallace Beery—Splendid picture with marvelous drawing power. Beautifully acted by the one and only Marie. The direction is splendid. Sound and photography okay. Played September 10-11.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

WHEN LADIES MEET: Ann Harding, Robert Montgomery—Splendid society drama. It drew above average and pleased well. Alice Brady furnishes the comedy. Play it on your best days. Played August 27-28.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La General patronage.

Monogram

BLACK BEAUTY: Alexander Kirkland. Esther Ralston—A clean, entertaining little picture. Played it for a Boy Scout benefit. Praised by all. Parents asked why more pictures of that type were not made. —Mrs. N. Monte Gill, Strand Theatre, Montpelier, Vt. General patronage.

CRASHING BROADWAY: Rex Bell—If you have a sense of humor that is bigger than disgust, here is where it will come into play. Ran it on my serial night and it got me in wrong. If it were not for the loss sustained or the damage done, the releases of over half of the pictures would be a scream. I often wonder why any people at all attend the picture theatres. Certainly 99 per cent of the minds are of a calibre far above their screen fare! Running time, 56 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

PHANTOM BROADCAST: Ralph Forbes, Vivienne Osborne—A very good picture. Interesting story. The star, Ralph Forbes, great, and the rest of cast fine. Played on double bill with "The Whirlwind" (Columbia) and made a fine Saturday show. It is a crime to be compelled to play this quality of picture as double bills, and we never did it until forced.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich General patronage.

Paramount

BEDTIME STORY, A: Maurice Chevalier, Baby LeRoy—One of the best from this star, packed with comedy, and lots of good comments. Business about 15 per cent above average. No exhibitor need be afraid of this one.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

COLLEGE HUMOR: Bing Crosby, Jack Oakie—Oh boy, what box office this one has! By all means grab it. It brought back pre-depression days. Grossed more on this than on any picture in the last three years. The paper on it is excellent and it is about the easiest one to put over that you ever saw. The heralds are unusually good. Be sure to use them, and the three sheet makes a swell cutout. With pennants for the front and a good initiation stunt for a ballyhoo, you'll break all box office records. You will. Played September 5-6.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

COLLEGE HUMOR: Bing Crosby—Drew nice business and seemed to please old and young. Everyone went out feeling they had spent a most pleasant two hours. Thanks, Paramount.—A. N. Niles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

EAGLE AND THE HAWK, THE: Fredric March, Cary Grant, Jack Oakie, Carole Lombard—A great aeroplane story, with Fredric March doing some splendid work as the ace flyer, ably assisted by Cary Grant. Jack Oakie supplies the comedy. This picture was so well acted and March was so realistic that I had to remove a lady patron in hysterics when the final scenes were shown. The Pacific Exhibition took its toll of our box office or I should have done better. Running time, 72 minutes. Played September 4-5.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

GIRL IN ROOM 419, THE: James Dunn, Gloria Stuart—A good story, with a hospital background, which combines action with romance and a lot of human interest. Well liked. Played to fair business. Ran this in double bill but could stand on its own merits anywhere. Running time, 62 minutes. Played September 6-7.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage..

HELLO EVERBODY: Kate Smith—Poorest show from Paramount this year and a terrible draw. One of the lowest three night grosses I ever had, and that in spite of using it during August, which was one of the best months we have had for several years. —L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

HORSE FEATHERS: Four Marx Brothers—I opened with this on its first anniversary (one year old) and was surprised at the draw. I passed this up months ago because "Monkey Business" had flopped here the year before. Glad I picked this up as it gave me my third highest gross of the year and I didn't even put out a herald on this. I let this slide in without any extra effort whatever. Picture is plenty hot in spots but good entertainment.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

SHE DONE HIM WRONG: Mae West—We turned thumbs down on this last spring when it first came out. But have heard so much about it, determined to give it a date. And were we surprised at its drawing power! Mae West is evidently as well known as Will Rogers. The picture is all right, too. Give your patrons a treat to something different and play this.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

Richard Talmadge

ON YOUR GUARD: Richard Talmadge—This picture was just a picture. Talmadge is a great stunt man but the story was not there. Played on double bill with "Parole Girl" (Columbia).—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

RKO

CROSS FIRE: Tom Keene—I ran this one on my serial night and it pleased this patronage. Lots of comedy and action. Kids and adults had a good time and that is all we care about. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

DIPLOMANIACS: Wheeler and Woolsey—This team was once my defense in the face of any competition. Slowly but surely RKO cheapened their vehicles until now they are down to the low standard of "Diplomaniacs." They are interesting even as it is, but the fact remains that RKO is stealing many dollars from the exhibitors' pocket by the junk material they give to this clever pair. They are the highlights on the RKO program, but RKO is blind! Running time, 63 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

DIPLOMANIACS: Wheeler and Woolsey — I call this the poorest picture these comedians ever made. It did not give satisfaction and we suffered the second night. Played September 10-11.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

EMERGENCY CALL: Bill Boyd—Ambulance racket story that is just very average entertainment. Drew above average because I used it with last installment of serial.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

RENEGADES OF THE WEST: Tom Keene—A good western. I have found these Tom Keene westerns full of action plus a good story. Roscoe Ates in this one very good. My Saturday night crowd liked it. Running time, 60 minutes. Played September 1-2.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

THEFT OF THE MONA LISA: Willy Forst—I am a franchise holder. For this reason I was compelled to show this what-you-call-it. Running time, 99 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

TOMORROW AT SEVEN: Chester Morris, Vivienne Osborne—A couple of dumb detectives reaching for laughs that did not come. Another waste of good money to make, and also a wasted date. You get 'em coming and then you give them a poor picture and they don't remember the good ones you have given them. Done over the same cut and dried pattern of some six others that we have run in the last two years.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

United Artists

I COVER THE WATERFRONT: Claudette Colbert, Ben Lyon, Ernest Torrence—No wonder Torrence died after finishing this one! Everything died for me! My patrons do not go into rapture at seeing legs bitten off, and cold, bloody murder. Colbert gets no sympathy in my theatre. Even our best friends should tell us, no? Running time, 75 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

BIG CAGE, THE: Clyde Beatty—A great animal picture. Played on a double bill as we got it late to play as a special.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

COHENS AND KELLYS IN TROUBLE: George Sidney, Charles Murray—Did not draw as well as usual, but gave better satisfaction than anything we have had these stars in for some time. Played August 30-31.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

FLAMING GUNS: Tom Mix—Drew average Saturday night business and pleased. Played September 2.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

FOURTH HORSEMAN, THE: Tom Mix—A very good western for the children. Ran this for a matinee show only and did fair business with it. Running time, 58 minutes. Played September 2 (matinee). —Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

KING OF JAZZ: Paul Whiteman, Bing Crosby—We booked a special act to be played with this feature and drew very good business. While this was a re-issue, our patrons were generally well satisfied. Played September 6-7.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

KISS BEFORE THE MIRROR: Nancy Carroll, Frank Morgan—Here is a picture that holds one's attention from the very opening scene. Our folks liked it and several people wanted to know when we would have another like it. Drew average business. —A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MOONLIGHT AND PRETZELS: Mary Brian, Leo Carrillo—When you start looking for good musical shows, do not overlook this one that was made by Universal, for Uncle Carl has as good a musical as anyone has made in the last few years, and I am not forgetting the kind of musicals that the producers want fifty per cent of your gross for allowing you to show them. "Moonlight and Pretzels" compares favorably with any of them and for us it did "42d Street" business. Give this picture all you have, best playing time, best dates; it will please 100 per cent if they want musicals. Running time, 80 minutes. Played September 15-16-17.—Steve Farrar, Orpheum Theatre, Harrisburg, Ill. Small city patronage.

OUT ALL NIGHT: Slim Summerville, Zasu Pitts —Plenty of laughs and our customers apparently overlooked some of the various raw spots. Business was up to standard. Played September 9.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

Warner

BABY FACE: Barbara Stanwyck—Rather a sordid story but well produced and the young folks liked it, but it did not click with the more conservative patrons. Stanwyck is fine and has very able support from the entire cast. Running time, 74 minutes. Played September 9-10.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

42D STREET: Ruby Keeler, Bebe Daniels, Warner Baxter, Dick Powell—Has just about everything to make for entertainment. Singing, dancing, and a little ribald song in "Shuffle Off to Buffalo." But it went over and regardless of the demand for no spice in pictures, they had better consult the average audience and see if they don't want some of it. Ruby Keeler has not the best speaking voice on the screen, but the gal can dance like nobody's business. Warner Baxter finally gets a break in a picture as director of the show, and what a job he does of it. It just goes to show that when an actor is given a break he can still come back. Fox almost killed him in "Six Hours to Live" and "I Loved You Wednesday."—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

I AM A FUGITIVE FROM A CHAIN GANG: Paul Muni—Played this about 10 months after release and in spite of its age it drew the best Saturday business we have had, with the exception of "State Fair," for several months. Personally I think this is one grand piece of entertainment. From now on my slogan is going to be "Give me the good old pictures."—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

LAWYER MAN: William Powell—William Powell is always a favorite here and he doesn't disappoint in this one. As the lawyer his work is very convincing. A great picture, well acted and well received by the patrons. Running time, 68 minutes. Played September 6-7.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhod patronage.

PICTURE SNATCHER: James Cagney—Drew much above the average for Saturday. I did not see it but was told that I surely gave them a "scorcher." Anyway, they liked it. Warner Bros. pictures are swell. Played September 2.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

SILK EXPRESS: Neil Hamilton, Shelia Terry—This is an extra good program picture. Played on double bill with "It's Great to Be Alive" (Fox). The two made a very satisfactory show, both quality and quantity. Played September 7-8.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

SOMEWHERE IN SONORA: John Wayne—While John Wayne isn't as convincing as most western stars, his pictures make up for it in action and thrill packed story. Scenery oke and western fans liked it. Running time, 57 minutes. Played September 8-9.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

Short Features

Educational

BOUDOIR BUTLER, THE: Andy Clyde—A good comedy. Packs lot of laughable situations. Nothing new in it but it's good. Running time, 20 minutes. —Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

DORA'S DUNKING DOUGHNUTS: Andy Clyde—Dora invents a doughnut that will soak up a whole cup of coffee, and Andy puts it over on the radio for her. Clever, funny, and well done. What more can you ask? Running time, two reels.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

KID'N HOLLYWOOD: Baby Burlesks—These Baby Stars in their diapers and big pins made quite a hit.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

TORCHY'S KITTY COUP: Ray Cooke—Fairly good and a little better than some of the others in this series. Running time, two reels.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MGM

BARGAIN OF THE CENTURY: Zasu Pitts, Thelma Todd—Very good, as are all of the Pitts-Todd comedies. Running time, two reels.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD PREMIERE: Colortone Musical Revues—Such trash as this is what keeps fathers and daughters and mothers and sons and decent young couples away from the theatres. I had a very nice class of people in the theatre on the night I showed this and I felt as if I should make an apology to them. A bevy of girls, five-sixths naked, lying on meat blocks in a butcher shop, kicking their legs in the air with the round steaks much in evidence and singing, "If you like it young and tender, here it is." Our Pennsylvania Censor Board, well, they at least draw their good salaries. Running time, 20 minutes. —A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwisburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

KID FROM BORNEO, THE: Our Gang—Very good. This one was scary but it was highly enjoyed, I'm sure. Running time, two reels.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princes Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

RUMMY, THE: Taxi Boys—This is the one good one out of this series. It really is an entertaining comedy of the slapstick variety. Running time, two reels.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

WILD PEOPLE: Colortone Musical Revue—Another fine musical revue from Metro all in color. A very popular short. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Paramount

MOTHER GOOSE LAND: Betty Boop—Betty Boop goes to Mother Goose Land and sees everything from Little Miss Muffet to the cow jumping over the moon. This made a big hit. Running time, one reel.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SCHOOL DAYS: Screen Song—One of the very best screen songs that Paramount has made. Running time, one reel.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SCREEN SOUVENIRS: No. 3—Always good for a laugh. Patrons like them. This one especially good. Running time, 10 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighboorhood patronage.

SWEET COOKIE: Recommend this to you for a lot of laughs. Running time, 20 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

United Artists

MELLERDRAMMER, THE: Mickey Mouse—A great "drammer" for young and old alike, a feature on any bill. Give this lots of prominence on your bill. Running time, 7 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhod patronage.

Universal

BEAUTY ON BROADWAY: Radio star reel with Walter Winchell—In my estimation this is the poorest of the series. There is simply nothing to it. Running time, two reels.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

GLEASON'S NEW DEAL: James Gleason—Just a fair comedy of a husband who undertakes to run the housekeeping one day so he can show his wife what a poor manager she is. The idea was good, but it didn't seem to have the laughs in it. Running time, two reels.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

TRIAL OF VINCE BARNETT: Vince Barnett—One of the funniest comedies we have played in a long time.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

Warner Vitaphone

AFRICA SPEAKS—ENGLISH: Pepper Pot—A mighty clever single reel that pleased grownups as well as the kiddies. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

IDLE ROOMER, AN: Jack Haley—Funny Comedy.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

MODERN CINDERELLA, A: Ruth Etting—A fair short but did not seem to go over so very well. Not enough laughs. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PLEASURE ISLAND: A verry pretty two-reel short. Beautiful colors but the music not up to the standard of Warners Brevities.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

POOR LITTLE RICH BOY: Broadway Brevity, and a good one.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

SMASH YOUR BAGGAGE: Melody Master Series —The peppiest short made. It is excellent.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

WORLD'S CHAMP: Broadway Brevity with Jack Dempsey—Don't advertise this in the regular way because it will disappoint those who expect "Broadway Brevity" to mean music and dancing. It is a good two-reeler, however.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

WRONGORILLA: Jack Haley—Funny comedy—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

Metrotone News Covers Japan's Naval Review

Pictures made by Ariel Varges, Hearst newsreel cameraman, of the naval review recently conducted before the Emperor by the Japanese government at Yokohama, appear in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. A departure is the permission granted a foreign cameraman to take pictures aboard a Japanese warship. Varges was aboard the battleship Mutsu, which followed the battle cruiser Hiyei, from which the Emperor viewed the demonstration.

The review was the greatest Japan ever held. Participating were 9 battleships, 4 airplane carriers, 12 cruisers, 14 light cruisers, 61 destroyers, 33 submarines, 2 submarine mother-boats, 2 mine layers, 2 gunboats, 6 mine sweepers, and a number of service boats, making a total of 161 sea fighters, aggregating 847,761 tons. In addition there soared overhead 180 battle airplanes.

Minority Holders Seek Writ To Stop Action in Skouras Case

Minority stockholders of Skouras Brothers Enterprises have filed a petition with the Missouri supreme court asking for a writ of prohibition to restrain Circuit Judge Henry Hamilton from taking further action in connection with the receivership litigation against the company. A few weeks ago Judge Hamilton entered an order dismissing the receivership action and imposing the costs on the plaintiffs. The action entered in the high court is a legal move to have Judge Hamilton's ruling set aside.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

DRESS UP

One reaction to Elmer Rhoden's comment on befitting managerial attire is perhaps best illustrated by the following. A showman friend popped into the editorial sanctum to inform us that in hearty agreement with the article, he had shaken off his usual conservatism in the purchase of a new suit, cladding himself in garments somewhat more colorful than has hitherto been his wont.

Very well and good. The snappier apparel no doubt will contribute to the building up of that hoped-for showmanly flair in the fabulous new deal for the manager. But why burden him financially with the heavy demands of this personal exploitation, intended primarily and eventually for the betterment of the box office?

If the dress of the manager is to reflect the personality of the theatre, then by all means exhibitors must consider this as prestige advertising to be paid for accordingly. Recognizing the basic benefits of proper wardrobing, employers should provide adequate seasonal and occasional attire, including whites, slack suits and necessary accessories, as well as the ever present "tuxedo."

Yes, the manager must be well dressed at all times. At club meetings, lunches, fraternal and civic affairs, upon his shoulders is carried the prestige and importance of the theatre in the public eye. Not only is it necessary that these shoulders be broad; smart exhibitors should see to it they are also well tailored.

STORM SIGNALS (?)

After a frenzied period of decentralization in which producer owned theatres were rapidly unloaded, reports now indicate another change of mind as film companies again compete with each other in a drive for houses. We view these efforts with misgivings in so far as the manager is concerned, unless the mistakes of past chain operation are recognized and avoided.

Whether theatres are to be operated independently or otherwise is not our concern. However, the position of the manager and the latitude allowed in running his house is one of the major determining points of success or failure, regardless of the theatre's classification. The manager who knows his business and proves that he does, should not be interfered with unduly, and his voice should command attention in all matters of booking and house operation.

That this is a proper and profitable proceeding is indicated by the new policy of the chain operated Fox Midwest theatres, wherein managers are not only given this freedom of action but are being sold to the public with the same enthusiasm and publicity put behind the theatre screen and stage attractions. The coupling of theatre and manager in the public eye is not only sound business, but almost a guarantee that, in this division at least, the senseless and unwarranted bureaucratic hokum of the past is not to be revived.

We trust that all chain-minded producers will see eye to eye in steering clear of the catastrophic errors of previous years. The judicious selection of able showmen plus unhampered operation will speedily prove whether or not the weaknesses of past chain exhibition have been remedied.

QUITE NECESSARY

Exhibitors now taking advantage of the long awaited upturn in business by purchasing needed new cars, clothes and home furnishings might also look into the matter of theatre repairs and replacements. Too long have houses gone shabby, neglected, and this is as good a time as any for operators to make anticipated amends.

Though the general business depression had much to do with the shrinking of grosses, other reasons for the falling off of business are not hard to find. Foremost among these is the reluctance of many exhibitors to spend an unnecessary(?) penny on much needed repair work, which attitude is reflected in the scarcity of paying customers.

Optimistic as we may be on the strength of the new season's fine pictures, nevertheless many of these box office attractions will not receive their just due in many spots if steps are not taken immediately to remedy present conditions. Top line stars and perfectly produced features cannot prevail against poor sound and inadequate projection; ace exploitation and increased advertising budgets are licked in the face of shaky seats and torn carpets.

Able employees should be encouraged. Talented managers and skilled projectionists must have good "tools", to do their expected best. The continued use of outworn equipment and furnishings is very poor business, affecting the efficiency of the house personnel, as well as encouraging patrons to stay away from the box office in large numbers.

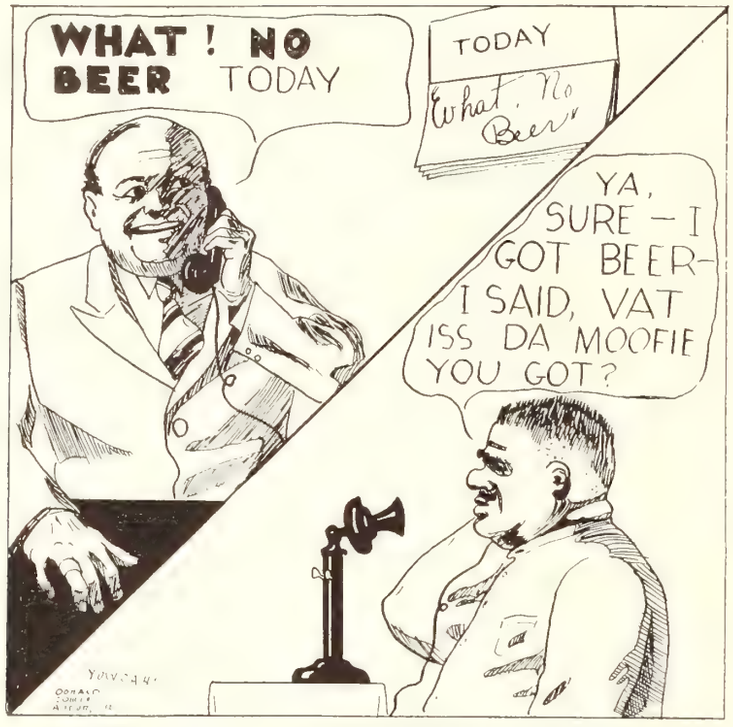
SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS!



Maybe Central was to blame for this one, Don.

Campaign Clicks At the Old Roxy

Theatre exploiteers in New York are waking up to the fact that the simplest forms of ballyhoo often produce the best results. Constructive tieups with business, national and political interests far removed from direct contact with this industry are being used by a generation of theatrical press agents who have been brought up in an aura of sensationalism, stunts and generally complex methods.

Following on the heels of two of the most unique bits of press agentry seen in these parts in many months, namely, Columbia's exploitation on "Lady for a Day," and Warner's "Bureau of Missing Persons" ballyhoo—the old Roxy theatre made a bid for front honors in this field by capitalizing on the popular theme of aviation as presented in the picture "F. P. 1." Morris Kinzler, publicity director, and Charles F. Hynes of the New York office of Gaumont-British, ably aided by Fred Rath of Fox Exploitation crew, put over a series of aviation tieups and lobby displays noteworthy for their effectiveness.

Those Ten Foot Letters

Weeks in advance, 10-foot electric "F. P. 1" letters were planted in the Roxy lobby without any copy to indicate their import. Brilliantly lighted, this flash stopped every patron, the greatest curiosity, of course, being aroused as to their meaning. The gag was not divulged until copy broke on the picture, at which time the letters were transferred to the top of the marquee (see photo).

A model aviation contest, in conjunction with Gimbel's department store, was launched, and prior to the picture's opening the store pasted "F. P. 1" stickers on every outgoing package, announcing the opening and the model building contest. Windows were given over to miniature models of the mid-ocean floating aerodome used in the film, technical equipment and model planes.

Noted aviators were contacted, including Clarence Chamberlin, Wiley Post, Jimmie Mattern and others, all of whom gave their public endorsement to the picture. Colonel Lindbergh was shown a special preview of the picture in Sweden and asked to submit his opinion. Chamberlin presented the silver cup from the stage to the winner of the model airplane contest who was given a free ride over the city with him.

The resultant satisfactory gross, the third highest at the Roxy since Jan. 1, was due entirely to the talents of Kinzler, Hynes and Rath, who proved that a picture with exploitation possibilities can be whammed over when these angles are fully capitalized.

GOOD SHOWMANSHIP!

H. V. McCallim, publicity director for Loew's State in Houston, Tex., used six beautiful gals to sell his show when he played "Gold Diggers" there. He sent them out on a tour of the downtown offices to sell tickets for the opening. Then on the opening day stationed them, in scant attire, on the marquee, from where they threw gold covered chocolates and "gold diggers" coins to the crowds below. The ticket selling gag is aces for the bigger pictures.

Warners Plug Love Slants on "Woman"

To stress the love angle in the new Edward Robinson picture "I Loved a Woman," Charlie Einfeld's fast stepping exploiteer crew, headed by Ed Selzer, have put over a strong romance campaign for the opening of the Warner picture at the Strand, N. Y.

One of the stand-out stunts was a tieup with the New York Mirror in which $50 prizes were offered to the longest married and youngest married local couples. Daily guest tickets were awarded to every couple in the city married fifty years, and in addition ten pairs of tickets were given daily to the first ten couples who applied at the municipal marriage bureau for licenses. The paper gave added strength to the stunt by carrying the tieup stories on the news pages instead of in the theatre section.

As the former president is impersonated in the picture, the widow and other relatives of the late Theodore Roosevelt were invited to attend the premiere. Surviving "Rough Riders" were also asked to the opening to tie in with the sequence showing the Battle of San Juan Hill.

The lobby display sold the romance angle strongly, one of the main panels showing blown up stills of Robinson's past six pictures, which played up the love slants. A 36 by 40 production shot of Robinson and Francis at the bottom of the panel (see photo) carried the idea further.

Over 500 windows were secured locally in which cards and other displays arranged by a fan magazine featured a fictionization of the story in the screen periodical. In addition, hundreds of news stands were papered with "Woman" posters, the Strand bearing the cost of the printing and the publishers arranging for the locations.

The Warnerites have done a good job in selling Robinson in this picture as a "great lover" to remove him from the classification of character actor. It might not be a bad idea for other managers playing this attraction to play up this angle, thus tapping an added fertile source of patronage for the vehicles of this gifted artist.

Lykes Puts On "Native" Street Gag

"Savage Gold" evidently piled up quite a bit of the precious metal at the box office as a result of the campaign slammed over by J. E. Lykes, skipper of Loew's Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, one of the highlights of which was a street bally using a big husky negro, made up in native costume with spear and lettered shield.

Lykes also planted a guessing contest in one of his prominent windows by filling a chest with gold(?) pieces and giving prizes to those guessing the nearest number of pieces in the chest. A lettered ballot box and blanks were planted next to the exhibit, thus making it easy for those who wanted to get in on the game.

A special screening for newspaper men and a radio program on which a specially written poem dedicated to the picture was broadcast, were other effective slants utilized by "J. E." on this attraction. Unfortunately, we cannot reproduce the street bally as the photos were a bit overdeveloped, but you may take our word for it that the stunt made a swell flash.

SOME ADDISON ACTIVITIES

Loew Cleveland Division Head Puts Over Numerous Effective Campaigns on Newest Releases

A satisfying armload of practical, meaty campaigns put on by H. M. Addison, Loew's Cleveland (O.) Ohio Divisional Manager, on some of the latest pictures, has been forwarded by Frank Moneyhun, and we are happy to present their highlights for the information of the membership.

H. M. Addison

On the occasion of a citywide Fall fashion festival Addison costumed two girls in complete men's evening attire, with signs pinned to their backs plugging "The Masquerader." These girls distributed cards of many different colors (see photo below) the white ones entitling holders to free admission to the theatre. Frank reports that a careful check reveals that not a single one of the cards had been thrown away, as proven by the crowds that stormed the box office to find out if their cards were the right color.

An "invisible ink" card was distributed at night in office buildings on a tieup with the company that does the cleaning in most of the downtown area. These cards, one of which was left on each desk, contain copy which stated that the lettering on it could very easily be made visible and to the first 25 who accomplished it and mailed the completed card to the theatre, guest tickets would be awarded to see the Colman picture.

A further "Masquerader" stunt was a clever street bally planted in the lobby of one of the dark theatres, in which two girls and a man were planted behind a shadowgraph, with posters and stills calling attention to the picture. This lobby was also utilized for a gag on "Song of Songs" by having a sculptor model a replica of the Dietrich statue pose, working from an illustration of one of the regular posters.

The office building idea was again put across on this picture by the distribution of blotters, copy which asked the name of the screen star who posed for the familiar statue, also illustrated on the blotter. Readers were asked to fill in the name of the star, title and theatre, and to mail their answers for free passes.

"H. M." used the "maze mat" idea as a circular on his "Broadway to Hollywood" campaign. Costumed girls on roller skates passed out the circulars in the downtown area, and managed to create a bit of excitement by this out of the ordinary distribution.

Frank Moneyhun tells us that these various ideas scored high in calling attention to the pictures they publicized, which is the usual return expected from Addison's campaigns. Although the sculpture and shadowgraph ideas may be a bit beyond the financial reach of some managers, the pass stunt and roller skate street bally can be put on effectively and inexpensively everywhere.

Parade Stuff

Local exploiteers managed to grab the spot in the recent New York NRA parade, one of the outstanders put over by Billy Ferguson of MGM being a flock of pigeons released in front of the reviewing stand with messages attached, to President Roosevelt in Washington. A stilt walker leading an imprinted MGM balloon, and a "Leo the Lion" were also contributed by Billy.

The Fox boys promoted themselves a dirigible to which was attached a long banner advertising "Berkeley Square." The blimp sailed along the line of the march in the center of a group of government planes, which spectacle drew all eyes.

Charninsky's lobbies are front page in Dallas and responsible for selling plenty of extra tickets.

WILSON BUILDS NEW FRONT

Neighborhood Theatre Manager Changes Building Front to Resemble Pipes of Giant Organ

In the midst of a highly competitive neighborhood situation, Charles F. Wilson, manager of the Bijou, an uptown Troy, N. Y., theatre, strives for the unusual to put over his house, which in this case was the changing of the entire front of the building and rearranging the marquee lettering, all this done through the efforts of the house staff.

Wilson feels that in his position, the theatre itself should be exploited rather than the pictures, and in the following letter tells us of some of his improvements:

GENTLEMEN:

Situated as we are in a highly competitive area with pictures becoming available after three runs down town and being on an open booking basis with several other suburban theatres in this city, we realized that our exploitation efforts in order to be effective should not be confined to one campaign or the presentation of one picture, but should be felt in improving grosses over a period.

With this object in mind, we began drawing pictures and evolving plans, in which every employe of the theatre participated. The result has been a capital investment with a minimum of expense in the daily working of the scheme.

The Bijou Theatre is a long rectangular building constructed of wood, with a novelty siding exterior. The front was adorned with several false windows which at various times during the life of the building had been cut and hinged for ventilation to the booth, the result being far from beautiful.

Before starting our improvement plan, we rendered our ideas into a plan on paper with a general description of its workings upon completion and have religiously adhered to them.

This improvement plan is an exploitation of the theatre itself and the association of the picture with the theatre. I will attempt to describe the original front we installed and the marquee which exploits the theatre and the tie-up through our other means of commanding attention of possible patrons.

Utilizing the talents of every one connected with the theatre, we constructed the marquee sign of a wooden framework and covered it with specially bent galvanized iron, so that the openings in the front should allow the insertion of two strips of wall board from which had been cut the stars and title of the presentation. Various colored paper covers the openings in the cut-outs and by means of two rows of bulbs in the sign a very novel effect is given both during daylight and at night.

Next the entire front of the building was covered with specially bent tubes in the form of a giant organ. The apex of this organ provided an appropriate space for the theatre name, the letters of which are separate and measure from 2½ to three feet high and are 10 inches thick. These letters were mounted on an angle frame and are suspended about 18 inches from the face of the building.

In back of the marquee sign is a specially designed floodlight mounted in the form of a barrel which when revolved by means of a small motor throws a succession of varied colors on the face of the building and the sign. The marquee is painted black and silver with a stippled effect, while the background is painted a neutral tan which reflects the various colors from the floodlight.

It would seem at first glance at the enclosed pictures that the maintenance of a sign shop to supply cut-outs for the marquee sign and the sound truck would be prohibitive for a small suburban theatre. We have accomplished this with no addition in personnel and with an increase of only 10% in our advertising cost. Every possible detail has been worked out to cut costs by increased efficiency. The letters, for example, which have been cut out of the wall board for the marquee are utilized for billing the sound truck, another product of the ingenuity of our force.

Newspaper advertising is confined to a directory listing of the current presentations in each of the two daily papers, in which a catch line mentions some special feature of the theatre such as "Air Conditioning," "Air Cushion Seats," "Ground Floor Exits," "Cozy Atmosphere," "Clarity of Picture," "Natural Sound," "No Parking Problems," etc. Weekly midget programs distributed from house to house also carrying seasonal catchlines complete the picture of our exploitation endeavors.

We believe that our idea of exploiting the theatre first and the particular presentation secondarily is responsible for our continued existence in this business.

Very truly yours,
CHARLES F. WILSON.

SICCARDI STEPS OUT

Unwrapping the budget traces a little, Joseph J. Siccardi, Liberty, Plainfield (N. J.), let loose a campaign on "Be Mine Tonight" that brought him plenty of standees. He mailed a postal to every home listed in the phone book, and followed with a house to house herald distribution by bicycled Boy Scouts.

Foreign organizations were reached thru the foreign press, and music, social and fraternal clubs were circularized to good returns. Al Nathan, Universal exploiteer, gave Joe a great big hand on the campaign.

Botwick Contacts Conservation Camps

Stressing the dramatic appeal of "Heroes for Sale," Harry Botwick, the skipper of the Paramount Theatre, Rutland (Vt.), succeeded in garnering a lot of extra business from the four Citizens' Conservation Camps located in his section. Harry wrote to the Captain of each camp describing the picture, also forwarding circulars which were distributed to the workers in each outfit, with hot copy that described the picture as—"an explosive story of the Whys and Wherefores of Today's C.C.C. Camps and the NRA."

Harry dipped into a recent locally publicized murder trial on "Mary Stevens, M.D.," by running a series of teaser ads indicating that the woman in the case, who was acquitted, would appear at the Paramount. The ads were single column, five inch, some of the heads reading as follows:

"That Woman You've Been Reading About—She'll Be Here."

"They Can't Keep Her Out of Rutland—She'll Be Here."

The paper would not divulge who planted the teasers, and the day before the opening, Botwick broke with his ads, tying in the teaser copy. Harry handled the idea with restraint so as not to offend, and the result was a lot of laughs that were translated into a heap big gross on the attraction.

"PHYSICIANS THEATRE"

Charlie Bassin, the skipper of the Oriental Theatre, Mattapan, (Mass.), forwards a copy of the letter he has mailed to 2,000 professional men in Boston and vicinity. In the letter Bassin refers to the fact that the Oriental is known as the "Physicians Theatre" for the reason that many extra courtesies are shown the members of this profession, such as message deliveries, reservations, special parking facilities.

Charlie forwards a four-color street car and bus card that is causing a bit of a stir. It is 42 inches wide by 11 deep, with the theatre name full across in red against a yellow background; two boxes below left and right, one for the stars and the other for the picture, these in green on white, separated by a reverse yellow on black plugging the free parking service. Bassin says it is costing him a little for the space, but that returns are worth it. Sure seems so, Charlie.

"MISSING" LOBBY

A shot of inside advance lobby, Strand, New York, showing some of the flash created by those Warnerites on "Bureau of Missing Persons." Notice "bureau" with glass door and silhouette next to chained files containing police records of missing locals. All this and other gags described in story in last issue moved out front when picture opened.

"It Really Happened"

by THOS. J. KANE, Mgr.
Sequoia, Redwood City, Cal.

I think one of the funniest bally-hoos that went "hay-wire" happened like this: I was running the San Mateo Theatre in San Mateo, Calif., in December, 1927, and we had Lon Chaney in "West of Zanzibar" coming up.

Tom J. Kane

We conceived a "wild-man" ballyhoo, one of those "no cost" to the theatre kind; engaged a young fellow to portray the wild man; had my wife dye a suit of my long underwear black; made him up; then we constructed a cage (of wood) on a flat bed truck and everything looked hotsy-totsy. For atmosphere I promoted a local customer to fix the truck driver up with checked pants, Prince Albert coat and a plug hat and a mustache.

The City of San Mateo was in the throes of Xmas street decorations, strings of colored electric lights along the street, and when they came to the end of the circuit, they crossed the street to continue down the other side. All set?

You now have the plot. I was so pleased with the stunt that I invited Jimmie Myers, ad. sales manager for Paramount in San Francisco, at that time to look it over.

The truck driver on contacting the customer also contacted about six drinks of high-powered gin (unknown to me). So Jimmie Myers and I followed the bally-hoo around town and were both very pleased with our efforts. I forget to add that he had several suggestions which we used. So good so far, but the truck driver thought he was Barney Oldfield and went down the Main Street of San Mateo like he was going to the races with the Wild Man yelling for dear life and the population wondering where the fire was, and suddenly they struck the cross wire of the Xmas decorations and the Wild Man piled up in the middle of the street in a pile of kindling wood all surrounded by Xmas decorations, street lights, policemen, citizens and a manager who was looking for an exit.

Of course, the city officials and police raised "hob," but the whole town got such a laugh out of it, not to mention the ribbing the manager received, that even though the stunt went "hay-wire," it had reverse English and we did a nice business.

I've had others that went awry, but none that had as much dynamite as the one stated above.

PLEASE NOTIFY YOUR CHAIRMAN OF ANY CHANGE IN ADDRESS

Notice the free Rotary ad on the bottom of the above. Manager R. V. McGinnis, Conway Theatre, Conway, Ark., builds up his good will by plugging all his civic clubs in the same manner, and very clever, says we. The display "Disgraced" is a revamp of a regular press book ad combined with a midget mat, and Mac says that it is one of the best small ads he has produced in some time. Incidentally, we call your attention to the NRA cut. Are you using it in your advertising?

Showman's Broadcasts Build Theatre Prestige

A radio-wise manager is John McManus, Loew's Midland Theatre, Kansas City (Mo.), who, greatly in demand as a speaker on his local stations, avails himself of these opportunities to broadcast plenty of picture dope and institutional plugs.

Recently, John was one of a group of talks and the introduction given him by the station announcer included a sweet mention of the theatre. A few days later McManus was the guest speaker on a motion picture program, in which he told plenty of his personal contacts with MGM stars, not neglecting, of course, to insert some helpful build-ups for his coming attractions in the theatre.

At the end of the program, the announcer gave Mac a nice sendoff by suggesting the air audience make a habit of attending the Midland and make themselves known to John, who was always on hand to bid them welcome. This is what we would call the swellest kind of publicity, and McManus is to be commended for utilizing the radio so practically.

A "fireworks" front on "Broadway to Hollywood" with red flares and colored smoke pots brought out traffic stopping crowds on the opening night and a telegram tieup netted thousands of stickers on every wire sent out with copy plugging the picture and theatre.

McManus "cleaned up" on his showing of "The Masquerader" with a laundry tie-up (pardon us) by having shirt bands wrapped around all laundry bundles tying in with copy to the effect that discriminating men patronized that particular laundry while planning an evening at Loew's Midland.

To keep his house impressed upon the public eye, John works on institutional newspaper stories, some of the latest planted including one story on ushers, another on the theatre lost and found department, and a third on the number of lamps in the upright sign. Judging from the above, this enterprising executive passes up no opportunities to keep Kansas City "Midland-minded."

RADIO BROADCAST FEATURES "TUGBOAT ANNIE" CAMPAIGN

Manager Arthur Catlin of Loew's State Theatre, in Cleveland, where "Tugboat Annie" was being shown, arranged for a quarter-hour radio broadcast. This was put over by the dramatic stock company of Station WHK on the Saturday evening following the Friday opening.

Life savers were placed in special envelopes with the copy: "A Life Saver—if you laugh too hard at Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery at Loew's State," etc. These were passed out on the streets by two young ladies attired in white sailor suits with ribbons reading "Tugboat Annie" across their shoulders.

CINEMA SHOP

On date at Arthur Mayer's Rialto Theatre in New York, "Doc" Joe Lee planted "Moonlight and Pretzels" in Macy's window, by tying-in clothes worn by stars in the picture to reproductions sold by the store's Cinema Shop. Center panel carries stars' endorsement, via Joe Weil.

HOSTLER PROMOTES PLENTY IN PUTTING OVER EXPLOITATION

Practical box office exploitation distinguishes the work of Alvin Hostler, a Roundtabler of long standing and doing a nice job managing the Warner, Altoona (Pa.). Alvin takes time out to detail the ideas he used on a number of his recent bookings, outlined here.

"The Mayor of Hell"

Distributed novelty cards at a local aviation field to which buttons were attached, the copy reading—"pardon us for (button) in, but we just had to tell you that James Cagney" etc. Catch on? Tied up with milk and bakery companies with bumper cards on all transportation. Newsboys' party at theatre netted 40 inch free display ad, and carriers further bally'd picture while selling papers.

"Mary Stevens, M.D."

Reminder cards with rubber bands attached were hung on doors of all stores morning of opening; classified ad tieup returned three day free two column display splashes in which readers were invited to find their names on want ad pages for passes; another paper went for a drawing contest in which kids were asked to crayon line drawings for free tickets.

A regular size, folded doctor's card, on outside of which was printed the title, theatre and "calling" hours, and inside, theatre copy, was distributed at a local bathing beach. "Back seat" drivers licenses were passed out at ball park, with theatre plug on reverse; circus heralds distributed and cutout gun souvenirs were used to plug a new serial.

"Heroes for Sale"

Put out novelty cards with small fire cracker attached, copy reading—"we don't need this to make a noise for Richard Barthelmess" etc.; five and ten store gave away Loretta Young artificial roses with titled ribbon attached; printed paper bags, heralds, and window strips promoted without cost.

Secured 500 feet of free movie negative with oil company tieup, showing crows in various parts of town, film shown in theatre, and sponsor took large ads to advertise it. "Red inked" front page given out by newsboys, and special souvenirs promoted for children's matinee.

"Baby Face"

Milk bottle cards attached to all deliveries had picture of baby plug for picture, all stores selling ice cream used window strips with "baby" hookin; "Baby Face" sundae plugged on window cards containing production stills in 100 stores, and candy kisses were passed out with "kiss" copy from Barbara Stanwyck. Boys paraded inside ball park with special 14 foot banner. All above exploitation was promoted

"Gold Diggers"

Complete billing coverage within 50 mile radius; planted serial; mailed out thousands of postcards, costumed girls gave away gold coins and chocolate pieces; promoted full window displays in every prominent main street store; Philadelphia Sunday paper gave Joan Blondell picture with every copy; airplanes carried theatre banners.

The above campaigns indicate the work Hostler puts behind his efforts to keep his theatre always in the public eye. Notice that there is nothing spectacular, but every idea is pointed to do the most good at the least possible cost, and Alvin gets plenty in return for every dollar he spends.

EDITORIALS PRAISE WALLY'S BROADCAST ON "TUGBOAT ANNIE"

His vacation over, Toledo, Ohio, once more is being cajoled by the exploitation of Wally Caldwell, who keeps things stirring at the Loew's Valentine Theatre, and sends in some of the highlights on his campaigns.

Through a special arrangement with the city fathers, Wally has planted a huge canvas banner, 36 feet long by four feet wide (see photo) across the intersection of two of Toledo's busiest streets in the heart of the city and this was used on "Tugboat Annie," remaining up for a two-week period.

Caldwell put on a splendid 15-minute broadcast of the picture script with the stock players over one of his leading stations, and the newspapers departed from usual custom by giving this an editorial break.

Wally concentrated his "Broadway to Hollywood" exploitation in his newspapers by planting a map puzzle in one daily, a theatre question contest in another and also broke a special feature story.

Thomason's Home-made Effects Work Well

R. M. Thomason, who keeps the folks in Ellis, Kan., on their toes with his doings at the Crystal Theatre, sends along another batch of very good stuff. Due to a last moment booking difficulty, an overnight switch in pictures was necessary, making it impossible for Thompson to advertise the new attraction in advance. However, nothing daunted, he got out a personal endorsement herald on the opening day stressing the merits of "Strangers Return," the result of which was a nice increase in the gross on the second day of the run.

This enterprising showman attracted attention with a simple effect machine consisting of a 110 volt mazda bulb, a home made tin lamphouse, a condenser lens, two thicknesses of red gelatin and a stero lens. Used for the "Shadow Waltz" sequence in "Gold Diggers," the effect was run by making all dark parts of the film a red tint, and other color combinations were secured by placing the red gelatin in front of the projection lens.

Thomason uses a regular advertising auto trailer and in advance of his "Gold Diggers" campaign worked an effective stunt by inviting the folks to look into the interior of the trailer through peek holes, at the same time pushing a button which lighted up the interior, disclosing stills and copy on the picture. The push button effect obviously got more attention than if the interior had been steadily lighted, indicating that Thomason is well grounded in the fundamentals of novelty advertising.

PROVEN PROFITABLE HIGH SCHOOL AND COLLEGE TIEUP SUGGESTIONS

Practical Ideas To Win School Support Utilized by Prominent Member Who Has Tilted Grosses With Special Slants

EVERY wide-awake theatre manager has in the past been cognizant of the value of soliciting student attendance through co-operation with the schools and pupils directly. If so, he undoubtedly is at this time cooking up some stunt whereby he can increase receipts on some week night or a Saturday morning matinee. If not, the following suggestions may be of help in calling to his attention a few of the unlimited possibilities along these lines.

The ideas contained herein are not new. However, they may serve to refresh your memory and with some changes serve a definite purpose in your annual campaign for student attendance.

Essay Contests

This comes first on the list because you are all familiar with its common usage and simplicity of arrangement. Hundreds of subjects are adaptable to essay contests. "How" and "Why" queries being the two most frequently used.

You can plan essay contests in co-operation with the local school faculty as regular weekly material for thought on the part of pupils.

Where possible, use subjects which pertain to coming attractions. Look through press books for such material as will be within scope of the pupils. A question can be augmented by either a descriptive paragraph or a few pertinent facts. If your bookings offer scant material for school compositions and essays there are always current topics which may appropriately fill the bill.

Make it necessary for essays to be turned in regularly to the judges. The English teacher, the Principal and yourself can act as judges. Announcement of the contests should be made from school bulletin boards and the Principal or English class teachers.

Amateur Critics

Everyone likes the chance now and then to criticize the other fellow's work, favorably or otherwise. Assisted by the newspaper's willingness to publish picture reviews by pupils, contact the faculty head with the idea of starting a Critics Club at school. Student members of this club are entitled to write reviews of current pictures at your theatre with the idea of winning Guest Tickets in addition to having their work published in the local paper. Guest Tickets can be made good for some coming attraction.

Judges should be chosen from the school, newspaper and theatre.

Your co-operating newspaper should be generous with publicity on a stunt of this sort. An advance story each week on the picture to be reviewed by the Critics Club of Blank High School or College should be definitely agreed upon. If your running time for one attraction is a week, it might possibly be arranged to publish the three best reviews during that time. Where change is daily or three times a week, select the most appropriate picture for the students to see and write about.

The prolific Floyd Fitzsimmons, now at the Grand Theatre, Vineland, N. J., in these columns gives the membership the gist of some of the ideas he has used to build up attendance and good will from intermediate schools and colleges. This article is more or less of an outline of Floyd's suggestions which were run about the same time last year in the Round Table, and is again published for the benefit of members who have requested practical exploitation slants to get business from these sources.

Ad Writing Contest

Here is another entree to the classroom. Schools and colleges everywhere are stressing advertising courses these days in lieu of old and unprofitable pursuits.

Contact the proper school authorities on allowing the pupils to participate in an ad writing contest. This can be arranged as a regular feature or a plug for one picture.

Materials for pupils to work with can be furnished through press sheets. Specifications and limitations as to size to be determined by the amount of space you are accustomed to using.

Geography Hounds

Maps fascinate most everyone. Try the pupils on familiarity with their own city. Perhaps the territory within the bounds of your noble city doesn't offer much in the way of fascination for local students. However, there is a possibility in the thought that to those pupils of Blank School who can best draw this familiar realm due credits will be given. That is, gifts or whatever you deem suitable.

Don't limit yourself to Blanktown. Should the picture which you are trying to ballyhoo be laid in Hawaii, it might be more to the point to have the boys and girls draw detailed maps of the Hawaiian Islands.

Town or city maps as suggested should contain all streets, rivers, important public buildings and the location of your theatre.

Word Contest

Here is a stunt that offers an opportunity to plug shows and your theatre heavily.

Student Hookups Fertile Field for Box Office Exploitation; Recommendations Below Can Be Used to Gain Patronage

Contact your local newspaper with the suggestion that they sponsor this theatre-newspaper Word Contest. The stunt need not be limited to schools, unless you prefer.

A lengthy advance story in the paper gives details of the contest. It is simple, yet effective in its purpose. The idea is that contestants are to take the theatre's name . . . break up the letters and re-assemble them into as many words as possible . . . exclusive of proper nouns and two-letter words, like "no," "an," etc. No words will be recognized unless they can be found in a standard dictionary or encyclopedia.

This same Word Contest can be worked with any single word picture title.

Song Writers

Another contest idea, but it has the faculty of drawing them no matter where it is run: It's called a Parody Contest. Following the same procedure as described in the Word Contest, co-operating with the local newspaper, folks are asked to try their hand at writing parodies. These parodies can be to any tune they desire . . . as long or short as they desire . . . only they must pertain to the local paper, your theatre or picture you are playing. At least some mention must be made in each one, to either of the above places.

If you have an organist at your theatre so much the better. He can add loads of fun to your program by singing the winning parodies.

Campus Personalities

A cameraman from the newspaper or some student (en confido) unsuspectingly snaps pictures of students as they perambulate hither and yon 'round the campus. They may be in groups or alone. The photographs are published in the paper. Those recognizing themselves can, upon proof, secure a Guest Ticket to your theatre. If the snapshot is of a group, circle one of the heads as a means of identification.

School and Class Nights

If your town has two or more schools then School Nights are the thing. If only one school, then arrange to hold Class Nights.

School Nights can be made competitive or individual affairs. To start with, secure some popular boy or girl from each school to act as Master of Ceremonies on respective nights. If there is a school band get them down to play on the stage with the M. C. leading the audience in a chorus of high school songs.

On other School Nights arrange to have dramatic talent of the school put on one act plays. They will be glad of the opportunity of securing such practice.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features which are finished or are in work, but to which release dates have not been assigned, are listed in "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the distributors. Where they vary, the change is probably due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1933, unless otherwise specified.

UPTURN TIDINGS

THERE'S a very busy desk in our office where Mr. George Schutz sits betimes in a vast clutter of papers, reports and technical volumes and mail from hither-and-yon, from which he emerges once a month with our Better Theatres section. This week he came up for air after a long period of meditative silence, waving sheets of figures, curves and statistics.

"From April to September of this year of 1933," he observed, "our figures show positively that there have been five hundred and ninety-eight (598) theatre openings, mostly reopenings of previously darkened houses, and furthermore that there are in progress no less than one hundred and eighty-five (185) theatre projects involving either new building or extensive reconditioning."

Furthermore Mr. Schutz finds authoritative sources estimating that about two and a half million dollars are to be spent in the next year in putting the motion picture exhibition plant in shape.

WANTS PATENT ON HELL

ARGUING about the rhetoric of motion picture titles, the very Congregational and Reverend R. Lee House of Newport News, Va., complains bitterly, as quoted in the Times-Herald of his city, that the picture producers have laid hands on "the very words with which religious truths are imparted." And "primary among these words are God, Heaven, Hell, Sin and Devil. The thing which I am protesting is the use of religious words for irreligious purposes. . . ." Perhaps he might register them with Miss Julia Kelly who runs the title registration bureau of the Hays office.

MR. LONG COMES ASHORE

THE appointment of Mr. Ray Long to the post of editorial executive of Columbia Pictures Corporation, announced by Mr. Harry Cohn, brings to the service of the motion picture the fullness of experience in the showmanship of the printed page and story telling, developed and demonstrated through two important magazine successes. Mr. Long first came into fame as the editorial administrator of the Red Book and its affiliated Blue Book and Green Book, and subsequently with Cosmopolitan.

Mr. Long in his magazine work was conspicuously an acute buyer of names, but somewhat more to the point, even though less conspicuously, he was a maker of names. One can recall at the moment three famous writers of fiction who achieved their successes substantially by filling Mr. Long's editorial prescriptions. And there have been many more.

Success in transplanting his methods and skill to the screen seems most probable. There was that about his Cosmopolitan which reminded one of the begilded glamours of the motion picture theatre at its moviest. Also Mr. Long's recently concluded sojourn under the palms and white shadows of the South Seas is an earnest of his continued taste for exotic romance, the dreams shared by the box office multitudes.

HARK, HARK! A CUSTOMER

OUR code weary and fevered brow was cooled not a little this week, when, turning over a stack of foreign mail, we came upon an inquiry from Mr. A. J. Selwyn-Dougan of Freetown, Sierra Leone, Africa, who feels there are great possibilities for the motion picture in his territory and would like to begin with an Edison peep show Kinetoscope, to be operated with a penny in the slot. Since this device was introduced only so recently as the spring of 1894 at 1155 Broadway, it is surprising that tidings of it should already have reached Sierra Leone.

SOME sanity still prevails in this industry, in spite of the code fever. Down in the Mayflower lobby, in Washington, the other night, Mr. R. B. Wilby of Atlanta laid aside exhibitor-labor issues to get really tense over the problems of the culture of Meconopsis Baileyi, the "blue poppy" from Thibet. It takes six months to germinate.

And Mr. Maurice McKenzie, assistant to Mr. Will Hays, called up last night, all out of breath, to ask, "Have you heard the news from California?"

"No," we replied in our most judiciously editorial manner. "Have they decided to establish an American consulate, or is it just an earthquake?"

"This is serious," Mr. McKenzie answered. "I'm talking about Oxnard, not Hollywood—— Deiner's new catalogue announces a petunia with a green border."

MISS SALLY RAND, Chicago's Aphrodite, is out on bond, pending appeal, so she can appear on stage and screen—thus keeping out of the ranks of the unemployed. It would seem that the least she could do would be to wear a Blue Eagle.

INTO THE FIELD

Into the field, there to mingle with and get the "slant" of both those who sell films to exhibitors and the exhibitors themselves, should every film-maker be sent at least annually, thinks MGM director Clarence Brown, now practising his preachment, en route to New York via plane. Putting "the names up in lights" and letting it go at that has lost thousands for showmen (unworthy of the name), says Director Brown, his reference being the failure of exhibitors fully to exploit "names" in films. "Selling effort should not be limited to pictures that need it." Star loaning he sees a boomerang to the lender. Long have exhibitors pleaded for such field investigation. . . .

FILMS — AND THE FAIR

Convinced, apparently, are industrialists, educators, of the value of the motion picture as a sales and promotional implement, is the claim of Bell & Howell, Chicago equipment manufacturers, in a relative study, with the World's Fair as laboratory. Interestingly indicated is the reaction to the obvious necessity of real entertainment in the films shown. Human interest is important, technicalities abhorrent. Size of picture occupies the study importantly, with the significant observation that better than 95 per cent of all Fair projectors are of 16 millimeters. Notable throughout the Fair has been the virtually universal use of the film as a means of message conveyance. . . .

COST CUTTING

Visioned by highly curious production staffs in Hollywood as perhaps shaving as much as 25 per cent from picture production costs is a new development in fast timing negative, lately made available by Eastman and DuPont. Elimination of set lights is appreciably a part, with the use of white sets instead of the customary drab colors, which require considerable extra illumination. The present necessity of players wearing colored garments (colored shirts for men in evening dress) would be obviated, reducing costuming costs as well. One more step forward. . . .

MOST POPULAR

"Still the most popular all over the world" is the cheering comment concerning Hollywood product brought from one of his recent European excursions by Arthur M. Loew in the interests of MGM, of which he is foreign chief. Last week on the Coast foreign authority Loew noted energetically, happily: "Sales . . . throughout the rest of the world have shown a sharp upturn during the past six months and we expect a highly successful year."

SOUTHERN JUNGLE

Wide and far flung are the vast hitherto unexplored areas of the globe which have fallen prey to the conquesting camera and the motion picture. Into the great jungle of the Tariano Indians in Southern Brazil, led by jungle-wise Harold Noice, explorer, will shortly push an MGM expedition, there to film "Jungle Red Men," under the direction of Richard Rosson. An innovation will be the extensive use of planes to transport equipment, supplies, men. Five months in the making have been plans, nine months will be the jungle occupancy of modern science, in the interests of entertainment—and producer profits. . . .

NOSTALGIA CURED

Fond is the memory of famed MGM screen actor Jean Hersholt for his native Denmark, readily does he understand the nostalgia of others, long here, for a home visit. Organized by Actor Hersholt is a California Danish Home Foundation, which, with the proceeds of Danish pictures he has made, shown in Danish lodges throughout the state, will permit California Danes, resident in the U. S. for 20 years or more, to revisit their native land, one each year. . . .

RUSSIAN CINEMA

To be cinematically dependent upon no other nation, to be absolutely self-sustaining in the field, is the avowed aim of Russia's U. S. S. R., whose vast domain now boasts 30,000 places equipped for films, last week in New York declared A. E. Shorin, research head of the Soviet State Electro-Technical Laboratories, bound home after two months. The Russian industry will produce its own raw stock, but for home consumption alone; make its own equipment, offer more than 200 features this year to a cinema-hungry populace. Researcher Shorin made an astounding attendance comparison: 1932, 1,000,000,000; 1916, 180,000. Truly universal is the screen. . . .

"SMOKING" THEM IN

Devious and often dubious are the means employed by enterprising showmen to entice patronage to the box office. Often unusual are the lengths to which showmen go for the comfort of the patronage, once inside. Not dubious, but at least unusual, is Port Collector Howard Cullman's newest enticement in his management of the original Roxy on New York's Seventh Avenue. "For the enjoyment of its patrons" the Roxy now offers cigarettes "with its compliments." Incidentally noted is Mr. Cullman's membership in the tobacco firm of Cullman Brothers. . . .

"PEG"

To many a film star, writer, beside the starring sisters, Norma, Constance, Natalie, had widowed Mrs. Margaret Talmadge been in effect "mother." To her daughters, neighbors, Hollywood advice-seekers she was affectionately "Peg." On her, Chaplin tried his "gags"; from her, writer Frances Marion sought reactions; from her, Richard Barthelmess and many another asked, got advice. It was a bright day in 1926 when Mrs. Talmadge took her eldest, Norma, to the Brooklyn Vitagraph studio, from their obscure home in that borough. In a few short years a weekly $25 leaped to weekly thousands. Last week in Hollywood "Peg" gave her last advice, succumbed to pneumonia. . . .

ACTIVE NRA

No sinecure, whatever the prestige attached thereto, is the post of chairman of the California division of the NRA, it is apparently being discovered by Jack L. Warner, Warner vice-president. Already, Chairman Warner reports, he has settled eight incipient strikes and taken action on a mere 3,914 complaints of NRA violation. Not easy rests the head of the NRA executive, as heretofore and currently demonstrated at Washington. . . .

ROSENBLATT'S CODE DRAFT LONG ON WAGE, SHORT ON DISPUTED POINTS

by TERRY RAMSAYE

For a long time the Texas delegation had been looking for a job for Hippolite (maybe his name is Joe) Chavannes, and at last they landed him one as chief clerk to Mr. Solomon A. Rosenblatt, Deputy Administrator for the motion picture code of the National Recovery Administration. On Wednesday, M. Chavannes' big moment arrived when he slid through a side door of the Hotel Mayflower in Washington, without his tie, which he had left in the multigraphing machine of his United States, incident to the production of ever and ever so many copies of a code for the motion picture industry.

He burst in upon the Jefferson Room of the hotel, where since four-thirty in the afternoon and up to five-ten, Mr. Solomon A. Rosenblatt had been passing the time of day with "the boys." The copies were passed out rapidly among the exhibitors and the delicate suggestion was made that they should retire elsewhere to study them.

ORGANIZED LABOR REGISTERS; SO DOES "THE LITTLE FELLOW"

At nine-ten Wednesday evening, Mr. Rosenblatt was presumed to be closeted with the representatives of the producers and distributors on the same subject. Of course the subject was not entirely new to them by this time.

Whereupon the lobby at Harvey's, and other well-known byways thereabouts, were entirely deserted. It appeared that everyone pertaining to the motion picture had gone into a consideration of the code.

The most superficial glance at that document indicated that organized labor had registered importantly; that complaints in behalf of "the little fellow" had registered also, and that mostly otherwise the motion picture might struggle along with most of its old difficulties and its new methods of technicalities as best it might.

In the code which Mr. Rosenblatt has thus submitted to the motion picture industry he has provided for nearly everybody. Gaffers are to get $1.16 2/3 per hour; and marbelizers, grainers and fur finishers, $1.40 per hour. Everything has been taken care of, including an okay for the American Federation of Labor in a manner apparently indicated by the Blue Eagle policy.

The most extraordinary attention has been paid to existing scales of labor in the studios and elsewhere. Minimums have been described for all manner of workmen, and whether you are a sign writer or a fur finisher you are almost sure to have been taken care of. There are many entertaining bypaths of the motion picture's Blue Eagle provisions—for instance, you might be an extra, classified at $7.50 per day, if "dumb," but with a word in your mouth you would be worth not less than $25 per diem.

In behalf of those who may object, the code calls for the organization of local grievance committees. They, it seems, may deal with any number of matters, principally controversial. They are set up, in substance, to do what the motion picture boards of trade used to do—in the event that they do actually come into operation.

Nothing is offered, so far as may be discovered, concerning "the right to buy," double features, or related controversial issues. The document concerned professed to say a great deal about this and that pertaining to a season's product, but lays down little for the man who has to make up his mind about a season's output.

Mr. Rosenblatt, in the fullness of his Broadway experience, has endeavored to take care of the problems of the motion picture, but they have been accumulating these many years.

Mr. Rosenblatt's code bore the legend, "Code for Fair Competition for the Motion Picture Industry (first revision): None of the provisions contained herein are to be regarded as having received the approval of the National Recovery Administration as applying to this industry." Full text starts on page 23.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE CODE DRAFT FROM ROSENBLATT

The NRA code submitted to the motion picture industry, at Washington, late Wednesday by Sol A. Rosenblatt, deputy administrator, fails to embrace many of the highly controversial trade practices over which various interests in the industry have been at odds since code drafting conferences began in May.

The right to buy motion pictures in the open market is not mentioned.

Nor is there a clause governing the showing of double features.

Premiums are left to the decision of 75 per cent of the exhibitors in each territory.

Block booking is taken care of by a 15 per cent cancellation clause.

Wages, hours of employment and working conditions for all branches are detailed, but the IATSE's demand for an operator for each projector was ignored.

Importation of motion pictures from abroad is not discussed.

Star Raiding Not Mentioned

Designated playdates by distributors would not be permitted in cases of flat rentals, but would be allowed, under certain conditions, with percentage playing arrangements.

Forcing of short subjects with feature sales would be controlled to a degree, and in proportion to the number of features contracted for as it relates to the number of features required by the exhibitor.

"Star raiding" by studios was not mentioned, reputedly because no solution had been found as yet.

Substitutions of motion pictures by distributors would be controlled under certain conditions.

The so-called "optional standard exhibition contract" is made a part of the relations between exhibitor and distributor.

Arbitration for all kinds of disputes in all branches is provided for.

Local clearance and zoning boards are set up.

Overbuying Outlawed

The usual "code authority" is established, as in all codes, to administer the pact and to act as a "supreme body," in matters of appeals, and otherwise.

Virtually all disputes between buyer and seller would be adjudicated by "local grievance boards," membership of which would comprise distributors and exhibitors, with "code authority" having official representation.

Overbuying would be outlawed where it appears to be designed to curb competition.

Minimum admissions would be enforceable, also as they are affected by two-for-ones, lotteries and the like.

Producers would be restrained from conspiring to prevent the rental of studio facilities to other producers.

Minimum wages and maximum hours are established for scores of crafts, with most of non-executive workers getting a 40-hour week and studio mechanical aides getting a 36-hour work week.

Producers would not be permitted to "inveigle" an author, dramatist or actor engaged in legitimate theatre work from his obligation to sign a motion picture contract.

Attempts to negotiate with an "outside" or associate producer to join the staff of another studio would not be permitted at any time prior to 60 days before the termination of the expiring contract.

"Specials" must be offered to regular theatre accounts, and must not be "sold away" to competitors, according to a distributor clause.

Actors Quit Academy

Twenty-six Hollywood actors resigned this week from the Academy Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in protest against reported proposed Government control of star salaries, under the film code. They sent Mr. Rosenblatt a telegram of explanation. Mr. Rosenblatt was quoted last week as denying any action was to be taken on star salaries, or their control.

Those who walked out included James Cagney, Frank Morgan, Adolphe Menjou, Fredric March, Gary Cooper, Robert Montgomery, Chester Morris, George Bancroft, George Raft, Ralph Bellamy, Warren William, Boris Karloff, Kenneth Thompson and Paul Muni. The 12 who later joined the move were Ann Harding, Otto Kruger, Eddie Cantor, Charles Butterworth, the Four Marx Brothers, Ralph Morgan, Miriam Hopkins, Spencer Tracy and Lee Tracy.

The trouble began when it was rumored that on his recent visit to the White House, Mr. Rosenblatt had been told by the President to incorporate some provision limiting "excessive" actor salaries. Examination of the recovery act does not show any provision for maximum salaries.

NRA Advisors Appointed

Mr. Rosenblatt consistently has denied the story, but a new angle was injected this week by the added report that the White House discussion was not aimed specifically at actors' salaries but at bonuses and other excessive payments to executives in addition to their salaries.

In Hollywood there was some talk that directors would join the actor-insurgents in forming an independent Actors'-Directors' Guild similar to the Writers' Guild. John Howard Lawson, president of the Screen Writers' Guild, returning to Hollywood from Washington Tuesday, said: "We feel that a most constructive step has been taken toward a new deal, not only for writers but for actors and directors as well, in preventing the Academy from controlling creative workers."

N. D. Golden, head of the motion picture division of the Department of Commerce, and Joe Brandt, former president of Columbia, were appointed official advisors for the NRA. Mr. Brandt frequently has been consulted by the deputy administrator. His appointment will expire when the final code is signed by the President. Mr. Golden was appointed advisor on the supply dealers' code.

Still Fight Duals Ban

Jacob Schechter, counsel for the Federation of the Motion Picture Industry, this week expressed the intention of independent producers and distributors to battle for a code provision that the individual exhibitor retain the right to designate his own policy on double featuring.

Twenty-nine independent producers on the coast wired Mr. Schechter Tuesday that any restriction on the duals policy would cut their output 70 per cent.

A lengthy document, submitted to General Johnson and Mr. Rosenblatt, by Edward Golden, sales director of Monogram, bitterly attacked the position of Fred S. Meyer, president of the MPTO of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, who previously had submitted a brief against double features to the NRA.

New Contract Delayed

Unless the industry code, when adopted, is made retroactive, indications are that a standard form of licensing agreement will not come into general use in the industry until the 1934-35 selling season. The industry's code deliberations have precluded use of the optional standard contract, which large distributors accepted last January. Individual company forms are being used.

Many Attend Final Session

Among the executives attending the Washington code deliberations this week were: E. A. Schiller, Loew's; J. Robert Rubin, MGM; Lester Cowan, Academy; Louis Nizer, attorney; Jacob Schechter, attorney; Will Hays, MPPDA; Benjamin Bernstein, Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California; Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA; L. A. Solomon, Showmen's Pictures; Harold S. Bareford and Joe Hazen, Warner attorneys; Jack Cohn, Columbia; William Jaffee, Columbia attorney.

Others on hand were: R. H. Cochrane, Universal; Nathan Burkan, attorney; Harry H. Thomas, First Division; Al Friedlander, First Division; W. Ray Johnston, Monogram; Edward Golden, Monogram; Mitchell Klupt, attorney; Arthur Schwartz, attorney; Sam Dembow, Jr., Publix; George Skouras, Skouras Theatres; Pat Casey, producers' labor representative; Harry Warner, Warner Bros.; Felix Feist, MGM; Sidney R. Kent, Fox Film; Edwin Loeb, attorney; George Schaefer, Paramount; Nicholas M. Schenck, Loew's; David Palfreyman, MPPDA; Willard Patterson, Edward Raferty and Lester Martin.

Supply Code Hearing Halted

A public hearing on the code for motion picture supply houses, held Tuesday, was abruptly terminated when it was learned that the National Theatre Supply Company and the Independent Theatre Supply Dealers' Association, the last named with a membership of 26 companies, represented only about 38 per cent of the industry, in which there are 96 companies. Kenneth Dameron, assistant to Deputy Administrator Arthur Whiteside, ordered all groups to meet with him in preparation of a more representative code, with a public hearing later.

Mr. Rosenblatt this week made repeated efforts to bring peace to the broadcasting industry, representatives of which last week threatened to "walk out" on him in a body when he announced he would insist upon inclusion in their code of certain labor provisions. The next public hearing is October 17.

598 THEATRES OPENED IN 5 MONTHS; MANY NEW PROJECTS LAUNCHED

Hundreds of Houses Open in Season Normally Marked by Closings; Supply Dealers Report Speeding Up of Buying

by GEORGE SCHUTZ

The motion picture theatre business, it definitely appears, is rallying to the tangible improvement already achieved, and to the encouragement engendered, by the Government's recovery program. It has been opening hundreds of theatres during a period of the year normally marked exclusively by closings. It is reconditioning at an accelerated rate properties long allowed to suffer unprecedented neglect. Here is the record:

Openings (nearly all reopenings):

April	120
May	150
June	115
July	86
August	127
Total (April to September)	598

Projects (new construction and reconditioning):

April	42
May	37
June	35
July	48
Total (April to September)	215

The Projects table, however, does not indicate more than a small percentage of the actual amount of reconditioning of all kinds that has been undertaken or planned since the first of August. These figures have been taken directly from reports received by BETTER THEATRES' SERVICE BUREAU for the information of manufacturers and dealers in theatre equipment and furnishings, and in their reference to reconditioning represent only projects involving structural changes or rehabilitation of rather extensive character.

Many Other Projects

Inclusion of those houses which have been and are receiving the new "wide range" sound apparatus or other restricted amounts of equipment, or being treated merely to new paint, new carpeting and so on, would multiply the figures given here many times. This is shown by the absence from the reports from which the figures were taken, of many reconditioning projects otherwise known to be under way, involving in most cases no fundamental changes, yet representing substantial improvement in operating conditions, and also representing many thousands of dollars worth of equipment and decorating materials in the aggregate.

Reports from leading dealers in theatre supplies that a decided flurry in buying is on, are corroborated in a survey just completed by the wellknown New York theatre architect, John Eberson, who estimates on the basis of his findings that at least two and a half million dollars will be spent during the next 18 months on the reconditioning of motion picture theatres.

This huge outlay, concentrated in such a short period of time, is accounted for by the neglect to which theatres generally have been subjected during the depression.

"Except in the field of small theatres," said Mr. Eberson in discussing the significance of his survey, "there will be relatively little construction of new theatres for quite some time. But a vast number of theatres have been allowed to become so rundown that a great deal is to be done—must be done—to put the theatres we already have in proper condition."

Expect Equipment Cost Rise

Mr. Eberson's survey was made in preparation for a new department established by the National Theatre Supply Company, with him at the head. Creation of this department, it is understood, was in direct response to the current theatre rehabilitation movement. Its function is to make surveys of the needs of theatres in new equipment and architectural modernization, recommend suitable changes and supervise the reconditioning work.

One of the factors actuating immediate reconditioning is the expectancy of a rapid rise in the prices of equipment and furnishings, partly as a result of the NRA. Even during the summer the increase in some lines was 25 per cent in the period of a single month, portending what would likely take place when the full effect of the Recovery Act would be felt. Higher wage scales in labor also look toward a gradually increasing cost of installation.

Circuits Plan Reconditioning

Among the larger circuits reconditioning is being planned as an integral program. Loew's, RKO Radio and Warners already have reported the development of broad reconditioning programs, complete details of which are promised shortly.

In the table on openings given in the foregoing, the figures represent an actual count of reports received by MOTION PICTURE HERALD and the Film Boards of Trade. The great majority of the openings represent the return of established houses to operation, not new theatres. Every state in the Union is included, with no section of the country reporting a preponderance of openings that is not to be explained on the basis of population.

New Missouri Taxes Will Be Considered in Session

Additional taxation in Missouri for unemployment relief and state revenue increases will be considered by the state legislature on October 17, the date set by Governor Park for the convening of the body in special session. It has not been revealed whether the governor would recommend a general sales tax or selective levies. A decision is expected in a few days.

Cameramen Under Fire in Cuba Riot

In the endless history of the newsreel cameraman last week in Havana was fashioned another episode, during the filming of rioting and street fighting betweeen Communists and Cuban troops. The nerve-racking ordeal of "getting the picture" while under fire is clearly indicated in the story of Hugo Johnson, Paramount cameraman, and Joe Gibson, Universal ace.

Even cameramen have nerves, as a letter from Mr. Johnson to W. P. Montague, Paramount assignment editor, testifies, with its: "When can we expect to get out of here? . . . The thing is getting on our nerves. I had a narrow squeak when a bullet glanced off the magazine of my camera. Fun is fun, but that was a bit too much." Mr. Johnson goes on to detail the capture of the cameramen and their equipment and the loss of thousands of feet of exposed and unexposed film. Characteristic is Mr. Johnson's remark: "It certainly broke my heart to lose what I had, as I was on the best location possible. . . ."

Mr. Gibson, filming the same disturbance for Universal, was shot in the legs by the soldiers, who claimed to have mistaken his camera for a machine gun. Mr. Gibson was later removed to his home in Miami, where he is reported recovering. Allyn Butterfield, editor, asked Secretary of State Cordell Hull to investigate the shooting.

Following Mr. Johnson's letter, A. J. Richards, acting editor of Paramount News, cabled President Grau San Martin of Cuba, protesting the incident and demanding protection, which was assured him by the Cuban executive in an immediate reply.

Jack Hess Heads Ads for Majestic

Jack Hess, theatre publicity director, ex-newspaper man and more recently director of advertising and publicity for Paramount Pictures and Publix Theatres, as well as at R-K-O, is now affiliated with Phil Goldstone and Majestic Pictures in Hollywood. Mr. Hess will handle West Coast publicity and will originate the advertising and publicity campaigns on forthcoming Majestic productions.

Hatch and Newman Start New Exchange in New York

Stanley W. Hatch and Arthur Newman, both well known for many years in motion picture distribution in the East, opened on Monday a New York exchange called Beverly Hills Productions, which, besides Beverly product, formerly handled by Invincible, will also distribute in this territory numerous series and individual subjects of one, two and three-reel length.

EXHIBITORS PROTEST TO ROOSEVELT AGAINST DEMANDS MADE BY IATSE

Declare I. A. T. S. E.'s Call For One Operator to Each Machine and for a 36-Hour Week Would Ruin Them

[The following resume of labor developments preceded the announcement by Sol A. Rosenblatt on Wednesday of his film code draft, which ignored the IATSE demand for one projectionist to each machine and would govern strikes, disputes and other relations between employer and employee.]

While motion picture representatives, gathered this week at Washington for another NRA code conference, appeared to be more than a little concerned over the nature of some of the trade practice clauses which they will be forced to accept, the labor situation in the theatre field became more involved, with the following developments:

Independent exhibitors were protesting to President Roosevelt against the demands of the I.A.T.S.E. for a code clause compelling owners to engage a projectionist for each machine, and for a 36-hour week, at existing scales, as against the exhibitors' proposal for a 44-hour week.

Allied States Association was preparing to "tell the story" of alleged labor violences at theatres in order to obtain governmental support to end such so called "lawlessness."

American Federation of Labor—with which the I.A.T.S.E. is affiliated—demand five-day week of 30 hours, threatening to fight for inclusion of such a clause in codes already in effect, also those being written.

Exhibitors were understood to be preparing to flood the White House with protests against demands of the IATSE for inclusion in the film code of a labor clause which would compel theatre owners to employ an operator for each projector.

Appearing on behalf of union projectionists at the industry's public code hearing at Washington, September 12, William C. Elliott, president of the IATSE, demanded a projectionist for each machine, declaring his proposal would put 58 per cent more operators to work. Also, he demanded a 36-hour maximum work week. Exhibitors took a stand for a 44-hour week.

Immediately, owners of small theatres condemned the demands both for a 36-hour week and an operator for each reproducer. They charged unfairness and said the small exhibitor would be ruined.

Kansas City Protests to President

A series of denunciations from various sections of the exhibitors' ranks came to a climax with word from Kansas City that the Independent Theatre Owners there had sent letters to President Roosevelt and to General Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, appealing for aid in their fight against the IATSE proposals.

Agreeing that the IATSE proposals would work hardships on independents, B. B. Kahane, president of Radio, stopping off at Kansas City, en route to Hollywood, told reporters that "labor demands are no problem to the affiliated circuits, because we have had from two to four operators manning the machines right along. It is a difficult problem for the independent exhibitors, however."

Mr. Kahane said producers and distributors had increased their overhead between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000 a year by voluntarily complying with NRA provisions.

Allied Acts on Violences

Allied States Association launched late last week what appears to be the first attempt to gather together on a nationwide scale factual evidence pertaining to labor violence in motion picture theatre disputes. Allied proposes to "tell the story" of lawless tactics allegedly employed by theatre labor to intimidate the public into staying away from theatres during disputes.

Communications were addressed by Allied to each of the nation's exhibitor leaders, who were requested to compile and forward to Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied, a record of all cases of violence.

Said Mr. Myers in the letter: "The motion picture industry has suffered greatly by reason of the fact that labor disputes affecting theatre operation have been accompanied by all manner of lawlessness, including intimidation, destruction of property, violence and killings.

"The theatres, being dependent on the patronage of the public in large numbers, are vulnerable in such situations, as dread of bombings and violence acts as a deterrent to attendance and forces the theatres to make settlements on scales much higher than those obtaining in other industries."

"This office," said Mr. Myers, referring to Allied's headquarters at Washington, "has been requested to cooperate in research work being done by certain semi-public agencies cooperating with the Government in the eradication of crime. We believe that the compilation of authentic information relative to the use of violence in wage disputes with the theatres may lead to the enactment of provisions for some other method of settling such disputes."

In this connection, it appears that with the Government legislating wages and hours of labor, through the industry codes, some employer group eventually will request the Administration to legislate relations between employer and employee in order to halt strikes during the period of the NRA. The obvious means appears to be legislation requiring adjudication of labor controversies by the NRA Labor Board before strikes are called.

Mr. Myers asked the exhibitor leaders to compile and forward, not later than October 5, an authentic history of labor disputes between exhibitors and employees in each territory, from 1920 to date, requesting also the name of the theatre involved, the nature of the "outrage" and the injury to persons or damage to property.

The situation involving labor violence was injected into the code hearings before Sol A. Rosenblatt, NRA deputy, about three weeks ago, when Robert B. Wilby, of Atlanta, protested against "the acceptance of the labor scales embodied in the code presented, because these existing scales have been extorted by duress and physical violence." "Furthermore," continued Mr. Wilby, "this violence has been addressed at and aimed toward the intimidation of the public."

Mr. Wilby was quickly silenced by Mr. Rosenblatt, who suggested it was a matter for the U. S. Attorney General, but not before Mr. Wilby had the opportunity of publicly exclaiming that he had received a telegram from the South telling about the bombing, again, of one of his theatres, and the discovery of dynamite at his home.

AFL Declares for 30-Hour Week

Possibilities of further difficulties with labor in placing the country under the Blue Eagle developed early this week at Washington, where the American Federation of Labor, meeting in annual convention, attacked the various industry codes already adopted, or under consideration, as offering no real solution of the unemployment problem.

Only a five-day week of 30 hours, with pay at present levels, can solve the question, declared the report of the Federation's executive council, and it was suggested that the Federation not only demand such provisions in codes yet to be passed upon, but also seek to reopen those already adopted.

The report criticized the employing groups for alleged abuses of the recovery act by providing for longer working weeks than are specified and charged failure of the recovery administration to support labor in its demand that it should be represented on the code control committee.

"Forty and 48 hours—and even longer in those exempted groups, such as water and repair crews—have been set by codes and agreements when the figures showed that no longer than 30 hours per week could be allowed if we were to find jobs for all. While 2,000,000 have been put back to work, 11,000,000 are still without opportunity to earn an income. It is deliberate concession to selfish interests and stubborn maintenance of special privilege which creates unrest and disatisfaction among workers who are honestly seeking to cooperate for public welfare," said the report.

Senator Robert Wagner's appeal to employers and employees "to forget all feuds, to discard the outworn notion that gains result from harrowing conflicts," also indicated that the National Labor Board at Washington, of which he is the head, will be continued when the "emergency" situation has cleared.

WORD FROM BRISBANE ON DEMANDS OF LABOR

Mr. Arthur Brisbane, editorialist for William Hearst's group of city newspapers, believes that the government's problem just now seems to be strikes, rather than hours and wages. Writing this week about the demands of the American Federation of Labor for a five-day, 30-hour week, Mr. Brisbane said: "An important point is sometimes overlooked, namely, that in planning hours and wages you must also plan for somebody to pay the wages."

THE CAMERA REPORTS

ON EUROPEAN JAUNT. Sam E. Morris, vice president of Warner Brothers, snapped on deck just before the SS. Paris quit her New York pier for another long pull to Cherbourg.

IN EAST. Two leading comedy producers, Al Christie (above) and Jack White (below) who will produce for Educational at the former Paramount studios in Astoria, Long Island.

BRITAIN SENDS ANOTHER. Frances Drake, Paramount acquisition on a long-term contract, as she arrived in Los Angeles, last stop on her trip from England, where she starred.

VERSATILE CAMERA CRANE. Accredited to Victor Raby, Educational Studio technical expert. It is designed to move smoothly around a set with a vertical range from the ground to 15 feet above. It is described as having a simple counterweight balance adjusted to handle weights of from 150 to 1,000 pounds.

NOTED EDITOR SIGNED. Harry Cohn (left), president of Columbia, with Ray Long as the latter became editorial executive at the Columbia studio. Mr. Long is considered an extraordinarily keen judge of American interests in fiction. He edited Red Book for seven years, and Cosmopolitan for thirteen.

WHIMSICAL. And Barbara Stanwyck is not often such. This is one of a group of studies made upon her completion of Warner's "Ever in My Heart."

IN TWO MORE. (Right) Alice White, youthful veteran, in Universal's "Dangerous to Women" and "Good Red Bricks."

WALTZ APPEAL. Brought Gladys Baxter (left) and Peggy Wood, stars of the Strauss operetta, "Die Fledermaus," to the Little Carnegie in New York for the premiere of "Waltz Time," Gaumont-British production.

SELECTED FOR SCREEN TESTS. Busby Berkeley, dance director of Warner musicals, with four girls (whose names were not divulged) chosen during his stay in New York as candidates for positions in the chorus of future productions. Berkeley came to New York for the opening of "Footlight Parade," which contains his latest efforts in the creation of cinematic dance spectacles.

MAIN STREET IS LOOKING UP; JOBS INCREASE AND WAGES IMPROVE

Survey of Nation's Byways by Ross Federal Service Shows Definite Improvement in Small Factory and Farming Areas

Small-town business throughout the United States definitely is on the upturn.

The story of participation of the village and hamlet in the economic rehabilitation of the nation presents a situation which heretofore has been given little if any attention in the daily press. The progress of the key city, the large manufacturing centers for months have been given column after column of type, with facts and figures showing definite improvement in various large localities. The press of the country has been concerned with the effects of the "New Deal" in such situations as Chicago, San Francisco, New York. Now comes specific information of a notable quickening of industrial and business activity in places like Sylacauga, Ala., with a population of 4,115; Wallace, Idaho, with 3,634, and hundreds more whose very existence probably never has been generally recognized.

Film Business Hinges On Small Town Gains

Directly concerned in this awakening is the motion picture industry, dependent as it is, not only upon what course other industries take, but upon the small town—the backbone of the country—for its existence.

The information comes as the result of an exhaustive survey by Ross Federal Service into the byways of the nation. Originally intended as a check upon industrial activity and the indices of employment, a survey instigated solely to verify its own impressions of improvement, the Ross report has become an invaluable piece of documentary evidence of small-town conditions.

Ross Service's survey shows that there have been definite increases in wages throughout the country; that the public is beginning to spend, and that money is circulating everywhere more freely than at any time since 1930. Business leaders in almost all the 866 small town localities checked, are said to be looking forward to a more prosperous autumn and winter than they have known since the retrogression began. Widespread improvement in general business conditions in these localities already has been noted.

Ross Service set out to estimate the nature of the situation in the small communities some weeks ago and discovered that not only have wages been increased generally, but businesses, factories and stores idle for months have reopened or expanded forces and operations.

Factories Add to Payrolls; Crops Good

The survey, which covers a 30-day period prior to August 15, shows that many factories have increased production and working staffs. Crops in general are expected to be excellent this year, and where farm prices have not increased materially, great reliance has been placed upon governmental aid for the farmer's welfare this winter, the report stated. Cotton communities are looking to payment by the Government for destroyed cotton to promote recovery during the autumn, and higher produce prices are expected to place farmers in a position to buy.

According to the Ross investigation receipts in motion picture theatres are substantially up in some parts of the country.

Following is a state-by-state listing of the number of towns reporting, with their combined population, a notation of improved conditions, localities in which no improvements have been noted and those in which conditions are worse.

These 866 towns surveyed represent typical situations in strategic spots throughout the country:

*The combined population includes that of only the towns covered by actual reports. Totals of population of each complete section are not available, but must be at least 30 per cent more.

The number of sections refers only to those towns covered by actual reports. At least double that number are mentioned in the body of the report.

Improved conditions may be caused by one or more of the following activities: Increased employment; increased retail sales; increased production; higher prices for farm, mine, or forest products; expenditures for public works; new industries; improved banking and financial position; real estate activity, etc.

SOME TOWNS DOUBLE EMPLOYMENT

and other sources have indicated this in many small-town localities.

More banks are reopening, it was said, and the majority of those still closed anticipate an early resumption.

Employment Increased In Practically All Towns

Employment has increased notably in practically every community, in many cases directly due to the National Recovery Act, and re-employment in agricultural areas increased during the summer due to the Federal Farm Program and seasonal activity, the report states.

Pertinent to the motion picture industry, in localities where conditions are so vastly improved, there is more money to be spent with more persons in a position to spend it. This means greater business for the retail merchant, including the exhibitor.

An account of actual happenings during the 30-day period, together with facts and figures, showing the amount of re-employment and the population of the towns and areas surveyed, follows in detail:

Alabama Towns Open More Jobs

In Alabama, for example, figures show that in the small towns in the vicinity of Birmingham, the necessity for government relief agencies has diminished during the past two and one-half months, reflecting a huge increase in re-employment.

Around Sylacauga, 4,115 population and a cotton center, there were 1,200 more jobs. Only one mill is closed and that is expected to reopen this autumn. Retail sales in the 30 days prior to August 15 were larger than in any previous 30 days of the current year.

The government highway to Boulder Dam in and around Kingman, Arizona, which has a population of 2,275, is expected to improve conditions there, and business in general has been picking up. In Bisbee, 500 mine workers had been increased from three to five days a week.

50 Per Cent Increase In Arkansas Town

Batesville, Ark., population 4,484, reported a 50 per cent increase in employment, with state highway and government work on canal lock well under way. General improvement since inauguration of the NRA has been noted.

Dumas, Ark., one of the smallest towns in the survey, with a population of 1,669, reported 150 re-employed in lumber work during the 30 days previous to August 15. Little Rock, the capital, showed an increase of 15 per cent in employment, with re-employment of 300 more men in lumber work expected during the early part of this month. Sparkman, Ark., population 711, has seen 40 go back to work within 30 days.

'54 of 55 Towns in California Improve

Reports for the state of California showed conditions better than for many months. Out of 55 towns reporting, 54 noted definite improvements, employment gaining 5 to 50 per cent. Tourist business has helped department store sales, theatres, and hotels. Small towns, especially, were benefiting by the NRA and the Home Loan program.

The six reporting towns in Colorado, with a combined population of 75,964, declared the outlook optimistic, but as against slight re-employment in stores, there was a seasonal falling off in mining activities. With the reopening of colleges and gold and coal mines, however, and possible development of oil fields, the entire territory is expected to improve materially.

Connecticut towns, with the exception of Hartford, which had a 45 per cent increase in employment, reported little activity along these lines, but individual company payrolls have been increased in various sections.

In Delaware there has been an improvement in farm product prices. Increased wages throughout the state and employment in many instances depend upon farm products. Manufacturing towns, like Georgetown, Lewes and Milton, reported large increases in employment.

Florida's reporting sections showed little change.

The state of Georgia reported widespread re-employment due to the NRA, and concurrently greatly improved business. Stores have taken on new help, prices have risen materially and buying power has been increased. Many mills are still closed, however. Athens, population 18,192, has seen 856 men and women return to work, and the smaller towns all reported proportionate increases. The chief reason given for re-employment was the NRA, but the seasonal activities of tobacco and cotton harvesting have added their share. Peanuts and livestock also have contributed.

Building Activity Helps in Idaho

In Idaho, agricultural and building activities have resulted in marked improvements. Caldwell, with a 4,974 population, noted a 20 per cent increase, and Wallace, with a population of 3,634, put 300 men to work within the 30-day period. Contracts for bridges and roads and an increase in commodity prices also contributed to the forward movement.

Neighboring towns of Aurora, Ill., have returned many men to work, the steel industry and railroad yards accounting for the increase. In a number of other Illinois towns re-employment ran as high as 70 per cent with tens of thousands returning to work. Agriculture, building projects, factories and stores all have contributed their share. In Champaign, population 20,348, the opening of the University of Illinois last month brought 10,000 students. Federal loans to home owners and farmers are expected to stimulate purchasing power. The coal mining situation was negative due to strikes, but public works activity helped. Reforestation camps have benefited many sections, but the greatest improvement has been in the farm situation. Prices have increased and great benefits have been noted in rural communities.

Re-employment up to 50 per cent in many Indiana situations was noted with steel, public works programs and bank reopenings contributing.

Iowa reported general improvement, with the agricultural area benefited by produce prices. Decorah, population 4,581, showed an employment increase of 100 per cent, the chief industry there being the "L. Tatis" Radio Corp. In Hampton, 300 men returned to work and restricted banks were expected to release 50 per cent of deposits shortly.

Projects and Fixed Prices for Kansas

State highway projects and governmental fixing of farm produce were expected to improve conditions in Kansas greatly. There have been slight increases in employment. In many sections factories have restored full time, but oil refining was almost at a standstill. This, however, was before the signing of the oil code.

Employment increases in Kentucky ranged from 10 to 100 per cent, nearly all towns contributing, and new construction, as in most other states. In some parts the coal mines have shown marked improvement. Textiles were showing unusual activity. Pikeville, population 3,376, sent over 500 men back to work and increased wages 10 to 20 per cent.

Of 16 towns surveyed in Maine, 14 reported a slight improvement. Many payrolls have been doubled and most factories are running full time. Good prices for potatoes were in prospect.

In Maryland every town surveyed reported at least a slight increase in employment. The sea food industry was showing great improvement and farm prices were well up. In Grisfield, 3,385 population, 845 persons were re-employed.

Massachusetts Towns Show Big Improvement

Massachusetts, with 10 towns reporting, showed most marked improvement, particularly among some of the textile towns, Fall River a notable instance with payrolls the largest since 1928.

Michigan, despite its banking difficulties, reported much better business conditions generally due to the NRA and to steadily increasing farm prices. In Alma, with 6,734 population, 325 persons previously supported by the Public Welfare Board have found employment. In other towns banks were reopening. All automobile factories helped increase employment and Henry Ford was reported to be planning a huge glass furnace in Gladstone. Mining companies indicated early resumption of ore shipments. In Grand Rapids, 4,750 more were employed.

12 of 15 Minnesota Towns Report Gains

Minnesota's 15 reporting towns indicated improvement in 12 and no improvement in three. A seasonal increase in agricultural activities has been noted, but business generally was said to be slow due to low prices. Re-employment has been steady, if small, ranging up to 25 per cent. In Fergus Falls, population 9,389, application has been made for federal aid in construction of a new sewerage system which would employ 2,000 men.

WARNER ADDS FOUR NEW SOUND STAGES

In line with the general upward trend of business and re-employment throughout the country, Warner Bros. is planning immediate construction of four new stages at the Burbank plant, at a cost of $300,000. Jack L. Warner said construction will start at the earliest possible date. Upwards of 200 men will be employed.

Nine towns in Mississippi reported and all showed improvement. Lumber mills, building projects and textiles were responsible. Baldwin, population 1,106, has re-employed 50; Belzoni, with 2,735 population, 500, and Natchez, 13,422 population, 400.

Employment increases averaged 25 per cent throughout Missouri, with individual situations running as high as 100 per cent. Kansas City and small towns around it reported conditions improved 100 per cent. Approximately 5,000 persons have been added to Kansas City payrolls. Automobile distributors were said to be employing 1,000 persons over normal. Fayette, population 2,630, re-employed 1,300, Moberly and Columbia 800.

Montana Mining Adds to Workers

Mining activities in Montana were vastly improved, the plant at Anaconda running full time and 600 the employment increase. A dry summer retarded agriculture, but highway and dam construction was getting under way.

Nebraska's industries, chiefly farming, were on the upturn, and there was a generally higher price for produce and livestock. In Columbus, population 6,898, employment was up 10 per cent and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's Columbus-Genoa power project will employ 2,000. Aurora, 2,715 population, reported a 50 per cent increase in jobs.

The only two towns in Nevada covered by the survey were Las Vegas and Reno. There has been an employment increase of 500 men in Reno mines and the constant transient trade was stimulating prices. Re-employment in Las Vegas territory will be on public works, and Boulder Dam, if work goes on a six-hour day, will employ 1,200 men.

Three New Hampshire towns reported improved conditions, the lumber industry predominating in re-employment.

18,485 More Employed In 11 New Jersey Towns

Eleven New Jersey towns reported a combined increase in employment totaling 18,485. Most are manufacturing centers, but the two university towns, New Brunswick and Princeton, the homes of Rutgers and Princeton universities, expected better winter seasons than in four years. In the small towns many factories were reopening and restoring full time.

While the mining industry in New Mexico has been entirely suspended in some sections, the livestock market was reported excellent. Employment increases have been slight.

Steady re-employment was reflected throughout New York state, with increases from 5 to 60 per cent and, as in most states, the small localities showed the largest percentages. For example, in Cortland, population 15,043, a 60 per cent increase was noted and indications at the time were that the figure soon would reach 100 per cent. Industries were on full schedule; construction work was under way and reforestation camps were doing their share.

Textile, tobacco, livestock and agricultural activities have turned North Carolina towns toward better times than for years, with steady increase in employment and wages in many cases 50 per cent higher. In Enfield, one of the smallest towns in the state, 1,000 returned to work during July and August. The town has a population of 2,234. In Gastonia, 17,093 population, 5,000 returned.

Slight Improvement In North Dakota

North Dakota reported slight increase in employment. There was, however, a freer spending of money, the report stated. The state depends largely on agriculture and crops have been generally poor.

Financial improvement and far greater earning power throughout Ohio are expected to lead to increased retail business. Employment increases have ranged from 5 to 60 per cent. Many banks were still closed, but most were expected to reopen shortly. Wages have been greatly increased.

Oklahoma towns generally were contributing toward increased employment and crops bore promise of greatly improved conditions. Government and public works building projects were expected to put many to work soon. Employment increases throughout 13 towns averaged 20 per cent. Improvement of the oil situation was awaited. In Sapulpa, population 10,533, there has been an increase of 500 employed, while in Ponca City, 16,136 population, 2,000 to 2,500 have returned to work.

The lumber business in Oregon was beginning to show marked improvement. Employment was increasing steadily. Higher wheat prices will help generally, it was predicted. In Ontario it was reported that two-thirds of the population of 1,941 would be re-employed when the fish canneries reopen soon.

Pennsylvania, which contributed the largest number of towns to the survey, was 100 per cent unanimous that there have been definite improvements. Hosiery, steel, retail, railroads, coal and numerous manufacturing industries were increasing wages, adding employees and stepping up production. In spite of various coal strikes, several new mines will open this month and in November. Public highways were under construction. Bangor, 5,824 population, re-employed 500 during July and August. Ebensburg, 3,063 population, noted employment increases totaling 2,500.

Rising cotton prices and rising wages have been instrumental in pulling South Carolina's retail business out of a severe slump. Employment was on the upward trend. Florence, 14,774 population, increased employment by 2,500.

A complete crop failure marked the situation in South Dakota, but in spite of this the NRA was causing considerable re-employment and higher wages. Large brewery construction was reported underway.

On the whole Tennessee presented an improved condition, although in many parts re-employment has barely made itself felt. Payrolls in the small factories have increased in some parts. In Shelbyville, population 5,010, employment has been increased 50 per cent.

Oil activity and the building of flood control systems reflected the participation of Texas in national recovery. Employment increases averaged 15 per cent. In Lufkin, 7,311 population, 1,000 were re-employed during July. One and a half million dollars are to be spent on a flood control system in McAllen, employing from 150 to 1,000 men for a year. Great activity was noted in the cotton market. San Antonio reported higher wages for practically 90 per cent of labor.

In Utah, chiefly concerned with farming and mining, the unsatisfactory crops were retarding recovery. Considerable construction work has helped employment. The mining situation was not as greatly improved as had been expected.

The Vermont granite quarry strike having been settled, men were back at work in Waterbury, St. Johnsbury, Winooski and Montpelier.

Coal mines in Virginia were running six days a week and the railroads had more business than in three years. Employment was up 25 per cent, with small towns like Bedford, population 3,713, increasing jobs 60 per cent.

Big Project For Washington

The Government appropriated $30,000,000 for the Coulee Dam project and this huge undertaking will affect virtually all of eastern Washington. Land prices are expected to increase and hundreds of small merchants will open shops and stores in nearby towns. Elsewhere the lumber situation was improving. Saw mills were running at full time and increased railroad business has caused more employment. Retail business was up, and increased employment averaged 40 per cent. The oyster season was just commencing.

In West Virginia, the coal fields generally have shown great improvement. Retail business was climbing. In Elkins, 7,345 population, 850 returned to work and 1,000 miners had their wages increased one dollar a day.

Wisconsin, with its vast dairy, agricultural, manufacturing and brewing interests, has contributed steadily to re-employment. Business was up 25 per cent, and wages in many instances have been increased in proportion. In Marinette, lumber town with 13,734 population, 800 have gone back to their jobs and business in the sector was 40 per cent better.

Increased prices for wool and cattle, besides public works projects, were contributing to employment in the four Wyoming towns covered.

PEANUT CODE WILL AID RE-EMPLOYMENT

Peanut, fertilizer and oil codes will help the Albany, Georgia, re-employment situation. It was reported that when the peanut code is settled, employment may be increased 50 per cent.

PUBLIC ASKS THEATRE PRICES BE REDUCED

In Georgetown, Del., with a population of 1,863, the increase in employment has been estimated at 1,000. Citizens were clamoring for immediate reduction of theatre prices.

COLUMBIA PROFITS UP 33⅓%; FOX NET, $74,716, FIRST IN TWO YEARS

Year's Earnings of Columbia Total $740,241 in 53 Weeks, Cash on Hand $1,070,635; Fox Report for Quarter

Tangible evidence of stronger and more profitable financial structures in the motion picture industry was forthcoming late last week, when Columbia Pictures Corporation, Harry Cohn, president, reported an increase in earnings of 33 1-3 per cent, and Fox Film Corporation, Sidney R. Kent, president, announced a net profit for the first time in two years.

Earning $740,241 in the 53 weeks ended July 1, 1933, after all charges, Columbia paid $4.10 a share on 165,885 no par shares of common stock, as compared with $3.10 a share on 167,933 common shares outstanding in 1932, when net profit was $574,292.

Cash on Hand $1,070,635

Columbia's annual report, embracing the parent company and domestic subsidiaries for 53 weeks ended July 1, also included operations of the corporation in foreign territories for 11 months ended May 27.

Harry Cohn's statement to stockholders revealed that the company operated throughout the year without incurring any bank or similar indebtedness, "at the same time maintaining a strong cash position," which appeared to be verified by the balance sheet listing of cash on hand totaling $1,070,635 (including $300,000 U. S. Treasury certificates).

Columbia's current assets of $4,926,639 compared on July 1 with current liabilities of $1,084,414. Included in current and working assets were: released productions, negatives and prints, worth $1,818,236; completed productions not yet released, $702,350.

The company had on hand some $156,097 in investments, and $1,309,976 in land, buildings and equipment (reserves for depreciation, equaling $750,354 were not included).

Total assets were $6,612,459. Net profits before charges, amortization and taxes was $6,158,574, with $5,341,045 deducted for amortization of film. Depreciation of studios and studio equipment amounting to $153,935 was capitalized as production cost and is being written off as film amortization. Earned surplus as of July 1 was $1,984,938.

"Shorter working hours resulting from the inauguration of the NRA act, and the marked increase in employment already noted throughout the country, will greatly benefit the motion picture industry, and your company should enjoy its proportionate share of such improvement," Mr. Cohn told Columbia's stockholders.

Fox Halts Two-Year Loss

The first statement under the financial reorganization of Fox Film Corp., issued last week, revealed a surplus of $203,045 and a net profit from operations of some $74,716, for the three months ended July 1, 1933.

It appeared that the management at Fox had halted the company's two years of losses, which amounted to $2,642,527 during the comparable period of 13 weeks ended June 25, 1932, and $557,122 for the 13 weeks ended April 1, 1933.

The quarterly report was the first since the date of the reorganization under which bank loans and debentures totaling $37,917,754 were retired. The results of the quarter did not include theatre operations of Wesco Corporation, which were not consolidated because of the bankruptcy of the principal operating subsidiaries of this circuit corporation.

Interest from April 1 to August 1 on the $37,914,754 of recently retired obligations was charged to paid-in surplus. It appears that Fox now has no bank borrowings and that only $1,783,000 of the debenture issue of the corporation remains outstanding at this time.

Gross income from sales and film rentals for the 13 weeks ended July 1 totaled $7,697,549. Other income raised this to $7,989,952. Charged against this income were: operating expenses, amortization of production costs and participation in film rentals: $7,747,574. Interest, amortization of discount and expenses on funded debt, also depreciation of assets totaled $167,660.

The company earned a profit of $284,428 on foreign exchange, but this was reduced to $128,328 by settlement of contracts entered into in prior years.

COLUMBIA EARNINGS, $740,241

Consolidated income account of Columbia Pictures Corp. and subsidiaries for the 53 weeks ended July 1, 1933, compares as follows:

	*53 Wks. end. July 1, '33	Year ended June 25, '32

COMPLETE TEXT OF ROSENBLATT'S DRAFT OF CODE FOR FILM INDUSTRY

CODE OF FAIR COMPETITION FOR THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

(First Revision)

None of the provisions contained herein are to be regarded as having received the approval of the National Recovery Administration as applying to this industry.

PREAMBLE

This code is established for the purpose of effectuating the policy of Title I of the National Recovery Act.

ARTICLE I
DEFINITIONS

1. The term "Motion Picture Industry" as used herein shall be deemed to include, without limitation, all persons, firms, or corporations engaged in the production, distribution or exhibition of motion pictures, except as specifically excepted from the operation of this code.

2. The term "Producers" shall include, without limitation, all persons, partnerships, associations and corporations engaged in the production of motion pictures.

3. The term "Distributor" shall include, without limitation, all persons, partnerships, associations and corporations engaged in the distribution of motion pictures.

4. The term "Exhibitor" shall include, without limitation, all persons, partnerships, associations and corporations, engaged in the ownership or operation of theatres for the exhibition of motion pictures.

5. The term "Legitimate Production" as used herein shall be deemed to refer to theatrical performances of dramatic and musical plays performed on the stage by living persons.

6. The term "Employee" as used herein shall be deemed to refer to and include every person employed by any producer, distributor or exhibitor as hereinabove defined.

7. The term "Agent," "Artists' Agent," "Artists' Manager," and "Artists' Representative," as used herein, and hereinafter referred to as "Agent" shall mean and include any person, (firm, corporation or association), who for a fee or other valuable consideration from the employee procures, promises or undertakes to procure or provide engagements or employment for persons in or in connection with the production of motion pictures, or who, for a fee or other valuable consideration from the employee, manages or conducts the business affairs of persons so employed.

8. The term "Artists' Bureau" or "Artists' Agency" as used herein shall mean and include the business of conducting as owner, agent, manager, or in any other capacity, an office or other place for the purpose of procuring, undertaking, or attempting to procure engagements or employment for persons in or in connection with production of motion pictures or conducting the business affairs of persons so employed, or counselling or advising such persons in connection with such employment, and for which services a fee or other valuable consideration is collected from the employee.

9. The term "Contract" shall be deemed to include not only any existing contract with any producer or distributor, but also any prior contract executed by any parent, subsidiary or predecessor corporation of such producer or distributor.

10. The term "Clearance" as used herein shall be deemed to refer to that interval of time between the conclusion of the exhibition of a motion picture at a theatre licensed to exhibit such motion picture prior in time to its exhibition at another theatre or theatres and the commencement of exhibition at such other theatre or theatres.

11. The term "Zone" as used herein shall be deemed to refer to any defined area.

12. The term "Non-Theatrical Account" as used herein shall be deemed to refer to churches, schools and other places where motion pictures are exhibited but not in the usual and ordinary course of the business of operating a theatre for the exhibition of motion pictures.

13. The Term "Affiliated Exhibitor" as used herein shall be deemed to refer to an exhibitor operating a motion picture theatre which is owned, controlled or managed by a producer or distributor or in which a producer or a distributor has a financial interest in the ownership, control or management thereof.

14. The term "Unaffiliated Exhibitor" as used herein shall be deemed to refer to an exhibitor operating a motion picture theatre which is not owned, controlled or managed by any producer or distributor or in which no producer or distributor has an interest in the ownership, management or control thereof.

15. The term "Outside or Associated Producer" as used herein shall refer to a producer of motion pictures including features, short subject, and/or cartoons, and which producer operates his or its own production unit independently of, though in conjunction with, another producer or distributor under whose trade name or trade mark the productions of said outside or associated producer are released and distributed.

16. The term "Effective Date" shall be the tenth day following the approval of this code by the President of the United States.

17. Population, for the purposes of this code, shall be determined by reference to the 1930 Federal census.

THE CODE AUTHORITY AND ITS WORKINGS

The NRA code which finally was presented to the industry on Wednesday by Sol A. Rosenblatt explains in detail the modus operandi of a "code authority" for the administration of the code, but it did not record the names of those selected for membership on this "supreme body of twelve," saying that they had not been determined. However, earlier in the day, word came from Washington that Mr. Rosenblatt's selections would include:

Sidney R. Kent, president of Fox.

Nicholas M. Schenck, president, MGM.

Harry M. Warner, president, Warner Bros.

R. H. Cochrane, vice-president, Universal.

George J. Schaefer, general manager, Paramount.

Al Lichtman, vice-president, United Artists.

Ed Kuykendall, president, MPTOA.

M. E. Comerford, president, Comerford Circuit.

W. Ray Johnston, president, Monogram.

Two unnamed representatives of independents.

In addition, the NRA has the right to appoint three additional representatives without industrial affiliation.

The "code authority," besides administering the code, would rule on appeals in labor disputes and in disputes between any of the various production, distribution or exhibition interests.

The code authority would have the right to make independent investigations of alleged code violations.

Expenses of the board would be "fairly allocated" among the three branches, with failure to pay the assessment constituting a code violation.

ARTICLE II ADMINISTRATION

1. A code authority of the motion picture industry as in this article provided and herein referred to as the "Code Authority" shall administer this code, and shall have such power as shall be necessary therefor, together with such other powers and duties as are prescribed in this code.

2. (a) The code authority shall consist of the following:

NOTE (Not yet decided upon).

(b) As and when any question directly or indirectly affecting any class of employees engaged in the motion picture industry is to be considered by the code authority, one representative of such class, selected by the administrator from nominations made by such class in such manner as may be prescribed by the administrator, shall sit with and become for such purposes a member of the code authority with a right to vote.

(c) The administrator may designate not more than three additional persons without vote who shall not have any direct, personal interest in the motion picture industry nor represent any interest adverse to the interest of those engaged therein, as representatives of the administration.

(d) In case of the absence, resignation, death, ineligibility or incapacity of any member of the code authority to act, an alternate of the same general class of the industry and a bona fide executive or, as the case may be, a bona fide exhibitor, designated by him shall act in place of such member. Such designated alternate shall be certified to the code authority, but the code authority may reject such alternate and require another to be designated.

4. The authority may make such rules as to meetings and other procedural matters as it may from time to time determine.

5. The code authority may from time to time appoint committees which may include or be constituted of persons including or other than members of the code authority as it shall deem necessary to effectuate the purpose of this code, and may delegate to any such committee generally or in particular instances such power and authority within the scope of the powers granted to the code authority under this code. The code authority may at any time remove from any committee any member thereof. The code authority shall coordiante the duties of the committees with a view to promoting joint and harmonious action upon matters of common interest.

6. (a) The code authority shall be empowered to collect from the members of the industry all data and statistics required by the President, or reasonably pertinent to the effectuation of title 1 of the National Recovery Act and compile the same and disseminate among the members of the industry summaries thereof, all in such form and manner as the code authority or the administration shall prescribe. All such statistics, data and information of any one member of the industry shall not be revealed to any other member. The dissemination of summaries of such information shall not be deemed a disclosure thereof. In addition to information required to be submitted to the code authority, there shall be furnished to government agencies such statistical information as the administrator may deem necessary for the purposes recited in section 3 (a) of the National Recovery Act.

(b) The code authority shall have the right to make independent investigations of violations or alleged violations of the code by any branch of the industry or by any person, firm or corporation engaged in any branch of the industry; and in connection with any such investigations, the code authority shall have the right to call upon any persons, firms or corporations engaged in the industry to furnish to the code authority, or to its duly authorized agencies for that purpose, all original books, contracts, documents, records, and any other data which it may desire to have produced before it, and the persons, firms or corporations so called upon shall furnish the material so requested of them with all due diligence. Failure to produce any such original books, contracts, documents, records, and any other data so requested by the code authority shall be a violation of this code.

7. The code authority shall assist the National Recovery Administrator in administering the provisions of this code, in making investigations as to the functioning or observance of any of the provisions of this code at its own instance or on the complaint of any person, and shall report to the administrator on any such matters; may initiate and shall consider such recommendations and regulations and interpretations, including trade practices, as may come before it.

8. (a) The code authority shall have the right to appoint, remove, and fix the compensation of all persons whom it may employ to assist it in any capacity whatsoever in administering this code.

(b) The expenses of the code authority in administering this code shall be budgeted and fairly allocated among the three divisions of the industry and assessed against the respective members thereof subject to this code, in such manner as shall be determined by the code authority.

(c) Failure to promptly pay any assessment or levy made pursuant to an order of the code authority as an expense of administering this code shall be a violation of this code.

ARTICLE III
GENERAL PROVISIONS

Section 1. As required by section 7 (A) title I, of the National Recovery Act, the following are conditions of this code:

(a) That employees shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and shall be free from the interference, restraint, or coercion of employers of labor, or their agents, in the designation of such representatives or in self-organization or in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection:

(b) That no employee and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment to join any company union or to refrain from joining, organizing, or assisting a labor organization of his own choosing and (c) that employers shall comply with the maximum hours of labor, minimum rates of pay, and other conditions of employment, approved or prescribed by the President.

Section 2. No provisions of this code shall be interpreted or applied in such a manner as to permit monopolies, permit or encourage unfair competition; or eliminate, oppress or discriminate against small enterprises.

ARTICLE IV LABOR PROVISIONS

a. On and after the effective date of this code, in the production of motion pictures:

SECTION 1—HOURS OF EMPLOYMENT

(a) No employee shall work more than forty (40) hours in any one week.

When the distant location daily rate above is employed the total wage for any one week shall not exceed the distant location weekly wage.

(g) Every news-reel cameraman or soundman shall be given one day off with pay for every four cumulative days (24 hours per day) that he is away from his base of operations, except if on roving or "gypsy" assignments.

SECTION 3—
PROVISION REGARDING "EXTRAS"

The code authority provided for in this code shall undertake and provide for rules and regulations to be adopted by all casting agencies and/or producers with respect to "extras," and shall appoint a standing committee representative of employers, "extra players," and the public, to effectuate the foregoing purposes and to interpret the terms of any provisions made for "extras" and to supervise the same, receive and pass on complaints and grievances, and to otherwise aid in effectuating the foregoing provisions.

Such standing committee under the supervision of the code authority shall cause a reclassification of "extras" and "extra talent" to be undertaken, based upon the following qualifications for such labor:

(a) "Extra players" shall be those who by experience and/or ability are known to be competent to play group and individual business and/or bits and parts and to otherwise appear in a motion picture in other than atmospheric background or crowd work.

(b) Atmosphere people who are not to be classified as dependent on motion pictures for a livelihood, but who may be recorded, listed and called upon for occasional special qualifications not possible of filling from the registered extra players.

(c) Crowds not classified, including racial groups, location crowds where transportation is unpracticable and crowd assemblies of a public nature.

PLAN TO HANDLE DISPUTES PROVIDED

The minimum pay for the foregoing classifications shall be as follows:

(a) "Extra players," $7.50 per day, with this minimum graded upward according to the character and importance of the performance and the personal wardrobe required, the minimum for Class A "dress" people to be $15 per day; provided that, if any "extra player" is required to play a part or bit with essential story dialogue, the minimum shall be $25 per day, all adjustments for performance of grades of work higher than that for which the player was called, to be certified immediately by the company.

(b) Atmosphere people, $5 per day, provided that any "extra player" may accept atmosphere work without losing or jeopardizing his registration as an "extra player."

(c) Crowds, $5 per day, provided that this minimum shall not prevent the employment of large groups under special circumstances at a rate lower than the minimum.

The following shall be provided for by said standing committee among the working conditions to be regulated as above provided:

(a) Casting and employment interviews of women and children shall be by women casting officials, and men by men.

(b) No one shall be employed as an "extra player" or "atmosphere worker" who is a dependent member of the immediate family of any regular employee of a motion picture company or any person who is not obliged to depend upon extra work as a means of livelihood, unless the exigencies of production reasonably construeld, requires an exception to be made. And further, no one shall be employed as an "extra player" or "atmosphere worker" on account of personal favoritism.

(c) A day's work shall be eight hours, with overtime as provided by the California statutes.

(d) No person coming under the above classifications shall be permitted to work in more than one picture for the same day's pay including overtime, this provision being intended to spread employment.

(e) Transportation to and from locations and time employed in interviews and fittings shall be on company time, and equitable regulations to carry out this provision and to correct such other inequalities of working conditions as may appear, shall be adopted.

(f) Rotation of work shall be established to such reasonable degree as may be possible and practicable.

(g) No person not a registered "extra player" shall be requested by a studio casting office from any casting agency, and each registered "extra player" shall be provided with a card of identification; suitable regulations for carrying out this provision shall be adopted.

SECTION 4—OVERRIDING PROVISIONS

If the prevailing wage scale and maximum number of hours per week as of August 23, 1933, as fixed in any agreement between the employers and associations of any such employees, however, shall be at a rate exceeding the minimum wage scale herein provided for or less than the number of hours per week herein provided for with respect to any of such employees, such scales, and hours of labor in the localities where same were enforced shall be deemed to be, and hereby are declared to be, the minimum scale of wages and maximum number of hours with respect to such employees in such localities under this section of the code.

SECTION 5—CHILD LABOR

(a) On and after the effective date of this code, no person under sixteen (16) years of age shall be employed in the production of motion pictures, provided, however, where a state law provides a higher minimum age, no person under the age specified by said state law shall be employed in that state, and provided further, however, where a role or roles are to be filled by a child or children, a producer may utilize the services of such child or children upon his compliance with the provisions of state laws appertaining thereto.

(b) On and after the effective date of this code, in the distribution of motion pictures:

SECTION 1—HOURS OF EMPLOYMENT

(a) No employee except outside salesmen shall work more than forty (40) hours in any one week.

(b) This provision for working hours shall not apply to professional persons employed in their profession nor to employees in a managerial or an executive capacity or in any other capacity of distinction or sole responsibility who now receive more than $35.00 per week; nor to employees on emergency or maintenance and repair work.

SECTION 2—MINIMUM WAGES

No employee shall be paid

(a) Less than fifteen ($15.00) dollars per week in any city over 500,000 population or in the immediate trade area of such city.

(b) Less than $14.50 per week in any city between 250,000 and 500,000 population or in the immediate trade area of such city:

ARTICLES 9 AND 10 ARE "ON THE WAY"

Representatives of the large companies have been working feverishly to phrase a code clause governing agents in Hollywood (Article 9), and another to end "star raiding" by competitive studios (Article 10). Yet there was no mention of either clause in the NRA code draft.

Article 10, it is understood, would provide, in revised form, for a salary-fixing commission to control "excessive" star earnings, although Deputy Rosenblatt last week declared reports of such a "commission" were "inspired propaganda."

The re-drafted Article 9 would add "teeth" to proposed restrictions against agents.

(c) Less than $14.00 per week in any city up to 250,000 population or in the immediate trade area of such city.

Section 3—On or after the effective date no person under sixteen years of age shall be employed in the distribution of motion pictures, provided, however, where a state law provides a higher minimum age, no person below the age specified by such state law shall be employed within that state.

(d) On and after the effective date of this code, in the exhibition of motion pictures:

SECTION 1—LABOR OTHER THAN ACTORS

1. No person under sixteen (16) years of age shall be employed; provided, however, that where a state law provides a higher minimum age no person below the age specified by such state law shall be employed within that state.

2. No employee shall work more than 40 hours in one week, except that such maximum hours shall not apply to employees in a managerial, executive or advisory capacity who now receive $35.00 or more per week.

3. With respect to employees regularly employed as ticket sellers, doormen, ushers, cleaners, matrons, watchmen, attendants, porters, and office help, such employees shall receive not less than a twenty percent (20%) increase over the wage paid to them as of August 1, 1933, in cities and towns having a population of less than 15,000.

4. With respect to employees regularly employed as ticket sellers, doormen, cleaners, matrons, watchmen, attendants, porters, and office help, such employees shall receive not less than 30 cents per hour in cities and towns having a population of more than 15,000 and less than 500,000, and not less than 35 cents per hour in cities and towns having a population of more than 500,000.

5. With respect to employees regularly employed as ushers, in cities and towns having a population over 15,000, such employees shall receive a wage of not less than 25 cents per hour.

6. (a) Employees associated with organizations of or performing the duties of carpenters, electrical workers, engineers, firemen, motion picture machine operators, oilers, painters, theatrical stage employees, theatrical wardrobe attendants, or other skilled mechanics and artisans, and musicians, who are directly and regularly employed by the exhibitors, shall receive the minimum wage and work the maximum number of hours per week fixed as of August 23, 1933, as the prevailing scale of wages and maximum number of hours of labor by organizations of any such employees affiliated with the American Federation of Labor with respect to their respective type of work in a particular class of theatre or theatres in a particular location in a particular community, and such scales and hours of labor with respect to any of such employees in such community shall be deemed to be, and hereby are declared to be, the minimum scale of wages and maximum number of hours with respect to such employees in such communities in such class of theatre or theatres.

(b) In the event that there exist in the particular community organizations of such employees above mentioned, whether such organizations are affiliated as above set forth or otherwise, and (1) no prevailing scale of wages and maximum number of hours for such employees exist in such community with respect to such employees, or (2) any dispute should arise as to what is the minimum scale of wages or the maximum number of hours of labor with respect to any of such employees for a particular class of theatre or theatres in any particular community, then and in either of those events:

(a) If the question at issue arises with the organization of such employees affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, then a representative appointed by the national president of such affiliated organization, together with a representative appointed by the disputant, shall examine into the facts and determine the existing minimum scale of wages and maximum number of hours of labor for such theatre or theatres in such particular locality, and in the event they cannot agree upon the same, they shall mutually designate an impartial third person who shall be empowered to finally determine such dispute, with the proviso, however, that in the event such representatives cannot mutually agree upon such third person, then the National Recovery Administrator shall designate such third person, however.

(b) If the question at issue arises with the unorganized employees or with an organization of such employees not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, then a representative of such unorganized employees, or, as the case may be, a representative appointed by the president of such unaffiliated organization, together with a representative appointed by the disputant, together with a representative appointed by the national president of such affiliated organization above referred to, shall examine into the facts and unanimously determine the existing scale of wages and maximum number of hours of labor for such theatre or theatres in such particular community, and in the event they cannot agree upon the same, they shall mutually designate an impartial third person who shall be empowered to finally determine such dispute, with the proviso, however, that in the event such representatives cannot mutually agree upon such impartial third person, then the National Recovery Administrator shall designate such impartial third person.

(c) Pending the determination of any such dispute, the rate of wages then paid by the exhibitor in such theatre or theatres in such community, and the maximum number of hours then in force (and not more than the hours provided for in this code) shall not be changed so as to decrease wages or increase hours.

(d) In order to effectuate the foregoing provisions of this section 6 hereof, and pending the determination of any dispute as above specified, the employees herein embraced and provided for shall not strike, and the exhibitors shall not lock out such employees.

7. In no event shall the duties of any of the employees hereinabove specified in section 6A directly and regularly employed by the exhibitors as of August 23, 1933, be increased so as to increase the number of such employees employed in any theatre or theatres in any community, except by mutual consent.

8. With respect to any labor not hereinbefore provided for, such labor when regularly employed by the exhibitors shall be paid not less than 40 cents per hour.

SECTION 2—ACTOR LABOR IN VAUDEVILLE AND PRESENTATION MOTION PICTURE THEATRES

1. DEFINITIONS

a. Presentation and vaudeville shall include both permanent and traveling companies of artists playing in presentation and vaudeville houses but is not intended to include, "rep" shows, "tab" shows, "tent" shows, "wagon" shows, "truck" shows, "medicine" shows, 'show boat" or "burlesque," as these terms are understood in the theatre.

b. A "Traveling" company as used in this code, means a company which moves from theatre to theatre irrespective of locality.

2. AUDITIONS

a. Principals. It shall be an unfair trade practice for any exhibitor or independent contractor under the guise of public audition to break-in, try-out or to require a performer to render service for less than the minimum salary established by this code. This shall not prohibit, however, the appearance or participation of any performer in benefit performances which have been approved by the performer or by any bona fide organization of the performer's own choosing.

b. Chorus. It shall be an unfair trade practice for any manager or independent contractor, under the guise of a public audition, break-in or try-out, to require the chorus to render services for less than the minimum salary established by this code. This shall not prohibit, however, the appearance of the chorus or participation in benefit performances which have been approved by the chorus or any bona fide organization of the chorus' own choosing.

3. REHEARSALS

a. Principals. Rehearsal period for principals shall be limited to four weeks, and they shall be guaranteed two consecutive weeks employment for said four weeks of rehearsals, which shall immediately follow the rehearsal period. In the event that any rehearsal over four weeks is required there shall be an additional consecutive week's playing time guaranteed for each week's rehearsal. This shall not apply, however to principals owning their own acts.

b. Chorus. No exhibitor and no independent contractor shall call chorus rehearsals for any company except for an engagement of not less than two consecutive weeks employment at not less than the minimum salary; which shall follow immediately two weeks or less of rehearsal. The chorus shall not be required to rehearse for more than forty (40) hours a week and rehearsal shall be considered to be continuous from the time the chorus is called on the first day of rehearsal until the opening day. For each additional week of rehearsal there shall be an additional week's consecutive employment.

4. MAXIMUM HOURS AND MINIMUM WAGES

a. Principals. Owing to the peculiar nature of the stage presentation and vaudeville business and the unique conditions prevailing therein, the necessary policy and variations in the operation of such theatres, the changing nature of the entertainment and the fact that such entertainment is of a character requiring the services of artists of unique and distinctive ability who cannot be replaced, it is recognized that it is impossible to fix the minimum hours per week of artists appearing in such theatres.

For performers with more than two years' theatrical experience, there shall be a minimum wage of forty ($40) dollars weekly net.

For performers with less than two years' theatrical experience there shall be a minimum wage of twenty-five ($25) dollars net weekly.

The minimum wage of performers employed on a per diem basis shall be seven dollars and fifty cents ($7.50) per day net.

b. Chorus. No singing or dancing chorus person shall be required to work more than forty (40) hours in any week and there shall be one day out of every seven during which the chorus shall be released from work with pay. Working time shall include the entire time of a performance or presentation in which the chorus appears in one or more numbers as an integral part of the presentation, and all rehearsal time excluding dressing and undressing time. No chorus person shall be required to report at a theatre before nine o'clock in the morning.

On the day a chorus person is released with pay such chorus person shall not be required to rehearse or report to the theatre or perform any service. This provision for a free day shall not apply to traveling companies.

There shall be a minimum wage or thirty ($30) dollars per week in any de luxe theatre.

There shall be a minimum wage of thirty-five ($35) dollars per week in traveling companies.

There shall be a minimum wage of twenty-five ($25) dollars per week in other than de luxe theatres.

Wherever a theatre augments the chorus by employing additional chorus persons, no chorus person shall rehearse more than three (3) days.

It shall be an unfair trade practice for any exhibitor to engage any chorus person under any agreement which would reduce the net salary below the minimum wage through the payment of any fee or commission to any agency, (whether such fee is paid by the exhibitor or by the chorus) or by any other form of deduction.

After the first two weeks of consecutive employment if a lay-off is necessary, the exhibitor shall pay each chorus person not less than three ($3) dollars per day for each day of lay-off. In connection with a traveling unit, after the first two weeks of consecutive employment if lay-off is caused on account of traveling, the exhibitor shall be allowed two days' traveling without pay for each four weeks of employment west of the Rockies, and one day's traveling without pay for each four weeks of employment east of the Rockies.

Wherever on August 23, 1933, any theatre paid a rate to chorus persons in excess of the minimum wages or employed chorus persons for a number of hours per week of labor less than the maximum hours, said higher wage and lesser number of hours shall be deemed to be and are hereby declared to be the minimum scale of wages and maximum hours of labor with respect to such theatres in this section of the code.

5. GENERAL PROVISIONS

a. Where, under any law, Sunday performances are prohibited or the performance of particular classes of acts is not allowed, no performer or chorus person shall be required to perform in any theatre in that or in any other city on the Sunday of the week for which the performer or chorus was engaged.

b. Wherever any unit, travelling company or artist is required to give more than the regular number of performances established for said unit, travelling company or artist, all artists and chorus persons shall be paid for said extra performances pro rata.

6. CHORUS TRANSPORTATION

a. Transportation of the chorus when required to travel, including transportation from point of organization and back, including sleepers, shall be paid by the employer whether exhibitor or independent contractor.

b. If individual notice of contract termination is given, the chorus shall be paid in cash the amount of the cost of transportation and sleeper of the chorus and baggage back to the point of origin whether the chorus returns immediately or not.

a. Principals. The exhibitor or independent contractor shall furnish to every artist receiving less than ($50.) fifty dollars a week, without charge, all hats, costumes, wigs, shoes, tights and stockings and other necessary stage wardrobe excepting street clothes.

b. Chorus. The exhibitor or independent contractor shall furnish the chorus, without charge, with all hats, costumes, wigs, shoes, tights, and stockings and other necessary stage wardrobe.

8. ARBITRATION

a. Arbitration of all disputes under this section 2 of this article of the code shall be in accordance with the arbitration provisions of this code as hereafter generally provided.

9. CHILD LABOR

a. On or after the effective date of this code, no person under sixteen years (16) of age shall be employed as a principal or chorus person in connection with the exhibition of motion pictures, provided, however, where a state law provides a higher minimum age, no person under the age specified by said state law shall be employed in that state, and provided further, however, where a role or roles are to be filled by a child or children, an exhibitor or independent contractor may utilize the services of such child or children upon his compliance with the provisions of state laws appertaining thereto.

ARTICLE V-A

UNFAIR PRACTICES AND REGULATORY PROVISIONS

A. PRODUCERS

1. It shall be an unfair trade practice for any producer to aid, abet, or assist in the voluntary release or dismissal of any author, dramatist or actor employed in rendering his exclusive services in connection with the production of a "legitimate" drama or musical comedy for the purposes of securing the services of such author, dramatist or actor.

2. It shall be an unfair trade practice for a number of producers who, in the usual and ordinary course of business, rent their respective studios or studio facilities to producers (other than their affiliated companies), to conspire, agree, or take joint action to prevent any responsible producer or producers from renting such studios or studio facilities.

3. It shall be an unfair trade practice for a producer to knowingly employ as an "extra" any member of the immediate family of any employee or any person who is not obliged to depend upon "extra" work as a means of livelihood, unless the exigencies of production require an exception to be made.

B. PRODUCERS-DISTRIBUTORS

1. Where any contract granting the motion picture rights in any dramatic or dramatico-musical work specifies a date prior to which no motion picture based upon such work may be publicly exhibited, it shall be deemed to be an unfair trade practice for any producer or distributor to permit the public exhibition of such motion picture prior to such date.

2. (a) It shall be deemed to be an unfair trade practice for any producer or distributor, or any of its employees or persons who have a direct or indirect interest, whether financial or otherwise, in any such producer or distributor, to knowingly and intentionally, directly or indirectly interfere with existing relations between an outside or associated producer and a producer or distributor, or to do anything to alienate or entice any such outside or associated producer away from a producer or distributor, or to do anything which would tend to create discord or strife between such outside or associated producer and a producer or distributor, or foment dissension between them, for the purpose of inducing such outside or associated producer to breach or attempt to breach any existing contracts between it and any producer or distributor, or to secure a change in the terms and conditions of any existing contract between any such outside or associated producer and a producer or distributor.

(b) To effectuate the foregoing, no producer or distributor shall negotiate with or make any offer for or to any such outside or associated producer at any time prior to sixty (60) days before the termination of any existing agreements between such outside or associated producer and any other producer or distributor, or not prior to sixty (60) days before the date when such outside or associated producer shall fulfill its delivery commitment to the producer or distributor with whom it has contractual obligations, whichever date is earlier.

C. DISTRIBUTORS

1. No distributor shall threaten or coerce or intimidate any exhibitor to enter into any contract for the exhibition of motion pictures, or to pay higher film rentals by the commission of any overt act evidencing an intention to build or otherwise acquire a motion picture theatre for operation in competition with such exhibitor, but nothing in this article shall in any way abridge the right of a producer or distributor in good faith to build or otherwise acquire a motion picture theatre in any location.

2. No distributor's employee shall use his position with the distributor to interfere with the free and competitive buying of pictures by an exhibitor operating a theatre in competition with a theatre in which such employee may have a direct or indirect interest, whether financial or otherwise.

3. (a) No distributor shall substitute for any feature motion picture described in the contract therefor as that of a named star or stars or named director or named well-known author, book or play one of any other star or stars, director, author, book or play, nor substitute any other feature motion picture for one which in the contract therefor is designated "no substitute."

(b) Nothing in this article contained shall be interpreted to prohibit any distributor from changing the title of any motion picture contracted for, from making changes, alterations and adaptations of any story, book, or play upon which it is based and from substituting for any such story, book or play another story, book or play, or from changing the director, the cast, or any member thereof of any such motion picture, except as herein above specifically prohibited.

(c) If for any such author, book or play there is substituted another author, book or play, reasonable notice (i. e., before the release date in the particular exchange territory) of such substitution shall be given by announcement in a trade publication.

4 (a) It shall be an unfair practice for any distributor to license the exhibition of its motion pictures for exhibition by any so-called non-theatrical account, where such exhibition shall be determined by the local grievance board provided for in this code to be unfair to an established motion picture theatre at which the exhibition of the same motion pictures has been licensed.

(b) Nothing in this article shall be interpreted to prohibit the licensing of motion pictures for exhibition at army posts or camps, or on board ships of the United States Navy or ships engaged in carrying passengers to foreign or domestic ports or at educational or religious institutions or at institutions housing "shut-ins," such as prisons, hospitals, orphanages, etc.

5. No distributor shall require as a condition of entering into a contract for the licensing of the exhibition of feature motion pictures that the exhibitor contract also for the licensing of the exhibition of a greater number of short subjects, in proportion to the total number of short subjects required by such exhibitor, than the proportion of the feature pictures for which a contract is negotiated bears to the total number of feature pictures required by the exhibitor.

6. No distributor shall divulge or authorize or knowingly permit to be divulged by any employee or checker any information received in the checking of the receipts of its motion pictures, except that such information may be divulged in any arbitration or grievance proceeding or litigation concerning such controversy and for any government or code authority report.

7. No distributor shall convey or transfer its assets for the purpose of avoiding the delivery to any exhibitor of any feature motion picture license for exhibition by such exhibitor.

8. No distributor shall refuse to make a fair adjustment of the license fees for the exhibition rights of a number of pictures licensed in a group for a stated average sum per picture and so stated in the license agreement, if the total number of pictures so licensed by any exhibitor are not delivered by such distributor provided such exhibitor shall have fully and completely performed all the terms and conditions of such license on the part of the exhibitor to be performed. Any dispute or controversy concerning any such adjustment shall be determined by the local grievance board provided for in this code.

9. (a) No distributor shall require any specific day or days of the week for the exhibition of specified pictures or class of pictures the license fee for which is a fixed sum only.

(b) Where under an exhibition contract which provides that the rental to be paid by the exhibitor for any feature motion picture specified therein shall be determined in whole or in part upon a percentage basis and that said picture shall be played by the exhibitor upon a designated day or days of the week and the exhibitor seeks to be relieved from the obligation to exhibit such motion picture upon such designated day or days for the reason only that the subject and character of the motion picture so designated is unsuitable for exhibition at the exhibitor's theatre on such day or days, the claim of the exhibitor shall be determined by the local grievance board provided for by this code, and the distributor, if the local board so determines, shall relieve the exhibitor from the obligation to play the motion picture upon the day or days designated by the distributor; provided that the exhibitor makes such claim within three days after receipt of the notice of availability of such feature picture. In such cases the said local board shall proceed to determine the matter upon forty-eight hours' notice if the distributor so desires.

(c) If the said local board shall sustain the claim of the exhibitor:

1. The distributor shall have the right to designate another picture for the same day or dates upon the same terms as the motion picture in question; and to designate the same picture for a later date or dates but upon another day or other days of the week; and (2) the award of the said local board shall not be deemed to apply to any other theatre in the same or any other location.

(d) Where because of a proceeding before the local grievance board, or because of an award of said local board it shall be impractical to serve subsequent run exhibitors in compliance with any notice of availability or confirmed play dates given any such subsequent run exhibitors, the distributor shall have the right to change such play dates.

10. No distributor shall refuse to deliver to any exhibitor any feature motion picture licensed under an exhibition contract therefore because of such exhibitor's default in the performance of any exhibition contract licensing the exhibition of short subjects of such distributor, or vice versa, provided such exhibitor and distributor have agreed to arbitrate all claims and controversies arising under the optional standard license agreement provided for in this code.

11. (a) No distributor which has not generally released the total number of feature productions originally announced by it for release during any given season shall fail to offer any additional feature productions to the exhibitor having under contract at least fifty percent (50%) of the other feature productions of the distributor, provided such additional feature production is generally released during the season covered in the first instance by such contract between the distributor and exhibitor, and provided further that any such exhibitor has duly performed all the terms and conditions of his contract or contracts with the distributor upon which performance may then be due, and is not in default thereunder.

(b) In any case where the feature product of any distributor is split between competing exhibitors in any zone, the exhibitor who in point of time was first to make a contract with the distributor shall have the first opportunity to bid for such additional feature production, except that should the distributor generally release more than one feature production in any such situation where the product is split, the exhibitor who in point of time was second to execute a contract with the distributor shall have the first opportunity to bid for the second additional feature production.

12. With respect to any product announced for release during any given season by any distributor, and not designated as a picture of a named star or stars, or named director or named well-known author, book or play, the exhibition contract therefor shall contain a brief description giving an idea of the general style, or character or class of the story upon which the said motion picture is to be based.

Section 2. The giving of rebates in the form of premiums, gifts or other things of value shall be deemed to be included within the provisions of Section 1 of this article in those respective clearance zones where the exhibitors operating not less than seventy-five per cent of the number of the then actively and continuously operated theatres not affiliated with distributors or producers and the exhibitors operating not less than seventy-five percent of the number of the then actively and continuously operated theatres affiliated with distributors or producers have both declared in writing that the giving of rebates in such form shall not be permitted. For the purpose of such declaration each exhibitor shall be entitled to one vote for each theatre then actively and continuously operated by such exhibitor.

Section 3. In case any exhibitor is found by the local grievance board provided for in this code, to have violated any provision of this provision and if such local board shall on account thereof declare that such exhibitor shall not be permitted to license the exhibition of any motion picture unless the exhibitor ceases and desists from such violation, distributors of motion pictures shall refuse to enter into license contracts for the exhibition of their respective motion pictures by such exhibitor if the exhibitor fails or refuses to so cease and desist.

Section 4. Notwithstanding any action which may be taken by the exhibitors in any respective clearance zones ruling out the giving of rebates as defined in section 1 hereof, any exhibitor who has outstanding and valid contracts for the purchase of premiums, gifts, or things of value to be used by him in connection with the operation of his theatre, shall have the right to continue such policy for a period of 90 days after such action on the part of such exhibitors as aforesaid for the purpose of liquidating any such contractual commitments.

1. Any exhibitor entering into a contract for the exhibition of motion pictures which permits the exhibitor to select from the total number of pictures announced for release in any given season less than eighty-five per cent (85%) of the total number, and to reject the remainder shall by written notice to the distributor reject each of such motion pictures not to exceed the number which may be rejected, within twenty-one days after its date of availability in the exchange territory wherein is located the exhibitor's theatre, and upon the exhibitor's failing to give such notice of rejection, each of such pictures shall be deemed to have been selected.

2. No exhibitor shall contract for a license to exhibit more motion pictures than such exhibitor reasonably shall require for exhibition in any theatre or theatres operated by such exhibitor, with the intent and effect of depriving a competing exhibitor from contracting to exhibit such excess number of motion pictures, provided however, that nothing herein contained shall be deemed to prohibit any exhibitor from contracting for a reasonable number of motion pictures in excess of the number which are actually to be exhibited in the theatre or theatres of such exhibitor in order to reasonably protect such exhibitor against non-delivery of motion pictures.

3. Section 1. No exhibitor shall (a) lower the admission prices publicly announced or advertised for his theatre by giving rebates in the form of lotteries, reduced script books, coupons, throw-away tickets or by two-for-one admissions, or by other methods or devices of similar nature (which directly or indirectly lower or tend to lower such announced admission prices and) which are unfair to competing exhibitors, and which deceive the public, or (b) fail at all times to maintain the minimum price of admission specified in any contract licensing the exhibition of any motion picture during the exhibition thereof. This section shall not be deemed to prohibit exhibitors from reducing or increasing their admission scales as they see fit, except as may be prohibited by the exhibition contracts.

4. No exhibitor shall transfer the ownership or possession of a theatre or theatres operated by any such exhibitor for the purpose of avoiding uncompleted contracts for the exhibition of motion pictures at such theatre or theatres. Any disputes or controversies with respect to same shall be submitted to and passed upon by the local grievance board.

5. (a) No exhibitor licensed to exhibit a motion picture subsequent to its exhibition by another exhibitor having the right to a prior run thereof shall advertise such motion picture by any means of advertising prior to or during its exhibition by such other exhibitor.

(b) Nothwithstanding anything herein contained, in the event any exhibitor shall make complaint that the restrictions embraced in this article work an untair hardship on him, the local clearance and zoning board shall have the right to hear such complaint and after determination of the facts presented shall fix and specify the time limit within which such exhibitor may advertise such motion picture; provided, however, that should the subsequent run exhibitor be granted permission to advertise before the completion of said prior run, he shall not advertise prior to the commencement of said prior run, nor shall he have the right to advertise in any way, shape, manner or form, or issue any statement that the prices of admission are or will be less than the admission prices charged by the exhibitor having the first or prior run of such motion picture.

(c) Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to prohibit any exhibitor from advertising generally all of the feature motion pictures licensed for exhibition by such exhibitor as a group, but such general advertising shall not refer to any one of such motion pictures at any time prior to its exhibition by any other exhibitor having the first or immediately prior run thereof excepting as hereinabove provided.

6. To prevent disturbance of the continued possession of a theatre by an exhibitor, it shall be an unfair trade practice knowingly and intentionally, directly or indirectly to interfere with pending negotiations between such exhibitor and any other party pertaining to or affecting the possession, operation or occupancy of any such theatre then actually operated by such exhibitor, or in respect of any modification, renewal or extension of any agreement affecting the same, for the purpose of preventing the consummation of such negotiations so as to deprive such exhibitor of the continued operation, possession, or occupancy of such theatre.

7. No exhibitor shall exhibit a motion picture previous to dawn of the first licensed and booked day of exhibition without securing express written permission therefor under the license agreement.

E. DISTRIBUTORS AND EXHIBITORS

1. Section 1-2-3. The complaint of any exhibitor that a competing exhibitor has committed any of the acts set forth in the following paragraphs (a), (b), (c), and (d) shall be referred for determination to a local grievance board constituted as hereinafter provided:

(a) The licensing of more motion pictures than are reasonably required.

(b) The adoption of an unfairly competing operating policy, viz.; but not limited to, unnecessary and too frequent changes of motion pictures.

(c) The exaction without just cause of an agreement from any distributor a [illegible] a contract for motion picture [illegible] refusal from licensing the motion pictures [illegible] plaining exhibitor.

(d) The commission of any other [illegible] the intent and or effect of depriving [illegible] the complaining exhibitor of a sufficient [illegible] motion pictures to operate such exhibitor's theatre.

Section 4. Each such complaint shall be in writing and made immediately after the commission of the act or acts complained of, and the local grievance board after a fair and impartial consideration of all of the facts presented, a full, expeditious and complete hearing of all the parties concerned, including the exhibitors directly involved, the distributors having contracts with the exhibitor complained against, and exhibitors having contracts for runs subsequent to each of the exhibitors directly involved, and if it deems it necessary, an independent investigation of the facts, shall make a prompt determination of each complaint submitted to it.

Section 5. The local grievance board shall determine whether or not any exhibitor complained of has committed any of the acts specified in paragraphs (a), (b), (c) and (d) of section 3 hereof, and shall make findings of fact in such regard. The local grievance board upon the facts found shall make an award (a) dismissing the complaint, or (b) granting such relief as the local board may deem appropriate. The local grievance board shall not have power to award damages. No award shall be made in favor of a complaining exhibitor unless the local grievance board shall find as a fact that the complaining exhibitor is able, ready and willing to fully carry out and comply with all of the terms and conditions which may be fixed by the local grievance board as a condition for making the award, which terms and conditions shall in no event be less favorable to the distributor concerned than those contained in the license contract of the exhibitor complained of, including the distributor's loss of revenue, if any, resulting from the elimination of or reduction of revenue from any subsequent run or runs made necessary by such award, and such other terms and conditions as the local grievance board may prescribe.

Section 6. No person, firm or corporation shall be entitled to file any complaint under this or any other article of this code unless such person, firm or corporation shall have duly executed this code in its entirety within forty-five (45) days after it is signed by the President of the United States, and sha'l have thereby pledged himself or itself to meet all requirements of the National Recovery Act. Evidence of such compliance shall be filed with the code Authority.

2. Section 1. All complaints and grievances not specifically designated to be heard or passed upon in the first instance by the code authority by arbitration or by the local clearance and zoning board, shall be heard and determined by a local grievance board.

Section 2. (a) There shall be established a local grievance board, appointed by the code authority, in each exchange territory. Each such board shall consist of two representatives of major distributors and two representatives of exhibitors and one person who shall have no direct or indirect affiliation with any branch of the motion picture industry, who shall be regarded as the impartial representative of the code authority and who shall vote on any question before the board only in the case where the board is dead-locked. There shall be a chairman of each board, selected by a majority vote of the members of the board. Any vacancy in the board shall be filled from the class of members in which the vacancy occurred. No member of such board shall sit on any matter involving his own or his company's interest.

(b) The decision of each local board upon any question submitted to it shall be determined by a majority vote, but in case the board is evenly divided, such question shall be submitted for determination to the impartial representative of the code authority, as provided in paragraph (a) of this section. The decision of the board and/or the impartial representative, as the case may be, shall be in writing. All decisions of the local board shall be made within fifteen (15) days from the filing of the protest, grievance, or complaint or within three (3) days after the parties shall have been fully heard, whichever date is earlier.

Section 3. (a) Any party aggrieved by the decision of the local board shall have the absolute right to appeal therefrom to the code authority, provided such appeal be filed in writing not later than five (5) days after the decision of the local board is rendered, in which case the grievance or complaint, together with all the evidence taken from the local board shall be referred to the code authority.

(b) All persons interested in the decision shall have the right to appear before the code authority and present additional evidence. The code authority, after investigating the complaint or grievance and reviewing the evidence theretofore taken and considering the additional evidence, if any, shall promptly render its decision not later than fifteen (15) days from and after the date when the parties have been fully heard on appeal.

3. The so-called Optional Standard License Agreement (1933-34) negotiated by exhibitors and now being used by a large number of distributors shall be the exclusive form of license contract to be used for the distribution and exhibition of motion pictures, excepting that in case any condition or provision thereof is in conflict or inconsistent with any condition or provision of this code, such condition or provision of said Optional Standard License Agreement shall be deemed to conform with such condition or provision of this code, it being the intention that the conditions and provisions of this code shall prevail.

4. Section 1. The arbitration of all disputes between exhibitors and distributors arising under any exhibition contract, if the parties shall agree on arbitration, shall be in accordance with the optional arbitration clause of the so-called Optional Standard License Agreement, provided for in this code, except as the provisions of such clause may be modified by the provisions of this code.

Section 2. By stipulation of the parties to any dispute growing out of an exhibition contract, the number of arbitrators to be appointed by each party may be reduced to one, with power in the two thus appointed to appoint an umpire as provided in said optional arbitration clause.

5. No exhibitor or distributor shall induce or seek to induce the breach of any active contract licensing the exhibition of motion pictures.

6. No exhibitor or distributor shall give any gratuity or make any offer of any gratuity for the purpose of procuring advantages that would not otherwise be procurable, or as an inducement to influence a distributor or exhibitor, or representative of either not to deal with any competing or other exhibitors or distributors.

7. No exhibitor or distributor shall make any disclosure of box office receipts for publication except necessary reports to stockholders, credit and government agencies and to other like bodies. No exhibitor or distributor shall be responsible for disclosures made by agents not authorized to do so.

8. Section 1. To provide against clearances of unreasonable length and/or area in any exchange territory, fair, just, reasonable and equitable schedules of clearance and zoning may be prescribed by a local clearance and zoning board created for such territory.

Section 2. Each such board shall be appointed by the code authority and shall consist of two representatives of distributors, one of whom shall be a distributor affiliated with a national theatre circuit and one of whom shall be a national distributor without theatre affiliations; two representatives of first-run theatres located in such territory, at least one of whom shall be an affiliated exhibitor, should there be one in such territory; and two representatives of subsequent run theatres operating within such territory; and one person who shall have no direct or indirect affiliation with any branch of the motion picture industry who shall be regarded as the impartial representative of the code authority and who shall vote on any question before the board only in the case where the board is deadlocked. There shall be a chairman of each board, selected by a majority vote of the members of the board. Any vacancy in the board shall be filled from the class of members in which the vacancy occurred.

Section 3. Each local clearance and zoning board shall, promptly after its creation, and prior to January 1st, 1934, and prior to November 15th of each year thereafter, formulate, prescribe and publish for its territory, schedules of clearance as in section "1" described, for the season next ensuing. Such schedules may classify theatres by zones or other classifications suited to local conditions, but for the sole purpose of fixing the maximum clearance in length of time and area after the conclusion of the prior runs of such theatres. Each board may change, modify or vary any part of the schedule set up by it, provided that any such change or modification shall not in any wise apply to, affect or modify any exhibition contract made sub-prior written consent of the parties to such contract.

Section 4. Each board when making any classification of theatres or when fixing the maximum period or area of clearance in respect of any theatre shall consider and give due regard to the following factors: (a) That clearance to a very considerable extent determines the rental value of motion pictures; (b) that exhibitions of the same motion picture within the same competitive area at too short an interval after the conclusion of a preceding run or runs thereof or by unduly restricting the competitive area in which clearance is limited, also depreciates the rental value of motion pictures; and (c) that all such depreciations of the rental values of motion pictures tend to reduce the number of motion pictures produced, discourages the production of motion pictures of quality involving large investments of capital, labor, skill and enterprise and thereby tend to reduce employment.

Section. 5. The decision of each board upon any question shall be determined by a majority vote, but in case the board is evenly divided, such question shall be submitted for determination to the impartial representative of the code authority, who is provided for in section 2 of this paragraph. The decision of the board and/or the impartial representative, as the case may be, shall be in writing.

Section 6. It shall be the duty of each such board to promptly publish the schedules formulated by it, and filing a copy of same immediately with the National Board of Clearance and Zoning Appeals.

Section 7. (a) Any party aggrieved by the schedules shall promptly and not later than thirty (30) days after publication thereof, file a protest in writing with the board issuing them. Thereupon such board shall promptly convene and give reasonable notice of hearing to all parties concerned or having an interest in the proceeding and hear them and accept from them all papers and evidence. The board shall have power to make rules respecting notice of the time, place and manner of hearing. The board shall make its decision within fifteen (15) days from the filing of the protest, or within three (3) days after the parties shall have been fully heard, whichever date is sooner. Any party aggrieved by the decision shall have the absolute right to appeal therefrom to the code authority, provided such appeal be filed in writing not later than five (5) days after the decision of the local board is rendered, in which case the protest, with all evidence taken before the local board of clearance and zoning, shall be referred to the code authority.

(b) All persons interested in the decision shall have the right to appear before the code authority and present additional evidence. The code authority, after investigating such protest and reviewing the evidence theretofore taken and considering the additional evidence, if any, shall promptly render its decision, and not later than fifteen (15) days from and after the date of the submission of the appeal. The requirement as to the various steps herein prescribed shall be mandatory in order to give full relief before the buying season commences.

Section 8. (a) The schedules presented and/or decisions made by any local clearance and zoning board and/or decision of the code authority upon any appeal to it, shall be binding upon all distributors and exhibitors in the territory affected.

(b) Pending the final determination of any dispute or controversy between any of the signatories to the code whether such dispute or controversy be between a distributor or exhibitor, producer, distributor, etc., any existing contracts between the disputants shall continue to be lived up to and performed in every respect.

Section 9. The jurisdiction of the local board of clearance and zoning shall be limited as herein specifically provided and such board shall hear no questions other than those pertaining strictly to clearance and zoning matters.

ARTICLE VI
GENERAL TRADE POLICY PROVISIONS

1. The industry pledges its combined strength to maintain right moral standards in the production of motion pictures as a form of entertainment. To that end the industry pledges itself to and shall adhere to the regulations promulgated by and within the industry to assure the attainment of such purpose.

2. The industry pledges its combined strength to maintain the best standard of advertising and publicity procedure. To that end the industry pledges itself to and shall adhere to the regulations promulgated by and within the industry to assure the attainment of such purpose.

ARTICLE VII
MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

1. Any exhibitor forwarding or delivering to another exhibitor a print of a motion picture at the request or upon the order of the distributor thereof shall, but only for such purpose, be deemed to be the agent of such distributor.

2. (a) Wherever in this code arbitration of any matter is provided for, such matter shall be submitted for determination to an arbitration board, such arbitration board shall consist of four members, each of whom shall be engaged in the motion picture business, and two of whom shall be appointed by the producer and/or distributor and/or exhibitor, and/or artist, and/or agent, as the case may be, it being the intention hereof that if, for example, a matter is to be arbitrated between a producer and an agent, the producer shall appoint two members to the arbitration board and the agent shall appoint two members to the arbitration board. If the dispute is between a distributor and an exhibitor, the distributor shall appoint two members to the arbitration board and the exhibitor shall appoint two members to the arbitration board. In any such case where arbitration is to be used as provided in this code, upon the written request of either party to the dispute or controversy the party making such request shall name therein two arbitrators, stating the business address and business or business connection of each, and shall designate therein the date, time and place of the hearing of such controversy. The date of such hearing shall not be earlier than seven (7) days from the date of the sending of such notice, unless it shall be claimed in such notice that irreparable injury will result unless there is a speedy determination of such controversy, in which case such hearing may be designated to be held earlier than the said seven-day period.

(b) Within five (5) days from the mailing of such request for arbitration, or within twenty-four (24) hours if the date of such hearing shall be earlier than seven (7) days from the date of the sending of such notice, the party upon whom such request is made shall name two arbitrators in a written notice mailed or delivered to the other party, stating therein the business address and business or business connection of each arbitrator. If either party fails or refuses to name the arbitrators as herein provided, or if any arbitrator so named shall fail or refuse to act, or be unable to serve, or shall be challenged and others are or another arbitrator qualified and then available to act is not appointed, others or another arbitrator may be appointed by the other party as the case may be.

(c) No member of an arbitration board shall hear or determine any controversy in which he has an interest, direct or indirect, and any member having such interest shall be disqualified to act.

(d) If the arbitrators or a majority of them are unable to reach a decision, they or a majority of them shall immediately select an umpire who shall not be engaged in the motion picture business. In such case, the hearing before the umpire shall be at such time and place as the umpire shall designate and shall be had before the umpire alone, the arbitrators not to be permitted to attend the hearing before the umpire. If the arbitrators or a majority of them are unable to agree upon the selection of an umpire, the code authority shall upon request make such selection.

3. In each territory wherein any distributor maintains an exchange, such distributor shall abide by the regulations promulgated by the code authority for the prevention of fire, for the holding of fire drills, and rigid monthly inspections, the inspection of prints, the storing of inflammable material, the maintenance and testing of sprinkler systems and fire extinguishers, the avoidance of smoking and other cautions, methods and devices to protect the lives of employees and the public and to insure safety against fire hazards.

4. Nothing in this code shall be deemed to apply to the production, distibution or exhibition of motion pictures on film of recognized sub-standard widths, or to slide films or non-theatrical motion pictures designed primarily for some educational, scientific, industrial, commercial, advertising, selling or other non-theatrical purpose, or to television of motion pictures, provided that the commercial production, distribution or exhibition of such films shall be subject to the conditions of arbitration provided for elsewhere in this code in determining whether such production, distribution or exhibition of such films is unfair competition to an established motion picture theatre or theatres. If found to be unfair competition, the code authority shall promulgate rules and regulations governing such unfair competition.

5. The secret payment or allowance of rebates, refunds, commissions, credits, or otherwise, whether in the form of money or otherwise, or the secret extension to certain persons engaged in any branch of the motion picture industry of any special services or privileges not extended to all persons on like terms and conditions, shall be deemed to be an unfair trade practice.

6. The defamation of competitors by falsely imputing to them dishonorable conduct, inability to perform contracts, questionable credit standing, or by other false representations or by the false disparagement of the grade or quality of their goods, shall be deemed to be an unfair trade practice.

7. The publishing or circularizing of threats or suits or any other legal proceedings not in good faith, with the tendency or effect of harassing competitors or intimidating their customers, shall be deemed to be an unfair trade practice.

8. Securing confidential information concerning the business of a competitor by a false or misleading statement or representation, by a false impersonation of one in authority, by bribery, or by any other unfair method, shall be deemed to be an unfair trade practice.

ARTICLE VIII
MANDATORY AND AMENDING PROVISIONS

1. This code and all the provisions thereof are expressly made subject to the right of the President, in accordance with the provision of Clause 10 (b) of the National Recovery Act, from time to time to cancel or modify any order, approval, license, rule, or regulation, issued under Title 1 of said act, and specifically to the right of the President to cancel or modify his approval of this code or any conditions imposed by him upon his approval thereof.

2. Such of the provisions of this code as are not required to be included therein by the National Recovery Act may, with the approval of the President, be modified or eliminated as changes in circumstances or experience may indicate. It is contemplated that from time to time supplementary provisions to this code or additional codes will be submitted for the approval of the President to prevent unfair competition and other unfair and destructive practices and to effectuate the other purposes and policies of title I of the National Recovery Act consistent with the provisions hereof.

Name Radio City Advisory Board

An advisory board, which will function in directorial and supervisory capacities for the Radio City Music Hall and the Roxy, was formed last week with equal representation for both RKO and Rockefeller interests.

On the board are Webster Todd, of Todd & Robertson; W. G. Van Schmus, of Rockefeller Center, Inc.; Francis Christy, attorney for Rockefeller Center; M. H. Aylesworth, RKO president; J. R. McDonough, RKO general manager, and Harold B. Franklin, RKO Theatres head.

The new advisory board had its origin in the recently negotiated lease between Radio City Theatres, Inc., and Rockefeller Center, Inc., which reduces the annual rental on the two Radio City theatres from $1,000,000 to $600,000, with Rockefeller Center to make up the $400,000 difference by participation in 50 per cent of the profits accruing from operations. The profit participation agreement led to the creation of the advisory board in order to provide the Rockefeller interests with a voice in operating policies.

May Increase Exemption In Nuisance Tax Review

New tax legislation at the coming session of Congress is planned by Representative Robert L. Doughton of North Carolina, chairman of the House ways and means committee, it was announced this week. The committee will meet early this winter to consider the possibilities of eliminating many of the present nuisance taxes, revenue from which will be made up through receipts from liquor taxes following repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment in December and the development of a tax program of a permanent nature as a substitute for the present year-to-year modification.

However, it is indicated, unless revenues from other sources develop much more income than is now anticipated, it is probable the admission tax will be retained, although the exemption may be increased. It is an easy tax to collect and appears to be one to which the public has become accustomed, thus meeting the most difficult problem encountered in the writing of tax laws—that of hitting on revenue producers to which there is little public resistance.

Hears Electric Suit Arguments

Arguments on a request for a bill of particulars in the anti-trust, anti-monopoly suit brought by the Stanley Company, Duovac Radio Corporation and General Talking Pictures against American Telephone and Telegraph, Western Electric and Erpi, were heard Tuesday in Wilmington by Judge John P. Nields in United States district court. The hearing was on motion of the defendants preliminary to final hearing. Decision was reserved.

Reade Buys Erpi's Wide Range

Walter Reade signed with Electrical Research Products on Wednesday for wide range installations in his three New York theatres and 15 in New Jersey, located principally along the shore.

Sime Silverman's Will Is Filed

Sime Silverman's will, filed Tuesday in surrogate's court, New York, left 300 shares of the capital stock of Variety to eight of his employees and the remainder of his estate to his family. In April, 1931, when the will was drawn up, it was estimated that Mr. Silverman's estate was considerably more than $1,000,000. On Tuesday, in the routine language of this type of petition, it was stated that the estate was valued at "more than $10,000."

To his widow, Mrs. Harriet F. Silverman, 135 Central Park West, New York, Mr. Silverman bequeathed one-half of his estate, with the exception of Variety's stock and the building in which it is published.

The employees sharing in the stock of the publication are Harold Erichs, Abel Green Hal Halperin and Louis Rydell, who receive trusts of 50 shares each, and Jack Pulaski, Robert Landry, Joshua Lowe and Joseph Bigelow, who receive the income from 25 shares each. These beneficiaries receive their stock outright at the age of 50, if they are still in the employ of Variety.

Educational Will Do Half in East

Fully half of the total number of short subjects scheduled by Educational for this season will be produced in the east, it was decided at New York conferences in the offices of E. W. Hammons, Educational president, this week. Educational product is distributed by Fox.

At least 20 of the 52 two-reelers planned will be done in the east, as well as 16 one-reelers and the entire series of 26 Terry-Toons. Jack White has been signed by Mr. Hammons as producer-director. Mr. White was formerly production chief for Educational on the Coast for several years. Sig Herzig is assisting him on the stories of three initial comedies.

Al Christie has been given four additional assignments on the current program. William Watson is en route east to work on the stories. Both Mr. White and Mr. Christie will work at the old Paramount plant in Astoria. A permanent stock company is being planned on the Coast for Educational's Andy Clyde comedies, the thought being to line up a company which will become known to audiences.

Neilson's Son Dies

Anthony Rutgers Neilson, 3rd, only son of Rutgers Neilson, of Robert F. Sisk's RKO publicity staff, died Wednesday morning at the Broad Street hospital, New York. Funeral services will be held at the Neilson residence, 125 West 12th Street, on Friday at 10 a. m. with interment and services at St. Peters Churchyard, Perth Amboy, New Jersey, at 3:30 p. m.

Poucher Named Treasurer of Monarch Productions

Charles L. Glett, vice-president of Monarch, announced this week that David Poucher had been appointed treasurer, and that Mr. Glett will divide his time between contacting exchanges and conferring with the Coast on production.

New York House Assessments Cut

New York theatres in all boroughs except Richmond are benefiting by the 1934 assessment cuts made public this week by the Department of Taxes and Assessments. Two of the principal office buildings owned by film companies also will benefit, the Loew building, cut from $3,500,000 to $3,200,000, and the Paramount building, reduced from $14,400,000 to $13,0000,000.

Theatres in Manhattan receiving cuts are: Loew's State, from $4,550,000 to $4,300,000; Palace, $1,500,000 to $1,400,000; Mayfair, $1,900,000 to $1,800,000; 7th Avenue Roxy, $4,300,000 to $4,000,000; Rialto, $3,050,000 to $2,950,000; Gaiety, $2,450,000 to $2,250,000; Globe, $1,250,000 to $1,150,000; Strand, $3,600,000 to $3,350,000; Rivoli, $1,780,000 to $1,625,000; Capitol, $2,900,000 to $2,700,000; Hollywood, $1,150,000 to $1,125,000, and Lincoln Square from $1,400,000 to $1,350,000. Several houses in Brooklyn, the Bronx and Queens also gained by the reduction.

The Radio City Music Hall was raised this year in assessment valuations from $7,200,000 to $11,500,000 and the RKO Roxy was raised from $3,500,000 to $4,600,000. The reason given is that both were under construction when last year's valuations were made.

Circuit's Heads Meet in Boston

Circuit managers of the Mullin and Pinanski New England theatre circuit met in Boston Wednesday and Thursday in convention. Speakers on Tuesday included John Clark, Herman Wobber, Charles McCarthy, Thomas Bailey, Roger Ferri and Thomas Callahan, all of Fox.

On Thursday Stanley Waite, Robert Gillham, Bill Erbb and Edward Ruff of Paramount addressed the convention.

Francis Ellison Reid And William Seymour Dead

Francis Ellison Reid, 66, who was dramatic editor of the old New York Herald, and William Seymour, actor and stage manager, died on Tuesday.

Mr. Reid, who in addition to his journalistic activities, was more recently general press representative for Erlanger Productions, collapsed in the lobby of the New Amsterdam theatre, New York, and died before an ambulance surgeon could reach him.

William Seymour, 76, who lived through some of the greatest days of the American theatre, died in a hospital at Plymouth, Mass., after two weeks' illness.

MPTOA To Meet in January

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will hold its next annual convention in January at Los Angeles, Ed Kuykendall, president, stated in Washington Tuesday.

The Bowery

(United Artists-20th Century)

Comedy and Drama

Tab this now as a record wrecker. The producers included just about every audience-interesting entertainment element. There's interest for women that's just as powerful as its male appeal, yet so understandingly produced that it's a natural for youngsters. Rough, tough and boisterous; yet, paradoxically, it's beautiful. What's more, it's alive with showmanship-exploitation potentialities.

Only the title is needed to tell the community what it's all about. Stirring events, personalities and the kaleidoscopic color of the locale make the basic theme live. There's comedy in action and dialogue, human interest, building to pathos, thrill, excitement, spectacle and romance. Your crowd got a taste of this show's tone in "She Done Him Wrong." Here's a deluxe order of the same stuff dished up on a silver platter. Attuned to a reborn national spirit, the drama, comedy, love-interest, color and punch are made more potent by the musical scoring. Pulsating barroom "The Bowery" vies with sentimental "Auld Lang Syne" and "Boy of Mine" as theme songs. Raucous "Strike Up The Band," "Hot Time In The Old Town Tonight" and "Ta Ra Boom De Aye" and others provide the contrast.

It's a cinch to sell. They've handed you everything you need—names for anybody's purposes, Beery and Cooper, "The Champ" pair again, in an almost identical relation; George Raft hitting the high spots; Fay Wray, innocent and virtuous, caught in the throbbing conflict, going through and coming out clean; Pert Kelton, the '98 saloon soubrette and her ham-hipped-balloon-busted chorus.

"The Bowery" is a roaring saga of personalities, events, times and conditions rapidly becoming American mythology. There's Chuck Connors, "tops" in the Bowery, a mug whose heart is as big as his hulk; the idolizing Swipes; legendary Steve Brodie; John L. Sullivan, only a bit, but a thrilling bit; the crusading hatcheteer, Carrie Nation; the destruction of the Maine; the Spanish-American War patriotic fervor. And there are the rival Connors-Brodie volunteer fire brigades that battled with brickbats, brass-knuckles, blackjacks and garbage cans as the fire burned merrily. And add Brodie's famous Brooklyn Bridge jump.

If you have the picture booked, start talking about it now. Get your patrons into such an expectant mood that they would rather miss anything else than this show—McCarthy, Hollywood.

20th Century Production made by Darryl Zanuck and released by United Artists. Director, Raoul Walsh. Associate producers, William Goetz and Raymond Griffith. Based on novel by Michael L. Bombshell

(MGM)

Comedy

Jean Harlow, Lee Tracy and "Bombshell"—they'll expect something from that combination and the exhibitor has a right to promise it—a comedy wow of the first water. "Bombshell" is one of the funniest, speediest, most nonsensical pictures ever to hit a screen, an amazing, lowdown satire of Hollywood and its people, revealing scores of Hollywood's most intimate secrets.

In dialogue and action it's torridly zippy in spots. The studio will cut some of it. When all the slashing is over there still will be more than enough side-splitting entertainment.

It's the story of a picture star and her frantic headline publicity yen. Also it's the story of a quick-witted studio publicity director and his equally frantic struggles to concoct gags and stunts. Everything is screwy and there are a thousand laughs. But at the same time, audiences won't be able to prevent themselves from feeling sorry for the poor dumb star and the sorely-tried press agent. Nobody will know what's on the level or what's framed up.

Everything is paraded before you—the star and her nutty father and super-nutty brother; the most intimate details of her daily life; her picture; her director who is in love with her; the foreign nobleman in love with her; the p. a. in love with her. The fan magazine writers, the news reporters, the producer, all have their part in the mad melange. The star, the p. a., the director, the family, even her pets are on the spot; the whole thing threatens to explode into chaos. The walk-out on the picture prompts hectic excitement to get her back. Her only real love affair is only another gag. Her plan to have a baby (by adoption) winds up in a riot.

You've got everything you need to sell in this picture. Here's a Miss Harlow that nobody ever saw before, even in "Dinner at Eight," and the same goes for Lee Tracy. And you can write "star" after the names of about every one else in the cast.

Don't ignore the lure of inside stuff revelation, legitimate because the show is a burlesque of inside stuff. Remember, it's all in fun. It hasn't the faintest semblance of dignity in any phase. It's hooey that people like to believe—chatterers and fan magazine writers have seen to that. Therefore, don't disillusion them. Rather add it on thicker.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. A Victor Fleming production. Associate producer, Hunt Stromberg. Screen play by John Lee Mahin and Jules Furthman. From the play by Caroline Francke and Mack Crane. Recording director, Douglas Shearer. Art director, Merrill Pye. Interior decoration by Edwin B. Willis. Gowns by Adrian. Photographed by Chester Lyons and Harold Rosson. Film editor, Margaret Booth. Running time to be determined. Release date, Oct. 13, 1933.

Footlight Parade

Musical

On the heels of "42nd Street" and "Gold Diggers of 1933," Warner rushes its latest, biggest and what surely must be its most popularly appealing musical, "Footlight Parade." With the unquestioned box office success of the earlier pair as a working basis, the exhibitor, in small town and in metropolitan center, has here a money maker of the first water, a grandiloquent concoction of a rushing paced, lively dialogued and beautifully spectacular musical show which should bring them to the box office in large numbers.

Great marquee material is the starring combination of James Cagney and Joan Blondell, teaming neatly and actively, Miss Blondell an excellent support for the hard-hitting, aggressive bombastic appeal which is Cagney's best bet. Aiding them, and as a result of their previous work in "Footlight's" predecessors meriting top billing, are Dick Powell of the attractive voice and Ruby Keeler of the dancing feet and pleasing personality. Minor, but good support comes from Guy Kibbee, Frank McHugh, Arthur Hohl and others, all good, selling names. The exhibitor, obviously, has many dollars worth of marquee material there.

Strong selling, in addition, may be drawn from the fact that the spectacular dance numbers, several of them, are even more spectacular, more attractively staged than any in the two previous musicals. The music, somewhat reminiscent of the other films, is appealing and of a durable, popular quality. Notable numbers are "Honeymoon Hotel," "By a Waterfall" and "Shanghai Lil." The "Waterfall" number is woven about what is perhaps the most spectacular of all the dance numbers staged by Busby Berkeley, with diving girls, mermaid effects and the like. The number is very nearly startling in its camera effects.

The story veers slightly from the customary backstage theme, having to do with Cagney, a musical comedy producer, out of a job when "talkies" arrive, conceiving the idea of producing musical stage prologues to talking films. Kibbee and Hohl are his employers, Miss Blondell his secretary, McHugh his dance director, and the film's comedy contributor. Cagney, forced to produce one new prologue each week, works at top speed, driving his people in the studio, up all night, while Miss Blondell, in love with him, does her part. Powell walks in as a protege, but makes good on his own. Miss Keeler, as a former dancer but now a stenographer in horn-rimmed spectacles, gets her chance, and goes over on the stage, and with Powell. Beset by a "leak" in the studio to a rival, Cagney puts over three big prologues, wins the fat contract, and gets around to seeing things Miss Blondell's way.

It is all done with a rushing, smashing pace. Cagney the center of action, interspersed with the song and dance which at the moment is so popular and is done in so spectacular a fashion. The exhibitor, splashing his ballyhoo high, wide and handsome, can sell a better musical picture than either "42nd Street" or "Gold Diggers," strong names led by Cagney, a bigger and better spectacle, three excellent musical numbers, a host of girls, a rushing yarn from a different angle, the comedy of McHugh and occasionally Miss Blondell, cashing in on the musical fervor of the moment. It is a box

Britannia of Billingsgate

(Gaumont-British)

Comedy

Just as sure as "fried fish and potato chips" are the English equivalent of America's "hot dog," this new British comedy is the equivalent of bigger box-office.

And speaking of "fish and chips," delicacy of plebeian Britain, is no irrelevancy, for the romance on which the story depends begins in a fish-shop. Gaumont did not recognize the tremendous possibilities of this story, but they did have the vision (at last) to weave into the fabric of a picture a beautifully jazzed pattern of low life among the English, and a heavy stripe of "British film interest."

The story tells of a genial fish-frier who sings over the stove and whose voice is accidentally picked up over the mike when a film unit is working nearby. The result is a hunt for "the woman with the golden song" and she "goes into pictures." How many of our stars really have sold fish doesn't matter, they doubtless could sell fish. This one (Violet Loraine) is an old stage favorite with a personality that would sell anything. With her as her scaley husband is Gordon Harker, and the two make a comedy team with something entirely new in British humor. There are no cheap gags in this one; there is sentiment which is as sweet whether set in fish or films.

The family fortunes change with the screen fame of "Mum"; Pa and the two youngsters nearly lose themselves in the oily richness of success, but hearts remain the same—Mum is always the real representative of her race—she is Britannia, symbolic figure of English womanhood. The adventures of this lowly family flow through a rippling stream of clean fun.

It must not be claimed that this picture has been planned on super lines, but having studied the reactions of Americans to the British picture which in theme and mood most nearly resembled this ("Down Our Street," by Paramount), this writer ventures the prediction that "Britannia" will achieve bigger success than any previous British-made comedy. Laughs depend not upon gags and puns, but upon richly humorous situations and truly amusing dialogue. Incidentally, it is the first British film to plug England's picture studios, which has been done—often less logically—in so many Hollywood products.—MOORING, London.

Produced by Gaumont-British. Directed by Sinclair Hill. Length, 7,125 feet. Play by Christine Jope Slade and Sewell Stokes. Scenario and adaptation by C. H. Moresby-White and Ralph Stock. Dialogue by H. F. Maltby. Music by George Posford and Noel Gay. Photography by Mutz Greembaum. Dances by Ralph Readre. Recorded on British Acousic system.

I'm No Angel

(Paramount)

Comedy

Mae West wrote the original story, did the screen play and all the dialogue. During the running time, Mae West is on the screen almost 99 per cent of the time. When one considers the enormous financial success of "She Done Him Wrong," this concentration upon Mae West should insure that "I'm No Angel" will be a success.

For straight showmanship purposes, Mae West and her astounding popularity is this show's outstanding entertainment and patron appeal asset. It is well to realize at the beginning that many may be disappointed in "I'm No Angel." The picture has been roundly ballyhoed. Millions of fans are awaiting it. This showmanship value cannot be overlooked. Blaze the star's name all over the marquee and advertising.

In theme, Mae is the sensation of a small time traveling circus, a golddigger, as well as an attraction. Zooming to popularity, she becomes the big number of a big show. While still in the ring to take the suckers, she still retains enough elemental womanhood to fall in love legitimately. But the romance runs into many unseen difficulties.

Essentially the story is a one sawdust ring atmospheric yarn transferred to the drawing room. Typical of Mae West, it runs the range of entertainment elements. It is wildly comic, a bit romantic, colorfully dramatic, and possesses a characterictic punch.

Three sequences should smack the ordinary rank and file type of audience right in the eye. The first is the atmospheric small time carnival circus. Second is the sequence in which Mae is presented as queen of the iron cage, sticking her head in the mouth of a ferocious lion. Third is a burlesque breach of promise courtroom scene, in which Mae, in her own typical fashion, is her own lawyer. A riot of laughter, this sequence, alone, justifies the show.

Naturally Mae West is the factor upon which all smart showmen will concentrate. Little else, other than topical ballyhoo, is necessary, the name being backed up by the "She Done Him Wrong" furore. Yet, where ordinarily word of mouth advertising is a distinctly favorable asset, one must be forwarned that in the case of this picture, where comparisons are inevitable, it will be necessary to have something up the sleeve to keep the crowd hopped up so that the full value of name power may be realized.—MCCARTHY, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Directed by Wesley Ruggles. Original, screen play and dialogue by Mae West. Continuity by Harlan Thompson, with suggestions by Lowell Brentano. Music by Harvey Brooks. Lyrics by Gladys du Bois and Ben Ellison. Sound, Phil G. Wisdom. Photographed by Leo Tover. Art directors, Hans Dreier and Bernard Herzbrun. Release date, October 6, 1933.

CORRECTION

The name of S. Fowler Wright, novelist from whose work was made RKO Radio's "The Deluge," was given incorrectly as S. Fowler Rice in connection with the review which appeared in the August 19th issue.

The Avenger

(Monogram)

Drama

As program material "The Avenger" should find something of an audience. It would be well that the exhibitor be cautioned against the danger of attempting to sell the film as a mystery, of murder, detective, or any other variety. It is straight drama, reasonably plausible and reasonably active, but it is not mystery.

The two leading cast names probably will be somewhat familiar on the marquee. Ralph Forbes and Adrienne Ames play opposite one another. The only others who may be known are Arthur Vinton, J. Carrol Naish and Burton Churchill.

Forbes, assistant to the district attorney, receives a 20-year sentence for accepting a bribe. Quickly the story establishes a frameup with Vinton, Naish, Churchill, Murray Kinnell, Boothe Howard and Paul Fix involved. Fix is arrested for a robbery, meets Forbes in prison, and, dying after an attempted escape, discloses the "frame." Miss Ames, Forbes' fiancee, meanwhile has been married to Vinton, not knowing his connection with the case and believing him a friend of Forbes. Forbes, freed, determines to "get" the conspirators, though it is never made clear why he was framed in the first place. One by one the men disappear. Kinnell is found dead, then Churchill, Howard, Hanley disappear. Vinton, after his wife has given him sleeping tablets one night to permit him to overcome his terror and sleeplessness, is found dead. All evidence points to Miss Ames, until Forbes indicates that Vinton actually committed suicide, deliberately planning his death so that it would appear that his wife murdered him. Miss Ames walks out, believing Forbes, whom she still loves, a murderer, a thought in the minds of two detectives, until Forbes shanghais Miss Ames and shows her the conspirators, all neatly kidnapped, and ready to stand trial for the frameup.

That is the story, and it may indicate to the exhibitor something of the manner in which he may sell the picture for maximum results. More or less conventional selling, however, is rather clearly indicated, with few opportunities for unusual exploitation apparent. The angle of a rather novel kind of vengeance, as satisfied by Forbes, may be worth stressing, and the idea of the several men kidnapped, though believed by the girl to have been murdered, which fact is kept well hidden from the audience as well, may be useful. Midweek is probably the best exhibition spot.—AARONSON, New York.

Produced and distributed by Monogram. Directed by Edward L. Marin. From the novel by John Goodwin. Adapted by Brown Holmes. Dialogue by Tristram Tupper. Photographed by Sid Hickox. Recorded by John A. Stransky, Jr. Release date, August 10, 1933. Running time, 79 minutes.

Brief Moment

(Columbia)

Drama

A drama rather more of the marital variety, and concentrating on the time-honored wealthy boy and cabaret girl-theme, "Brief Moment" has its moments, but in the main it is not more than average entertainment, somewhat lacking in action and punch. Sold without making too many promises, the exhibitor may find the picture satisfactory in some midweek spot, but cannot expect too much of the film.

The cast is good, and the leading names make for presentable marquee material. Carole Lombard and Gene Raymond share the top of the bill, assisted by Monroe Owsley, Donald Cook, Arthur Hohl.

The theme and its execution are hardly new. Miss Lombard is a blues singer in a night club operated by Hohl, who is in love with her. Raymond is the playboy son of the wealthy Deane family, in love with Miss Lombard. The expected storm of protest arises from his straight-laced family when he introduces her, but the two are married nonetheless. Her efforts to drive Raymond into the self-respect which comes from earning his own living are of no avail. With the completely able assistance of his friend, Owsley, he continues his drinking, partying, up-all-night life of ease and luxury on his father's money.

Miss Lombard goes to Raymond's father asking that he cut off Raymond's generous allowance, but the father is more interested in a race horse out of condition than in his son's welfare and future. Raymond finally promises to go to work and is given a job in his father's organization. A few weeks of drudgery and he spends his time at the races instead of the office. Through Hohl, Miss Lombard finds out the fact, leaves Raymond and returns to the night club. Again, in expected fashion, this has the desired effect on Raymond, who leaves the luxurious apartment, changes his name and finds a real job. Hohl, acting the good samaritan, arranges a meeting of the two at luncheon, and with the check as his proof, wins back his wife.

That is the usual story. The exhibitor is rather under the necessity of selling the film along rather conventional lines, with the emphasis placed on the leading cast names for what they may be worth to him and his patronage, and the theme of the young man who is jolted out of his attitude of worthlessness and easy living by the loss of his wife. It is adult entertainment.—AARONSON, New York.

Produced and distributed by Columbia. Directed by David Burton From the stage play by S. N. Behrman. Screen play by Brian Marlow and Edith Fitzgerald. Assistant director, Wilbur McGaugh. Cameraman, Teddy Tetzlaff. Sound engineer, Glenn Rominger. Film editor, Gene Havlick. Release date. September 8, 1933. Running time, 69 minutes.

Three Little Pigs
(United Artists)
Delightful

Walt Disney, in this new Silly Symphony in color, has done more than present an amusing, entertaining, delightfully colored and executed nursery rhyme in cartoon. He has contributed a musical jingle that bids fair to take the town —and country, by storm. With authorship attributed to the musical concocter of the Disney studios, the jingle, with a rollicking lilt, and danced by the three little pigs, outside their houses of hay, of sticks and of bricks, is sheer nonsense, but completely delightful. It is merely "Who's Afraid of the Big, Bad Wolf," but it will be hummed and murmured for many a day. The subject is worth special billing, not forgetting the jingle and its title.—Running time, 8 minutes.

The Operator's Opera
(Vitaphone)
Unusually Fine

A play on the telephone operator and perfect service, this elaborate musical number is definitely worth special exhibitor attention, with tuneful numbers, smart dancing and an appealing idea well done. Girls and boys, dancing in the park are interrupted by a storm, in which they continue an appropriate routine. Frantic booth callers can get no numbers, due to the storm, until a new operator system is installed, and the perfect service arrives. The operators sing and dance at their work, the boothites are happy, and Donald Novis of the attractive radio voice entertains with a song number. Dawn O'Day, the Eton Boys also, perform. An unusual number has the chorus boys dropping nickels in the huge telephone, and finding attractive dancing partners slip out of the "coin return" into their arms. A smart and tuneful subject.—Running time, 21 minutes.

Butterfly
Of Interest

There is interest for school children and all "class" audiences in this number of the new series of nature studies from Erpi Picture Consultants, in which is seen, under the accurate eye of the microscopic lens, the development of the sparkling butterfly from the egg, the creeping caterpillar, the ugly chrysalis. The truly remarkable manner in which nature works "its wonders to perform," in addition to the clear explanations of Dr. Clyde Fisher of the Museum of Natural History, make for a subject having good school and tieup possibilities, and a large amount of interest, if not much of what is generally called entertainment.—Running time, 10 minutes.

The Farmers' Friend
Microscopy

The lady bird, just a busy beetle with a ladylike name, is the title of this subject in the "Conflicts of Nature" series. The story is of the beetle's relentless war upon the plundering plant insect, the scale. Something is made of the "re-creation" of the lady bird with a bath of sea water after 36 hours of immersion in water from the kitchen sink. Louis Tolhurst presents the microscopic study and Frederick Shields the narrative.—Running time, 6 minutes.

Warren Doane Brevity
(Universal)
Weak

The weakness of this short lies in its lack of continuity, although that lack is not necessarily the fault of the direction, but rather of the idea. The subject presents a typical vaudeville bill on the screen, with the various acts taking their turns with preceding announcements by a master of ceremonies. Though the acts individually are lively and fairly well done, including Eddie Peabody, the banjo master; a team of acrobatic dancers and a good example of tap work by the Three Kings, the subject loses by its lack of continued punch.—Running time, 19 minutes.

High Spots of New York
(Principal)
Scenic

Starting with an out-of-the ordinary shot of New York's skyline, taken through the trees of Central Park, the picture leaves the city shortly for views of Albany and then strikes out into the Adirondacks country, lakes George and Champlain, and Mount Marcy, the high spot of the state. There should be a welcome surprise to many non-Eastern patrons in learning that the beauty of the state is not confined to the architecture of Manhattan. Charles S. Cajiano produced the picture. Narration is by Arthur Hale of radio station WOR.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Seed Dispersal
Interesting

Produced by Erpi Picture Consultants, and released through Audio Productions in the theatrical field, this, first of a new series of nature studies under the microscopic lens, possesses a high degree of interest for those interested in the mysterious ways of nature as well as for those audiences who appreciate something which is not necessarily entertainment in the strictest sense. In this subject, with an accompanying lucid explanation by Dr. Clyde Fisher of the Metropolitan Museum of Natural History, is seen the manner in which various plants distribute their propagating seeds. The subject offers unusual exhibitor opportunity for school tieups and club contacts.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Strange As It Seems
Interesting

There is rather the usual amount of general appeal and interest in this, Number 31 of the John Hix series of oddities found here, there and everywhere, though the series has lost something by its current absence of color. Outstanding among subjects pictured are the tobacco chewing mule in the California mine for 29 years; the cocks bred in Japan with tails 25 feet long; the gigantic turtles off the coast of Australia; the Chinese joss house built in 1852 by Chinese miners in the gold rush town of Wearverville, Oregon, and the original aeroplane of the Gilmore Brothers of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, said to be pioneers even pre-dating the Wright Brothers in heavier-than-air flight. An interesting subject.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Abroad in Old Kentucky
(RKO Radio)
Entertaining

Novel entertainment puts a kick in this Masquers comedy number, in which is portrayed the deep-dyed feud of the Catfields and the Ratfields in old Kentucky. The "revenuers" get on the trail of the moonshine still and the war waxes merry, with the whole thing reduced to a rather amusing burlesque, with the revenue man, last of the Ratfields, meeting and falling in love with the daughter of the Catfields. And he chose romance to the "service" and the feud. All nonsense, but quite enjoyable nonsense.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Top of the World
(Vitaphone)
Interesting

E. M. Newman of the World Adventures, in this number of the series, takes his screen audience to the northern countries, Denmark and Norway, the land of the midnight sun. Pictorially and verbally are described the life, customs, architecture and play of the inhabitants of these far northern countries, all told with careful selection of detail and in interesting fashion. A worthwhile subject of the travel variety, possible of special attention in communities where a large body of the patronage is of Scandinavian extraction.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Tarzan the Fearless
Action

Buster Crabbe, noted swimmer and physically a handsome figure, continues where he left off in the original feature, in this first of several episodes of the serial under the same title. In this number, "Blood Money," Tarzan displays his growing affection for Jacqueline Wells, daughter of the imperiled scientist, by rescuing her father. As the episode closes there is increasing danger from angered natives, aroused by the charms of voodoo. This episode affords Crabbe an opportunity to display his ability as a swimmer, rather lacking in the earlier reels. The serial is excellent kid material, and should bring them back a-running every week, if it is properly ballyhooed, a method of selling which it will stand.—Running time, 20 minutes.

FOR 20 MILLION PEOPLE!

INDIANA POLITICIANS SAY..

"IF YOU CAN'T LICK 'EM

..JOIN 'EM"

Can you imagine this? The other day an exhibitor said to one of our salesmen, "I'm afraid to play those Culbertson pictures . . . they may teach my customers to play Bridge and keep 'em away from my theatre". . . how's that for an excuse to pick your own pocket?

There are only twenty million bridge players in the country and that's about one-third of the adult population of every man's town, and a lot of 'em are staying away from the theatre right now!

When you go fishin' you've got to have bait, don't you?

You buy star pictures because you know they've a following . . . you buy popular novel pictures because they've been read and people want to see what the characters look like! In other ads we've told you a lot of interesting and surprising things about this fellow Ely Culbertson . . . bridge wizard and showman. Showed you where and why he gets more fan mail than a Hollywood queen . . . told you about his 4,000 teachers and their 600,000 pupils . . . showed you why he commands the front page of every newspaper, why one of his books sells more copies than the ten "best seller" authors.

—It's because twenty million people are interested in him, what he says, what he does that they'll lay their dough on the line to see him. Those are the folks that right now are dealing out the cards . . . the ones you want to pull into your theatre . . . and Mister, Ely Culbertson and his "My Bridge Experiences" are the bait! Bring those people in six times and you'll be just six times better off than you are right now . . . and, besides, you've got a pretty good chance of convincing them that yours is a right nice opera house and that the movies after all are a nice change from staying home every night.

Well, we've told our story . . . RKO-Radio has the pictures ready . . . six of 'em, honeys! Funny, thrilling and darned good entertainment for everyone. When you book 'em, give 'em the works . . . advertise 'em as you would your biggest feature. There's a real showman's campaign book ready, filled with ads, publicity, stunts . . . we've posters, lobby displays, novelties galore to lure 'em in. This ain't no side-show—it's a circus!

Yes, sir, they're playing bridge right now! "If you can't lick 'em . . . join 'em."

SCIENTISTS ANSWER FORMAN'S CHARGES

Dr. A. A. Brill, Psychiatrist, and Dr. F. Astor, Child Psychologist, Declare Motion Pictures Good Influence on Youth

Deriding the claims of Henry James Forman—in his recently published book, "Our Movie Made Children"—that motion pictures have a harmful mental influence on children, two eminent phycho-analytical experts this week took up defense of the industry and specifically answered charges made by Mr. Forman. Dr. A. A. Brill, famous psychiatrist, and Dr. Frank Astor, child psychologist, concurred in the opinion that motion pictures are, on the contrary, a good influence on the young folk.

It all started some months ago when the book first was brought to the public's attention, but things came to a head last Thursday when, at a round table discussion of "Our Movie Made Children" at the Exposition of Women's Arts and Industries at the Astor hotel, New York, someone got up and declared that a 17-year-old girl, a delinquent, had said the "movies taught her how to kiss and how to appear in the presence of her beau."

"It seems to me that such an education is easily gleaned from reading fine novels or moving in nice society," said Dr. Brill later. "A girl of 17 does not necessarily need the movies to acquire such an education."

Said Dr. Astor, the child psychologist: "Billy Blank sees a picture and is caught stealing. Science will have great difficulty untangling all the factors of such behavior. He may be emotionally disturbed because his father is a drunkard or because he is failing in school. The causes he gives for his own behavior have little value. The pictures may not be to blame."

Other subjects of the conference included, chiefly, an appeal for funds to carry on the work of the Motion Picture Research Council, whose activities thus far have been financed by the Payne Fund. Mr. Forman, who presided at the forum, is closely allied with the work of the Research Council.

The visit of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at the Exposition on the night which was to have been devoted to the film forum, rather put a crimp in the activities.

Calls Statements Unproven

When the clubwomen finally did get down to their discussion little time was left, but enough was said, apparently, to stir the ire of the two psycho-analysts.

"Psychologically speaking, there is nothing in Mr. Forman's book that offers anything new about movies or children," Dr. Brill said in a statement this week. "Most of the statements are vague and unproven. To be sure, it is not possible to say whether the original material upon which the author based this volume offers anything of real value, but judging the book, as such, I feel that the author's conception of the emotional needs of young people leaves much to be desired.

"Our well-meaning 'would-be' reformers forget that the impression of the occasional criminal movie is heavily counterbalanced by the moral precepts imparted by parents, religion and social fear.

"No normal person can be influenced by the movies to do anything wrong that is normally foreign to him. Even if you should hypnotize a normal person and then order him to commit a crime, he will rebel against it while he is hypnotized. Those defectives who are criminally inclined need no movies or hypnotism to influence them into burglaries or rape."

Dr. Brill went on to say that Mr. Forman appeared to ignore the basic idea of the function of the motion picture. Based on years of experience and study, it is Dr. Brill's opinion that the motion picture provides the greatest medium for entertainment and education, "for besides the love story, which may be stimulating or stupid, even the intelligent layman can cull a lot of pleasure and knowledge from any moving picture performance."

Psychiatrists as Doormen

Dr. Brill further said that if the public were to follow the implications projected to the reader by Mr. Forman, the motion picture industry is in dire need of a thorough reforming. The whole industry then should be in the hands of idealists who would produce only such pictures as measure up to those highest social goals established in the book, he pointed out. Second, a board of psychiatrists should be stationed at the entrance of every theatre in order to determine the mental and emotional fitness of every applicant for admission to a particular picture. All this because Mr. Forman "bewails the fact that 'all movies are open wide alike to moron and philosopher.'"

Dr. Frank Astor, field secretary of the National Child Welfare Association and a member of the Executive Committee of the National Board of Review, said: "We must not be too hasty in passing judgment on motion pictures because of this book, as Dr. Charters, in the introduction, very neatly says of Forman, 'his interpretation of the studies (from which he gleaned his material), however, his dramatic and emphatic presentation are of necessity entirely his own.'"

Limited Abilities

"Motion pictures are here to stay," Dr. Astor continued. "They are a mighty force for construction or destruction. But let us not be too hasty to decide which pictures are helpful and which are harmful. Even scientists have limited abilities when it comes to measuring human life. Suppose these learned men undertook a study of the effects of football on the players. They could show that such and such number of healthy boys and young men were killed. Is there any way as yet for measuring the good influence of football on the growth of a boy's character or personality?

"In the field of motion pictures the same principle holds. Science has magical powers when it comes to invention and the perfecting of machinery, or in showing us the increase or decrease of blood pressure when child or adult sees a picture. But can it measure all the effects on human beings? No, not yet."

Dr. Abbott Lawrence Lowell, former president of Harvard University, attended his first meeting as chairman of the Motion Picture Research Council last week. Dr. Lowell fills the place of the late president of Princeton, Dr. John Grier Hibben. At the new chairman's first meeting it was decided to incorporate the Council into a permanent body. Cooperation with the NRA in drafting the motion picture code was voted.

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

Twenty years ago on an October morn the International Association of Masters of Dancing sat in annual conclave and ruled that the "turkey trot" and the "grizzly" bear were "absolutely vulgar." They agreed that the tango and "hitchy-koo" were all right, if danced with decorum.

There has been much soft light and music since then. And the world has progressed a lot, but the dancing masters would hardly accept as a progressive step the dance which Mae West will introduce in Paramount's "I'm No Angel," and which "Diamond Lil" calls the "midway" describing it thusly:

"Not a dance of the hands and feet," Mae said, "but of the midway. I throw discretion to the winds, my hips to the north, east, south and west."

"Yes," admitted Miss West, "I wrote the story of 'I'm No Angel' myself. It's all about a girl who lost her reputation but never missed it."

Stunts advertising the awarding of a "live baby" have been pulled frequently. However, the "live baby" always turned out to be a baby pig. The Empire, at Placerville, Cal., made a similar offer last week, but in this case the award was actually a lusty eight-months old baby girl. The parents were said to be without means to properly care for the infant.

Dave (Mr. Aimee McPherson) Hutton has had a lot to say of late to New York reporters, about one thing or another. We are waiting to hear him tell them about his recent appearance on the stage of Jensen-Von Herberg's Roxy, at Seattle, where an "enthusiastic" audience greeted him with numerous eggs of ancient vintage. One Harold Pickrem was arrested and released on $25 bail. Mr. Pickrem inferred that it was worth every nickel.

Mae West—Joan of Arc of the American farmer.

That is how the "done-him-wrong" actress is likely to go down in history, predicts prophetic Arthur Cole, office manager of Paramount's exchange in Kansas ity.

"The Mae West influence is setting a new style in feminine lure," reasons Mr. Cole. "Her popularity promises to bring curves back, and there's only one way to get 'em—eat more. And if women go off the calory standard and put on the feed bag, obviously the problem of farm surpluses will be solved." Anyway, Miss Mae's curves have certainly solved many of the problems of Paramount's press agents.

Maestro Abe Lyman waited impatiently for two months to lead his orchestra in Zanuck's "Broadway Thru a Keyhole." He had a swell swallow-tail suit made for the occasion, experimented with makeup and hair glue, and even practiced speaking three-syllable words. Then, the day before shooting began, he went down to Malibu and sat in the sun. As a result Abe was in bed wrapped in cotton and oils when his numbers were photographed. They had to take special close-ups later so he could get in the picture.

The world's meanest man—probably the same guy who sticks his gum on motion picture theatre seats—tried to steal the world's smallest Bible in the Hall of Religion at the Chicago fair. The Bible, one third the size of a postage stamp and one-quarter [illegible] thick, is insured for $15,000. Costs a nickel to look at through a magnifying glass.

Maybe that's why labor went to Washington to attend the motion picture code hearings.

ALTHOUGH no dates describe the time of the setting of Paramount's "Song of Songs," it appears from all indications that the story has to do with the days before electric refrigeration. However, when Miss Dietrich enters the bedroom on her wedding night the wine bucket is just chock-full of the nicest and neatest ice cubes the like of which remind one of present day home refrigeration.

The title had an early beginning. First came the "Book of Psalms," followed by "The Proverbs." In "Proverbs," wisdom is religion and folly is irreligion. "Ecclesiastes" was third. "The Song of Solomon," next in the group, and commonly classed the poetical book, is ascribed to Solomon, an ascription now discarded by many. Called in the Hebrew title "The Song of Songs," i. e., the best of them all, the transcription gives to Paramount ad writers a new field to explore for adjectives for advertising copy for this film.

An infant must not remain exposed to the light in studios more than 30 seconds at a time, nor work more than 20 consecutive days, or longer than two hours a day. A rigid physical examination must be passed before any child under six months can make his picture debut, and the studio must sign a liability agreement which remains in force for six months, thereby assuming responsibility for any eye injury which may develop within the half-year. This liability includes payment of all medical attention required and additional funds in payment of consequential damages in the event of permanent injury. And no technicality can be used to invalidate this California state law.

Ruling May Affect 30 Millions in Rent Claims on Publix

Possible rent claims against Publix Enterprises, Inc., totaling more than $30,000,000, received what may be a severe setback last week through a ruling handed down by Referee Henry K. Davis disallowing an amended claim for $620,000 which the owners of three Missouri theatres asked permission to file early in September. The three Missouri theatres involved were the Paramount, Joplin; the Paramount, Springfield, and the Electric at Kansas City, formerly operated by Publix-Dubinsky. The claim was based on future rents for the period of leases, which aggregated approximately $2,000,000, and the amended claim of $620,000 was filed in accordance with the laws of Missouri.

Rulings Awaited

If a similar ruling on all or a majority of such claims is handed down by the referee it would eliminate one of the Irving Trust Company's major reorganization problems. Approximately $8,000,000 in future rent claims already are pending, awaiting a ruling by Mr. Davis, and the filing of additional rent claims in the future amounting to $22,000,000 also awaits these decisions.

Publix Enterprises' trustees do not regard the ruling disallowing the Missouri claims as establishing a precedent, but they do feel that it strengthens their position in contesting similar claims now pending.

Mr. Davis, after handing down the ruling, authorized the trustees to form a new corporation to take over newly negotiated leases on four Chattanooga and Nashville theatres from the trustee in bankruptcy for Tennessee Enterprises, Inc., a Publix subsidiary.

The theatres involved are the State, Tivoli and Rialto at Chattanooga and the Paramount at Nashville. Assignment of the leases to the new corporation was contingent upon purchase of the equipment in the State and Paramount for $40,000 by Publix. Mr. Davis approved this purchase over a single objection filed by Georgia Realty Corp., lessor of various southern theatres to Publix. The validity of the Georgia corporation's claim will be decided late this week.

Reserves Decision on Zirn Plea

Meanwhile the U. S. circuit court of appeals Monday reserved decision on the motion of Samuel Zirn, attorney for a group of Paramount bondholders, for permission to appeal a decision denying his previous motion to remove the Paramount trustees in bankruptcy and Referee Davis.

Attorneys for the trustees, Mr. Davis and Mr. Zirn, were given until Wednesday to file additional briefs on the motion, and a ruling is expected from the court within a fortnight.

Last June Judge Frances G. Coleman, in U. S. district court, denied Mr. Zirn's motion to remove Charles D. Hilles, Eugene W. League, and Charles E. Richardson as trustees. In the same motion Mr. Zirn had petitioned for the removal of Referee Davis. This also was denied. Mr. Zirn's motion, as well as his appeal this week, was based on alleged affiliations of the trustees with financial and film interests which, Mr. Zirn declared, were prejudicial to the interests of creditors. He charged Mr. Davis with bias.

S. A. Lynch was in New Orleans last week conferring with E. V. Richards on the Saenger theatres setup. It was reported that a deal satisfactory to both Publix and Mr. Richards, the receiver for the Saenger circuit, is being negotiated

Warner Provides Unusual Paper on "Footlight Parade"

Warner's advertising and publicity department has prepared, for the company's latest musical, "Footlight Parade," sales material of unusual character. Included in the paper and other selling aids are 24-sheets, six sheets, heralds on heavy stock, suitable for mounting on walls, and special art posters, printed in multiple colors. Various displays, depicting the principals, show girls and outstanding spectacle scenes, are available to the exhibitor for lobby mounting. Publicity includes a newspaper serialization of the story in 10 chapters, a 30-minute radio sketch, and advance and current publicity campaigns.

Dual Sessions for SMPE Meeting in Chicago Oct. 16-18

When the Society of Motion Picture Engineers holds its Fall Convention at the Edgewater Beach hotel in Chicago, October 16, 17 and 18, three subjects will come up for special consideration and discussion: Wide Range Recording and Reproduction, Theatre Projection, and Illumination. One entire technical session will be given to each of these three subjects.

Because of the short convention period and in order to present adequately the problems confronting the industry, dual sessions have been scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons. In arranging these sessions the Papers Committee has endeavored to divide the sessions so that members may hear the papers in which they are most interested.

One of the most important phases of the convention will be the inauguration of newly elected officers for the coming year. Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith and Loyd A. Jones are the nominees for president, O. M. Glunt and A. C. Hardy for vice president. J. H. Kurlander is the only nominee for secretary. E. P. Curtis and T. E. Shea are the slate for treasurer. Herbert Griffin, P. H. Evans, M. C. Batsel and W. B. Rayton are the nominees for governors; two of which will be elected.

The semi-annual banquet will be held Tuesday, October 17.

Unusual entertainment features include the exhibition of motion pictures of The Century of Progress, taken by H. T. Cowling. Mr. Cowling, a member of the Society, has spent the entire summer in photographing the complete exposition.

All Small Theatres Of Tampico Razed By Cyclone, Flood

by JAMES LOCKHART
Mexico City Correspondent

The double headed cyclone and consequent flooding of the two rivers which had long served it so well, that converted Tampico, Mexico's greatest oil port and largest good time charley town, into a place of desolation, dealt exhibitors an especially heavy blow. All the smaller cinemas of the town were obliterated, while each of the seven larger picture houses suffered damages ranging from complete destruction which will necessitate entire rebuilding to smashed roofs and other parts. Renters also share in this loss as the big blows claimed several thousand feet of film and many sound discs when they wrecked the cinemas, and this in addition to the loss of business.

As far as has been determined in Mexico City, cyclone losses to Tampico exhibitors and distributors, some of the exchanges suffering wrecked offices and warehouses, consisted entirely of property damage. Reports from Tampico are that no exhibitors, distributors or their employees were killed or hurt in the crashes of the cinemas and offices, and it is indicated that there were no casualties among spectators at the cinemas. This is regarded as singularly fortunate, as the worst blow came on the afternoon and evening of Sunday, always a big day for Mexican picture houses. It is understood in Mexico City that practically all the Tampico exhibitors propose to rebuild at the earliest opportunity.

Long Is Columbia Story Executive

Ray Long, for 13 years editor of Cosmopolitan Magazine and for seven years prior to that editor of the Red Book, has been signed by Harry Cohn, president, as editorial executive of Columbia Pictures.

Noted as a keen judge of fiction material, Mr. Long at one time or another worked with, and published the writings of some of the most noted authors of the day. Several of the screen's well known writers worked with the cooperation of Mr. Long, including Laurence Stallings, Maurine Watkins, Adela Rogers St. John and Frances Marion. Mr. Long has published "Lady for a Day," "The Office Wife," 20,000 Years in Sing Sing," all of which were adapted for the screen. He will maintain headquarters in Hollywood, where he will gather a staff, and attempt the development of new screen writers.

TECHNOLOGICAL

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 193.—(A) What are the practical effects of a ground in the projector lamp circuit? (B) Name reasons why projection lamp circuit should be tested for ground every day. (C) What results if a slow-leakage ground continues indefinitely? (D) Under what condition would it be possible for a slow leakage ground to continue indefinitely if not discovered by test? If a slow leak let one-tenth of an ampere escape from a 60-volt circuit which was used eight hours daily, how much would the loss amount to in watts in 30 days? (E) Tell us what danger results from an ungrounded projector mechanism which is charged with EMF.

Answer to Question No. 186

Bluebook School Question No. 186 was: (A)How would you protect a circuit at least reasonably well in case, through some accident, you got caught short of fuses, only one fuse of a circuit having blown? Name two methods. (B) What emergency substitutes are there for fuses? Are they reasonably reliable? (C) Tell us how the projectionist may construct a substitute fuse of any desired capacity from material always available. (D) Suppose you were obliged to make an emergency substitute 40-ampere fuse. How would you do it?

The following made good: Lester Van Buskirk and E. Kroll; C. Rau and S. Evans; K. Dowling; D. Danielson; H. H. Menifee; W. Ostrum; G. E. Doe; J. Wentworth; T. Van Vaulkenburg; H. Edwards; B. L. Blinkendorfer; J. G. Sims; L. Hutch and D. Goldberg; J. N. and T. W. Williams; M. Spencer and D. T. Arlen; L. Hendershot and R. Rubin; A. Breaston and H. Haber; D. L. Howard; R. D. Konley and S. Maybe; B. Diglah and P. Jackson; G. Johnson and N. T. Kane; B. R. Lansing, E. Ford, W. L. Thompson and F. A. Kreitzer; R. D. Lynn and L. G. Lamb; F. D. Hess; B. L. Banning and L. Jones; L. F. Evans; D. Holler and D. R. Peters; T. S. Raymond; G. Harrison and E. Harlor; D. V. Peterson and M. G. Greig; P. L. Danby; J. N. Hall; H. True; R. S. Allen and T. N. Williams; G. Tinlin; L. Summers and D. M. Banks; E. Rymer and B. L. Tanner; E. and L. H. Munroe; O. L. Evans; M. L. George and R. Singleton; C. Reed; D. U. Granger; L. M. Oglesby and Son; H. G. Roth and G. Sarno; H. Cohen and G. C. Cottrell; R. S. Patterson and L. H. Danville; P. L. Wheeler and M. Scully, T. Kelley and C. Cummings; S. F. and W. Love; D. Murphy and S. L. Reade; R. C. MacDonald; R. Geddings; P. L. Jensen; O. L. Daris and M. Simms; H. C. Lake; C. H. Blaum; R. Wheeler and R. Suler; L. D. Stellegos and G. Wayne; M. R. Davis; D. L. Sinklow; A. Bailey and I. Bailey; L. C. Abrams and E. F. Griffin; L. and D. Casey; D. Emmerson; D. L. Mason and J. T. Ballinger; G. Farmann; H. D. Schofield.

I believe L. Hutch and D. Goldberg answer Section A a bit the best. They say: "If the projectionist is careful and has his work well planned and organized, such a thing could hardly happen. Not admitting that I would permit such a situation to come about, still if it did (all things can happen) I would first of all see if a fuse of proper or approximately proper amperage capacity could be taken from some circuit that could, without serious inconvenience, be left temporarily dead. This I would, after testing the circuit for ground, use in place of the one blown, at the same time issuing a pronto call for fuses. If no such fuse were available I would, if the circuit must be used at once, bridge the contacts of the blown fuse with copper of any capacity large enough to carry the current, depending upon one remaining fuse while I made a copper fuse of proper capacity from strands from asbestos-covered cable, such as is used to connect up the projector lamp, using one strand for each seven amperes of current in the circuit.

(B) Four hundred and ninety-one answered this one as follows (with some difference in wording): "Copper wires whose fusing point is known at least approximately. Such emergency fuses are sufficiently safe for strictly temporary use while a stock of fuses are being obtained, provided there is one good fuse in place."

(C) Approximately the same number answered this one to the effect that temporary fuses of any desired capacity may be made by using a sufficient number of asbestos-cable strands. There was some difference in opinion as to how many amperes each strand should stand for. It ranged from 5 to 8, with the large majority favoring 7 amperes, so that for 21 amperes of current three strands would be sufficient for temporary use.

(D) Rau and Evans answer thus: "A substitute fuse may be made from strands of asbestos-covered wire, one strand of which will fuse at about 10 amperes. It therefore follows that four strands would fuse at 40 amperes, hence to avoid such fusing we would add one strand, making five of them in all, twisted together so as to act in parallel, of course."

Such copper fuses work all rght, but they are not to be depended upon except in emergency, for the reasons that they will be slow acting because an appreciable space of time would be required to raise their temperature to the blowing point if there was an increase in current flow. Also, while the low-melting-point fuse metal will always let go quickly and at approximately the same temperature, there would probably be a considerable variation in copper temperature melting point. Possibly I may be wrong in that last, but anyhow that is the way it looks to me.

52 THEATRES SIGN ERPI DEAL

Fifty-two theatres of the Golden State circuit, California, have signed the new annual repair-and-replacement contracts for one year with Electrical Research Products, according to general sales manager C. W. Bunn. Under the contracts ERPI assumes responsibility for repairs and replacements necessary for normal maintenance of Western Electric sound systems in the theatres. The total of theatres that have signed such contracts exceeds 900, Mr. Bunn said.

Arcturus Seeks Injunction On License Clause with RCA

The Arcturus Radio Tube Company of Newark, N. J., has filed suit in chancery court, Wilmington, Del., against the Radio Corporation of America, seeking to enjoin the company from enforcing a minimum royalty clause in a licensing agreement between the two. Arcturus alleges that in settlement of a 1931 damage suit, RCA paid it a certain sum and granted it a license to use RCA radio tube patents.

The agreement, according to the Arcturus suit, contained a clause providing Arcturus should pay minimum royalties of $50,000. Arcturus contends it was understood this clause was not to be enforced, that it was inserted only to give RCA an excuse to refuse licenses to undesirable companies and individuals. RCA never made any attempt to enforce the provision until last July, it is claimed by Arcturus.

Columbia

AIR HOSTESS: Evalyn Knapp, James Murray, Thelma Todd—Interesting picture of the air mail with plenty of action. Business up plenty on this one. Good Saturday picture. Running time, 66 minutes. Played September 16-17.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

DANGEROUS CROSSROADS: Chic Sale—Mighty interesting picture with plenty of action. Sale always goes good here. Running time, 62 minutes. Played September 2-3.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

SILENT MAN: Tim McCoy—This is another good western picture, showing McCoy as an escaped convict, who goes out to make good, and does he make good. There is plenty of action and thrills in this one and it should please 100 per cent. Business slightly above average and everyone well pleased. Running time, 68 minutes. Played September 23.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. Country patronage.

SUNDOWN RIDER, THE: Buck Jones—Another very good western picture from Columbia. This is crammed full of action and thrills and will please everyone. Buck Jones has turned in some very good pictures lately but this seems to be one of the best ever. If you want westerns that are sure-fire, then get them from Columbia. Come on, Columbia, show the industry what good westerns are. Running time, 60 minutes. Played September 9.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

Empire Films, Ltd.

TRAPPED IN A SUBMARINE: John Batten, Sydney Seaward—For educational value it is good, but for entertainment value just fair. Explains how the sailors escape from a submarine, that's all.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

First National

CENTRAL AIRPORT: Richard Barthelmess—Went over better than we expected. It is a good show. Running time, 75 minutes.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ELMER THE GREAT: Joe E. Brown—Went over great with us.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LILLY TURNER: Ruth Chatterton—Very satisfactory picture; well received. Played August 4.—G. A. Hart, Roxy Theatre, Stratford, Texas. Small town patronage.

LITTLE GIANT, THE: Edward G. Robinson—Robinson is well liked here. This did not seem to be up to Robinson's standard. Played August 11.—G. A. Hart, Roxy Theatre, Stratford, Texas. Small town patronage.

LITTLE GIANT, THE: Edward G. Robinson—A dandy picture with plenty of comedy.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MIND READER, THE: Warren William—Good picture.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SHE HAD TO SAY YES: Loretta Young, Lyle Talbot—This is one of the sweetest little pictures we have had the pleasure of running in some time. A good love story that will please both young and old. The story of a customers' girl—one who entertains visiting buyers in the big city. We played this one day to the best business in several months. Running time, 62 minutes. Played September 20.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

Fox

ADORABLE: Janet Gaynor, Henry Garat—Just a pretty good program picture that fell flat at the box office. This Henry Garat sure is the bunk. He can't act and can't talk. If they would have had some good American actor instead, I am satisfied the picture would have gone over much better. The first Janet Gaynor picture that did not make money for us. Running time, 85 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

ARIZONA TO BROADWAY: James Dunn, Joan Bennett—Good picture. Will do fair business.—H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

ARIZONA TO BROADWAY: James Dunn, Joan Bennett—Good entertainment, but nothing outstanding. Played September 9.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

ARIZONA TO BROADWAY: James Dunn, Joan Bennett—Just a fair program picture. Not much at the box office. Running time, 67 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BEST OF ENEMIES: Buddy Rogers, Marian Nixon—Here is a picture that is what people want, but had better direction and one more comedian been added you would have had a picture. What does Fox do with El Brendel. They never work him.—J. H. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

FACE IN THE SKY: Spencer Tracy—Was well liked.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HOLD ME TIGHT: Sally Eilers, James Dunn—Fair program. With Mickey Mouse and Bing Crosby it scraped by. Why don't Fox give El Brendel a chance? Any other company would have made box office out of him. An independent producer can make dough with Brendel in "Ole Olson."—H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

SMOKE LIGHTNING: George O'Brien—George O'Brien in a Zane Grey story is all we want on any Saturday, rain or shine. He makes up the loss with specials for the bridge players. Running time, 65 minutes.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

STATE FAIR: Will Rogers, Janet Gaynor—Will Rogers drew a little above average. Satisfied everybody. Played September 20-21.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

Mayfair

JUSTICE TAKES A HOLIDAY: Patricia O'Brien, Lloyd Whitlock—A good program picture. Running time, 63 minutes.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

MGM

BARBARIAN, THE: Ramon Novarro, Myrna Loy—Just a waste of film as far as my folks were concerned. Running time, 88 minutes.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

BARBARIAN, THE: Ramon Novarro, Myrna Loy—This one was not liked by my people; too much foreign talk. It is a desert picture and fair for its kind. Running time, 82 minutes. Played September 2-3.—W. T. Biggs, Adair Theatre, Adair, Iowa. Rural patronage.

HELL BELOW: Robert Montgomery, Walter Huston, Madge Evans, Robert Young, Jimmy Durante—Good show with plenty of action, comedy and story. For me it was good on Saturday but not suitable for a Sunday show. Running time, 100 minutes. Played September 16-17.—W. T. Biggs, Adair Theatre, Adair, Iowa. Rural patronage.

HELL BELOW: Robert Montgomery, Jimmy Durante, Robert Young, Walter Huston, Madge Evans—A good picture. Did not draw for me.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HELL BELOW: Robert Montgomery, Robert Young, Walter Huston, Madge Evans, Jimmy Durante—This is a god hit anywhere. No trouble to sell this one. The name and the cast will just put it over if you bill the neighborhood well. Did good business on this and they liked it. Running time, 104 minutes. Played September 15-16.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

MIDNIGHT MARY: Ricardo Cortez, Loretta Young—A good program picture, no more, no less. Running time, 76 minutes. Played September 4-5.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

PEG O' MY HEART: Marion Davies—A delightfully wholesome picture that you can recommend for the entertainment of the entire family. All sexes, all ages, will derive enjoyment from it. A good story, well acted and ably directed; with some of the sweetest recorded music ever placed on a film. It's this kind of picture that will re-establish the movie with discriminating patrons and bring back to our theatres a class of clean minded people who have been driven away by dirty gags, sex filth and the glorification of gangsters, bootleggers and racketeers.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

REUNION IN VIENNA: John Barrymore, Diana Wynyard—Grossed $16.00 in three days. The biggest flop I have ever shown. Should never be shown. A disgusting theme.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

STORM AT DAYBREAK: Kay Francis, Nils Asther—A flop. They did not like it.—H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

STRANGER'S RETURN, THE: Lionel Barrymore—Be sure and get behind this one, you exhibitors who cater to small town and rural patronage! You cannot say too much about it. The picture will back up your most extravagant statements. It's clean and wholesome. In my opinion, it's the best story of farm life ever screened. I liked it so well I sat through it three times. If the producers will give us more pictures like this one and "Peg O' My Heart," the small town exhibitor can start paying on his debts. There's one assistance Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer can render, however, and that is give us some one sheets and photos. That will help us sell our pictures. If they would employ an artist who could draw something besides a man looking at a woman, we might get results from our lobby displays.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

TUGBOAT ANNIE: Marie Dressler, Wallace Beery—Niz. Varry niz.—H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

TURN BACK THE CLOCK: Lee Tracy, Mae Clarke—Very good entertainment. Not a special but a good program picture. Played September 7-8.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

Monogram

PHANTOM BROADCAST, THE: Ralph Forbes—This is a very good picture, except for the tragic ending. Forbes does a great deal of singing in this and the entire audience seemed to enjoy it. If the producers would try to give the public what they want and not always have such tragic endings, their pictures would be more entertaining and would do more business than at present. Played one day to good business. Running time, 68 minutes. Played September 15.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

Paramount

COLLEGE HUMOR: Bing Crosby, Richard Arlen, Jack Oakie, Burns and Allen—This is one of the best pictures we have played in some time. Just the type of picture that the public want and they will eat it up. Entertainment for the whole family. Plenty of music, and when Crosby sings, they will stop and live every minute of it. We played this a little late

MILLIONS for

RECONDITIONING

MILLIONS IT MUST BE, for no less will return to modern attractiveness and effective operating condition the thousands of our theatres which for two long years have been permitted to deteriorate in every department. Great enough their need for reconditioning a year ago, far greater today. Hundreds of theatres require complete rehabilitation—almost none has come through the depression unscarred.

Therefore more than ever motion picture theatre equipment and furnishings are news—subjects vital to the great effort this industry is making to rewin its vast public. To such news are the Buyers Numbers of Better Theatres especially devoted, and the Fall Buyers Number is now in the making for publication October 21st.

Its standard Equipment Index is being brought entirely up to date. And accompanying it will be other pages of the latest information on equipment—in advertising as well as editorial columns.

In announcing previous Buyers Numbers, editorial features have been stressed. But this is a time for thinking about equipment, supplies and furnishings. This is Reconditioning Time. In making your plans let your guide be the but this is the right season to play it, as the youngsters are getting ready for college. Business good. Running time, 80 minutes. Played September 11-12.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

DEVIL IS DRIVING, THE: Edmund Lowe, Wynne Gibson—A story dealing with the stealing and repainting of high-priced automobiles. Different from the ordinary gangster picture. Suspensive entertainment with some human interest and plenty of action. Good on any day of the week. Running time, 63 minutes. Played September 9-10.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

DISGRACED: Helen Twelvetrees, Bruce Cabot—A fair program picture. Running time, 65 minutes. Played September 13-14.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

EAGLE AND THE HAWK, THE: Fredric March, Jack Oakie, Cary Grant—Hats off to Paramount. This is one of the best pictures of any season. This is strictly a man's picture. Only one scene in the entire picture where a woman appears and then for only a few minutes. It is a war picture showing the usual airplane scenes. This type of picture will not draw business, but just the same it is a swell picture. Business below average but male audience pleased. Running time, 72 minutes. Played September 21-22.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

GIRL IN 419, THE: James Dunn, Gloria Stuart—This program picture will do average business in a small town. I ran it in a family trade theatre.—H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

GUILTY AS HELL: Edmund Lowe, Victor McLaglen—Good entertainment. Somewhat different than the usual run of murder mysteries. Lowe exceptionally good. Will please any audience any time. Running time, 78 minutes. Played September 5-6.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

HER BODYGUARD: Wynne Gibson, Edmund Lowe—Very entertaining. It seemed to please the cash customers. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 20-21.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

JENNIE GERHARDT: Sylvia Sidney, Donald Cook—Very well acted show, but a little too sad for our people. Running time, 76 minutes. Played September 1-2.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

KING OF THE JUNGLE: Buster Crabbe, Frances Dee—This picture pleased. It is different and was especially well liked by the children. Running time, 74 minutes. Played September 22-23.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN: Jack Oakie—Good entertainment for all types of audiences. Story centered around the sport center in New York called Madison Square Garden. It tends to show how all kinds of sports can be conducted on the level. Excellent picture for old and young. Running time, 74 minutes. Played September 12-13.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

MAMA LOVES PAPA: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—There is something wrong with their sense of humor if they don't go for this. Good clean comedy, and this Ruggles chap is really funny. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 6.—B. C. Talley, Carolina Theatre, Lumberton, N. C. Town and country patronage.

MAN OF THE FOREST: Randolph Scott—Randolph Scott made new friends in this production. Some of our patrons liked him better than any of the western stars. Business normal. Played September 23.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

ONE SUNDAY AFTERNOON: Gary Cooper, Fay Wray—Gary Cooper gives a swell performance. Believe this picture pleased the big majority. Good recording and we always get good service from Paramount. Running time, 72 minutes. Played September 18-19.—B. C. Talley, Carolina Theatre, Lumberton, N. C. Town and country patronage.

PICK UP: Sylvia Sidney, George Raft—Here is a sweet little picture that should please any audience. A light romance that is interesting and entertaining. George Raft is fast becoming popular with the ladies and he handles his parts splendidly. Sylvia Sidney has never meant anything at the box office, but this was an exception. Played one day to a good business. Let's have more like this. Running time, 75 minutes. Played September 14.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SHE DONE HIM WRONG: Mae West, Cary Grant—This is a fair picture, but not as sexy as many reports claim. Mae West is gorgeous, but her acting is nothing to rave about. This being our second run, and on a bargain day, we did a good business. Played one day when first released, but nearly doubled receipts on the second run. Running time, 66 minutes. Played September 6.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SONG OF SONGS: Marlene Dietrich—Business way off second day, so the first day's crowd didn't go for it in a big way. Several people said they ought not to let Marlene sing. Maybe they're right. Running time, 90 minutes. Played September 14-15.—B. C. Talley, Carolina Theatre, Lumberton, N. C. Town and country patronage.

SONG OF THE EAGLE: Charles Bickford, Mary Brian, Richard Arlen—This one did not draw at the B O, but it was a very good show and pleased those that came. A story from prohibition out to prohibition in. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 9-10.—W. T. Biggs, Adair Theatre, Adair, Iowa. Rural patronage.

SUNSET PASS: Randolph Scott, Tom Keene—Paramount put every western star in Hollywood in this one and the western trade came out like one man (or woman) and swallowed it whole and smiled. Give Paramount credit for handing this to us western guys at a right price.—H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

THIS DAY AND AGE: Charles Bickford, Judith Allen—Here is a hodge podge of adolescent actors, infantile plot, and adolescent direction, which in spots is terrible beyond words and especially beyond professional A1 standards. It is very exciting, gets better than average business and for many adults with a mental age under fourteen will be rated a great picture.—H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

THREE CORNFRED MOON: Claudette Colbert, Richard Arlen, Mary Boland—Excellent entertainment, down to earth story, and all players excellent, with special mention of Mary Boland. Step on it. Your patrons will not be disappointed. Played September 14-15.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

TORCH SINGER: Claudette Colbert, Ricardo Cortez—We did within just a few dollars on second night as against first night's business, so this picture pleased. This will stand extra exploitation. Get after it. Running time, 72 minutes. Played September 11-12.—B. C. Talley, Carolina Theatre, Lumberton, N. C. Town and country patronage.

UNDER THE TONTO RIM: Stuart Erwin, Verna Hille—Only a fair western picture. A little different from the usual westerns. This one is filled with laughs and should please both young and old. Stuart Erwin as the hero who, by mistake, shows up the gang of rustlers and finally wins the hand of the girl he loves. This should go over well, but mention Zane Grey's story in the advertising to help the box office. Running time, 60 minutes. Played September 2.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

RKO

BED OF ROSES: Constance Bennett, Joel McCrea—This is considerably better than the last few pictures from Bennett. Story very interesting and entertaining. Pert Kelton tries doubling for Mae West and gets it over well. As a matter of fact, she practically stole the picture from Bennett. This is just an ordinary program picture, but will please the majority who see it. Business about average. Running time, 67 minutes. Played September 25-26.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

BLIND ADVENTURE: Robert Armstrong, Helen Mack, Roland Young—Will pass on Saturday or family night. Roland Young miscast. Played September 5-6.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

HALF-NAKED TRUTH, THE: Lee Tracy, Lupe Velez—Another good one with Tracy. A comedy drama that will please. Running time, 77 minutes. Played August 29-30.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

HEADLINE SHOOTER: William Gargan, Frances Dee—Played this on our action night and it pleased. Fast going for the most part, with some big scenes lifted from the news which would have cost a fortune to shoot. Good performances by William Gargan and Frances Dee. Running time, 65 minutes. Played September 9.—B. C. Talley, Carolina Theatre, Lumberton, N. C. Town and country patronage.

HELL'S HIGHWAY: Richard Dix—Prison camp picture. Not the kind of a picture you expect to see Dix in, but it's mighty fine entertainment. Running time, 63 minutes. Played August 22-23.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Mitzi Green—This is a swell picture for the children. The older folks do not seem to care much for it. Mitzi Green as Annie is marvelous, but Buster Phelps, the newcomer, stole the picture from her. This drew the largest crowd of kids in the history of our theatre. This is rather old, but will do business with the kids. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 13.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

LUCKY DEVILS: Bill Boyd—Good action picture that will please your Saturday patrons. Running time, 63 minutes. Played August 26-27.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

PROFESSIONAL SWEETHEART: Ginger Rogers, Norman Foster—Good cast and they try hard, but a weak rambling story. One redeeming feature the director did not inject any dirty wise cracks, trying to liven it up as some of them do. A program picture only. Running time, 73 minutes. Played September 20-21.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

SWEEPINGS: Lionel Barrymore—One of Lionel Barrymore's outstanding pictures. His character portrayals in this are simply great. A great picture and a great star, but you will have to sell it to get them in. The women just love it, there are several weeps in it. Just fair business. Running time, 80 minutes. Played September 20-21.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

TOMORROW AT SEVEN: Chester Morris, Vivienne Osborne—This is a little better than the usual run of this type picture, of which we have had too many. Played September 12-13.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

United Artists

HALLELUJAH, I'M A BUM: Al Jolson, Madge Evans, Frank Morgan—This is just another comedy drama with music and is only fair entertainment. Jolson as the Mayor of the hoboes in Central Park, New York City, is very good, but there is not enough story to hold interest. If the "rhythmic dialogue" had been abandoned, the picture would have been more entertaining. Business good first night, but an empty house the second night. Running time, 82 minutes. Played September 18-19.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

KID FROM SPAIN, THE: Eddie Cantor—This is a marvelous picture. Plenty of beautiful girls, and good music. Cantor at his best with more wisecracks than "Palmy Days." His new leading lady, Lyda Roberti, is very good. I cannot say too much about this one. Although it is a little old, it had not played close around here and we did a good business for two days. If you have not played it, you're missing a good one. Running time, 95 minutes. Played September 4-5.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

Universal

BE MINE TONIGHT: Jan Kiepura, Magda Schneider—This foreign-made picture gave the best of satisfaction. It is a credit to any house to play "Be Mine Tonight." Our business was above normal, largely owing to the fact that this feature was in its tenth consecutive week at one of the theatres in Rochester, which is only 30 miles from us. We highly recommend "Be Mine Tonight." It should go over anywhere. Played September 13-14.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

BE MINE TONIGHT: Jan Kiepura, Magda Schneider—This is a very high class show. We got film rental. Don't think this is a small town picture. Running time, 78 minutes. Played September 11-12.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

BE MINE TONIGHT: Jan Kiepura, Magda Schneider If your patrons like high-class opera sung by a golden voiced tenor, this is a sure-fire hit. The music is great, the singing superb, in fact it is a musical treat, but maybe there wasn't many highbrow music lovers in my neighborhood as I only did light business with it. Running time, 83 minutes. Played September 18-19.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

DON'T BET ON LOVE: Lew Ayres, Ginger Rogers—Average business in family trade theatre. Don't let 'em swamp you with predictions of giant booms. Unless the nation shows more patriotism and less hoggishness than it has recently, we will have a giant slump. From now on you will have an exhibition of national character that will revolt decent men. —H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatre, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

DON'T BET ON LOVE: Lew Ayres, Ginger Rogers—Nice little program picture. Did not draw but it pleased. Running time, 62 minutes.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FIDDLIN' BUCKAROO: Ken Maynard—Drew usual western business and satisfied. Played September 16.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HER FIRST MATE: Slim Summerville, Zazu Pitts —All the producers are putting out to sea. They have run out of yachts and are now down to tugboats and ferry boats. Not as funny as many Summerville-Pitts pictures, but Okey and good business. There is still room for a rowboat picture, and why not. Mr. Superman, look here, here is an idea. We will buy copyright-expired "Three Men in a Boat" for $100,000 and throw away all but the title and use an Indian in a canoe.—H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatre, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

KING OF JAZZ: Paul Whiteman—A swell show but it did not draw much extra business.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

KISS BEFORE THE MIRROR: Nancy Carroll, Paul Lukas—Received many favorable comments on this one. A fine cast and wonderful acting. You won't go wrong if you step on this one. Running time, 67 minutes. Played August 19-20.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

KISS BEFORE THE MIRROR: Nancy Carroll, Paul Lukas—Good program picture. Running time, 73 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MOONLIGHT AND PRETZELS: Mary Brian, Leo Carrillo—A dandy musical show with catchy songs well sung. Wish we could get more like it. Nothing suggestive in it. Shows like this may bring back the family patronage again. Running time, 84 minutes. Played September 4-5.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

MOONLIGHT AND PRETZELS: Mary Brian, Leo Carrillo—Thanks, Universal. Nobody gives more, few give as much for the exhibitor's dollar as Universal. Your next season's pictures look good to me. This picture shows what a showman can do with less than $200,000 when other companies turn out duds for five hundred thousand. There is big money in production for real showmen. A B. O. Xmas present.—H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatre, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

MOONLIGHT AND PRETZELS: Mary Brian, Leo Carrillo Probably not as clever as some of the musicals in the past. On the other hand there is probably more entertainment in it. Plenty of good song hits, choruses and formation numbers, pretty girls, etc., with a good story. An outstanding picture, will please if you can get them in. Boost it and make some money as well as please your patrons. Clean as a hound's tooth. Played September 17-18.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

OUT ALL NIGHT: Slim Summerville, Zasu Pitts —A dandy picture played to good business. Running time, 66 minutes. Played August 15-16.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE JONES: Lee Tracy—Excellent picture. One of the best from Universal. Good business to a well pleased crowd. Step on this one. It's worth advertising. Tracy at his best. Running time, 84 minutes. Played August 8-9.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

TEXAS BAD MAN: Tom Mix—Tom is beginning to show his age. Doesn't have the drawing power he used to have. Fair picture to a fair crowd. Running time, 61 minutes. Played August 12-13.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

Warner

BABY FACE: Barbara Stanwyck—This is much better than the title. We think it a fine picture. Played August 25.—G. A. Hart, Roxy Theatre, Stratford, Texas. Small town patronage.

CAPTURED: Leslie Howard, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—A well produced picture of life in a war-time prison camp. More favorable comments from men than women. Above average biz. Running time, 72 minutes. Played September 4-5.—B. C. Talley, Carolina Theatre, Lumberton, N. C. Town and country patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1933: Ruby Keeler, Ginger Rogers, Dick Powell, Warren William, Aline MacMahon, Joan Blondell—Biggest business in two years and the picture pleased. Running time, 96 minutes. Played September 17-20.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

KEYHOLE, THE.: Kay Francis, George Brent—Good picture. Was well liked.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LIFE OF JIMMY DOLAN, THE: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Loretta Young, Aline MacMahon, Lyle Talbot—If you want something different, here it is. A picture that is crammed with thrills, laughs, action and love. Just the type of picture that everybody will enjoy. I cannot recommend this too highly. Better than many specials. Business good. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 16.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MAN FROM MONTEREY, THE: John Wayne, Ruth Hall—This was the poorest of the series. Most of them have been good. Played August 18.—G. A. Hart, Roxy Theatre, Stratford, Texas. Small town patronage.

MARY STEVENS, M.D.: Kay Francis, Lyle Tal-

oot—This is a very fine picture from Warner, but the men do not seem to like it. It is strictly a woman's picture. It is a story of a woman doctor. We played this on a bargain day to a good business and all well pleased. Thelma Todd and Glenda Farrell head the swell supporting cast. If you advertise to get the ladies, they will bring the men. Running time, 72 minutes. Played September 7.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

PRIVATE DETECTIVE 62: William Powell—A good program picture. Running time, 79 minutes. Played September 8-9.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

SILK EXPRESS: Neil Hamilton, Sheila Terry—Good mystery picture with action. Did average business. Running time, 60 minutes.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

VOLTAIRE: George Arliss—This is a swell show. We didn't do any extra business on this. Personally think this a class picture. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 15-16.—J. E. Tunstalls, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small own patronage.

WAX MUSEUM: Lionel Atwill, Fay Wray—Did an average business on Friday and Saturday. The picture was liked.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

World Wide

DEATH KISS, THE: Bela Lugosi—Pretty good mystery drama. Running time, 75 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Short Features

Educational

HOLLYWOOD RUN-AROUND: Monty Collins—Just another comedy of the slapstick variety. Quite a few laughs, but far from being good. However, it will get by for a one day show. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

HOT HOOFS: Moran and Mack—This is another comedy featuring the "Two Black Crows" and is fair entertainment. They visit the race track and by luck make some easy money. Very funny and will please. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

KID'N HOLLYWOOD: Baby Burlesks—Excellent. Will entertain all ages and classes.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

TIRED FEET: Harry Langdon—This is just another comedy. A few laughs and that is about all. If Langdon has ever made a good comedy, I would like to see it. We had many customers walk out of this and I personally don't blame them. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

TOM HOWARD COMEDIES: This fellow delivers in shorts but none of the Hollywood geniuses have ever thought of putting him in a feature as support. Why don't the independent producers sign him up and use him in the domestic comedies they should make but don't, because they are too busy making Shanghai Sals and gangster stuff.—H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

MGM

BEER AND PRETZELS: Colortone Musical Revue—Far, far below the standard of 1932-33 musical comedies.—W. W. Watt, Casine Theatre, Sac City, Iowa. General patronage.

CHINAMAN'S CHANCE: Flip the Frog—Poor.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

DUCK HUNTER'S PARADISE: Oddity—The fast-talking wise-cracking broadcaster in this one is good, making it good entertainment. Appeals to nimrods and other sportsmen. Running time, 9 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

FORGOTTEN BABIES: Our Gang—The kids do a good job of this. A different comedy.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LENINGRAD: FitzPatrick Traveltalk—A splendid educational short, right up to date. Appeals to schools and colleges for history or economic classes. Good. Running time, 9 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute. Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

METRO TRAVELS: Too much topical stuff. They are making too much travel stuff altogether and too few acts. Give the vaudeville people a break. The vaudeville stage is neglected and it can furnish some great comedians to feature pictures and god knows feature pictures need 'em. Travels are all right, but not when the cycle guys move in to imitate and overstuff the market. We are running theatres, not lectures.—H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

A BIG WELCOME TO W. J. POWELL

Exhibitors, first of all your "welcome back" to W. J. Powell of the Lonet theatre at Wellington, Ohio, who has returned to the fold after three years. And next notice what he says about your department. That's the test.

Says Powell:

"After three years' absence, I am back in the exhibiting game in the same theatre. In getting familiar with the pictures that click 'What the Picture Did for Me' has been of great assistance to me."

NEW ZEALAND: FitzPatrick Traveltalk—Good. Very interesting.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

ONE TRACK MINDS: Zasu Pitts, Thelma Todd—Good. This team has delivered good comedies all year. Too bad they are to split up.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

PALEFACE: Flip the Frog—A very good Flip. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

ROOSEVELT, THE MAN OF THE HOUR: Went over better than I expected.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SPEAK EASILY: Thelma Todd, Zasu Fitts—Good comedy but not their best. This pair is well liked by my patronage. Running time, 17 minutes.—W. T. Biggs, Adair Theatre, Adair, Iowa. Rural patronage.

WILD PEOPLE: Colortone Musical Revue—A color musical that is good. Crazy songs and people. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. T. Biggs, Adair Theatre, Adair, Iowa. Rural patronage.

Paramount

CALIENTE LOVE: Walter Catlett—Fair. Nothing objectionable, just not much entertainment.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

DREAM STUFF: Walter Catlett—This is just another comedy of the slapstick variety. Fair entertainment and got a few laughs from the kids, but far too silly for the adults. Franklin Pangborn adds a a few laughs as the hero's rival for the hand of the heroine. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

I HEARD: Betty Boop—Good filler on any program.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

I'LL BE GLAD WHEN YOU'RE DEAD: Talkartoon—This is a good one-reeler. The music is furnished by Louis Armstrong and his band and it will make a good filler on any program. The cartoon is also good, but the orchestra will prove the best business getter. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

JAZZ A LA CUBA: Don Aspiazu—It didn't please here. Running time, 8 minutes.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

LET'S DANCE: Burns and Allen—Fair. Recording bad. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawara Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT ACTS: These are very valuable to get away from the deluge of travel and cartoon and screen song stuff which now is about all the single reel stuff made. Single reels are very important. Eastern Deluxe houses overload with scenic, and topical stuff producers follow, shows are unbalanced. They need Pantages or a vaudeville man to tell them what show balance is. A perfect show is a balanced show, balanced to the feature.—H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatre, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

PHARMACIST, THE: W. C. Fields—This fellow, W. C. Fields, is immense and this is going to be W. C. Fields' year (his agent might mail me a cigar). He is funny, doggoned funny and he (Hear ye, Hollywood) imitates nobody. The whole country will talk of him inside a year.—H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatre, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

POPULAR MELODIES: Arthur Jarrett—A dandy screen song, well worth playing. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. T. Biggs, Adair Theatre, Adair, Iowa. Rural patronage.

RHAPSODY IN BLACK AND BLUE: Louis Armstring—The audience went for this and talked about it leaving the theatre. Something unusual here.—H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

RUMBA RHYTHM: Vincent Lopez—Good filler on any program.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

SCREEN SOUVENIRS: This was a good idea originally but too many were made. Five a season was enough, but now every imitator in pictures is handing out rehashes of old stuff.—H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatre, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

SING, SISTERS, SING: Three X Sisters—This is a swell one-reeler. A screen song featuring the well known Radio stars, the Three X Sisters, singing and playing several popular numbers. The cartoon is also good. If you like music and comedy combined, then book this. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

STOOPNOCRACY: Stoopnagle and Budd—Clever screen song. Our patrons like nearly all of these. Running time, 10 minutes.—B. C. Talley, Carolina Theatre, Lumberton, N. C. Town and country patronage.

TOO MANY HIGHBALLS: Lloyd Hamilton—Good slapstick comedy. The kiddies thought so too. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. T. Biggs, Adaid Theatre, Adair, Iowa. Rural patronage.

United Artists

BEARS AND BEES: Silly Symphony—This is a very good musical cartoon and will please both young and old. Columbia produced many as good as this and some better. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MELLERDRAMMER, THE: Mickey Mouse—Way below Disney par. Bet a nickel he had nothing to do with it. That's the trouble with quantity production. There is no substitute for brains in this game, machinery won't do. Disney's probably making the Silly Symphonies himself.—H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

MICKEY'S NIGHTMARE: Mickey Mouse—This is a very good cartoon comedy featuring the famous Mickey Mouse. However, it is not as good as some of the others. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

TRADER MICKEY: Mickey Mouse—Just another Mouse comedy. Only fair entertainment. There is entirely too much repetition in these cartoons. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

YE OLDEN DAYS: Mickey House—A good Mickey Mouse that you can give a prominent spot on your bill. It is a "wow." Running time, 7 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

MORTON DOWNEY NO. 1: Morton Downey, Vincent Lopez—Excellent short, above average. Running time, 21 minutes.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

NICK KENNY: No. 1—Not so hot. Just fair. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

OCEAN HOP: Oswald Cartoon—Good.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

PLUMBER, THE: Oswald Cartoon—Good—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS: This series have all been good.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WORLD'S GREATEST THRILLS: Very good. Very exciting. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

Warner Vitaphone

AFRICA SPEAKS—ENGLISH: Pepper Pot Series—Poor.—G. A. Hart, Roxy Theatre, Stratford, Texas. Small town patronage.

ALONG CAME RUTH: Ruth Etting—This is one of their best shorts we have played. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

AN IDLE ROOMER: Jack Haley—This is just a fair comedy from Vitaphone. A few laughs, but entirely too silly. Vitaphone is falling down on shorts or at least for the present time. Here's hoping they will make better shorts in the future. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

BOSKO'S KNIGHT MARE: Looney Tune—Good. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BROADWAY BREVITIES: These musicals are nearly all good and are a change from the regular two-reel comedies.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

BYGONES: Ruth Etting—The recording on this short was awful, otherwise it would have been ok. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

CRASHING THE GATE: Ruth Etting—I consider this only fair entertainment. Not up to the standard for Ruth Etting. She sings several songs that get over well, but the settings are not as good as the others. Running time, 20 minutes. J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

DANGEROUS OCCUPATIONS: Pepper Pot—Good. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

DANGEROUS OCCUPATIONS: Pepper Pot—This is a rather interesting and thrilling one-reeler showing just what the name is, dangerous occupations of the world. Very educational and will please. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

INKLINGS: Pepper Pot—This is absolutely the worst one reeler that has ever been shown in our theatre. Our patrons walked out on it and asked us not show it again. I cannot understand why Vitaphone should make the exhibitors play such trash as this. They have good shorts with the exception of the Pepper Pots Series and whenever you play one of them you can depend on it being poor. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MUNICIPAL BAND WAGON: Melody Master Series—Fine musical number. Running time, 10 minutes.—G. A. Hart, Roxy Theatre, Stratford, Texas. Small town patronage.

NORTHERN EXPOSURE: Broadway Brevity—A very good musical. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

RAMBLING ROUND RADIO ROW, NO. 5: Pepper Pot—This is a fairly entertaining one-reeler of the Pepper Pot series. They cram too many radio stars into one reel and none of them have a change to do anything. A few stars singing and Buddy Rogers makes an appearance in this one. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SKY SYMPHONY: Stoopnagle and Budd—Not up the standard Broadway Brevity, but will get by. Stoopnagle and Budd are much better when you cannot see them. A few dancing numbers add a bit to the entertainment. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

THAT'S THE SPIRIT: Noble Sissle and Band—This is a wonderful musical. If you want music, here it is. Sissle plays several popular song hits of the current season and has several specialties. This series is the best one-reel musicals on the market. Hats off to Vitaphone. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

TIP TAP TOE: Hal LeRoy, Mitzi Mayfair—A great musical number with some good dancing. Recommend this to liven up a drab bill. Running time, 19 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighbood patronage.

WAKE UP THE GYPSY IN ME: Merry Melody-Good. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WORLD'S CHAMP: Jack Dempsey—Not much to this. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

YACHT PARTY, THE: Band Act—Only fair, these band acts. Don't seem to be near as good as they were. Running time, 7 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

YOU'RE KILLING ME: Pepper Pot—And still Vitaphone continues producing and compelling the exhibitors to play poor comedies. This is too much. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

YOURS SINCERELY: Lanny Ross—Just fair. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

Serials

Universal

CLANCY OF THE MOUNTED: Tom Tyler—We played two chapters, one and two, and it seems as if this is going to be a good action serial. Running time, 18 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Generau patronage.

LOST SPECIAL: Frank Albertson—This is the best serial we have run. It has held attendance when we sure needed it. Running time, two reels.—G. A. Hart, Roxy Theatre, Stratford, Texas. Small town patronage.

WABASH AVENUE

CHICAGO

This city is in the midst of a gala week—the period of the American Legion convention. And on Film Row it's a continuous round of handshakes and greetings. Industry Legionnaires are here galore from all sections of the country and they are finding plenty of comrades to visit with along the Row. The enthusiasm created by the presence of the President of the United States and the great Legion conclave eclipses thoughts of routine business. In the furore this column cleaves to its task.

Among notable visitors of the week was Emil Ludwig, who comes here from Switzerland on his way to the Coast, where he will exercise technical supervision over the Warner production on Napoleon's life. Plenty of space in the dailies recorded Mr. Ludwig's visit—and the clippings are neatly assembled on the desk of Sam Clarke, in charge of exploitation and publicity for Warners in the Midwest territory.

New and pretentious quarters are being taken over on the ground floor at 908 S. Wabash avenue by Guercio & Barthel, equipment supply dealers, who recently opened a branch office in Indianapolis.

The exploitation contest conducted by the Ben Judell office on "Fighting With Kit Carson" has taken a unique angle. Ted Morris, manager of the Drexel theatre, has made a tieup with two neighborhood schools, offering passes to winners over a twelve-week period for the best essay on the life of Kit Carson.

Many folk along the Row attended the funeral last Friday of George Levine, for the past eight years country sales manager of the Fox exchange. Levine passed away following a siege of pneumonia.

The Southern theatre, Oak Park, owned by the late Joe Daly, was sold at public auction last week to Wolfe Bros.

Here is something new under the sun, says Henri Ellman, head of the Capitol Film Corporation. The Tarzan serial starring Buster Crabbe has been booked by the B&K circuit and will open at the Roosevelt theatre October 12 as an eight-reel feature. That is, the initial presentation will be in eight reels, with the balance of the picture to be shown in eight two-reel episodes at the rate of two reels a week.

Ben Bedell, who is well known among film folk here through his connections with the business in past years, committed suicide last week by shooting himself. He has not been active in business for several years.

The sister of Mike Kassel, office manager of RKO, passed away last week.

Jack Fuld, veteran exploiter, has joined the local RKO staff.

Abe Kaufman, BK buyer, who suffered a broken leg in an automobile accident, is sufficiently recovered to discard his crutches and resume work.

Another convalescent is Jack O'Toole of Advance Film Company, who is about again after a four weeks' battle with pneumonia.

HOLQUIST

J. C. Jenkins--His Colyum

Omaha, Neb.

DEAR HERALD:

Somehow every time we come down to this town and go down on Film Row they all declare an open season on us and proceed to jump all over us. Ted Mendenhall of Paramount calls us a pestilence and rings up the board of health. Harry Schumel of MGM asks us what he has ever done that we should be haunting him. Says that he goes to mass every morning at six o'clock and eats pork on Fridays the same as other days.

The Warner Bros.' manager says that every time we come in his office goose pimples break out all over him, and Walter Creel claims that he booked a picture for his theatre on our recommendation and that his audience has been laying for him with a shotgun ever since.

Jess Merritt, clerk at the Loyal hotel, says we have worked him for our hotel bill for the last time, so there you are. Some of 'em are Jews and some Gentiles and some just Democrats, and it begins to look like we'd have to change our religion, our politics or our underwear.

Sherm Fitch, manager for RKO at Sioux Falls, South Dakota, is the only friend we have left in this doggone business, and he beat us out of two cases of 3.2 last summer when we weren't looking at him.

Sometimes we think we must have been born under an unlucky star in the dark of the moon, but it's a cinch that we were born when the sign of the zodaic pointed to the feet instead of the head; that's why our feet are so big and why we can't tip over. Some day these Omaha guys are going to appreciate us after it is too late.

C. J. Kremer of the Rialto theatre at Stanton says if he doesn't step in a hole he will be able to keep his nose above water. He says that First National's picture, "Bureau of Missing Persons," was a life-saver for him and that the whole town is still talking about it.

N. R. Olson of the Royal at Wisner was just going out to a lake to build a duck blind when we called. He stopped long enough to write his check for a renewal of his subscription and now when he gets that blind built everything ought to be all right.

J. P. Lannan of the Nebraskan theatre at West Point happened to be in town when we called. Heretofore he has been away. He said he wouldn't have been there this time if he had known we were coming. J. P. has some pups that he is training and he wanted to trade us a pup for a subscription to the HERALD but we told him that both Mr. Ramsaye and Mr. Shea were long on pups and that our wife had a dog that furnished all the pups that our town could support and so he finally wrote us a check. We wish the HERALD would take pups on subscription; we could do a lot of business.

Exhibitor Reports Help Him

Max Wintroub, manager for Majestic Pictures, says that the exhibitors' reports on his pictures in "What the Picture Did For Me" have been a wonderful help selling his product and he cautioned us not to let his subscription expire. We told him that the best way to keep in good standing was to write us a check, which he did.

Rose Wintroub, the blond lady who does the most of the work around the office and furnishes a large percentage of the brains, asked us why we never gave her a break in our Colyum. We told her that our wife was somewhere on the Pacific coast and that if we mentioned these blond ladies too often she would probably place Reno on her itinerary on her way home and that she was strong on this alimony stuff. No sir, no blonds (in public).

Now that the foregoing is out of our system, let's talk about inflation and deflation of the American dollar. This will be a subject that none of us know adamthing about, so we can therefore all meet on a common level.

Settling America's Issues

Up in our home town of Neligh we have what is known as the "Owls' Club." It's an organization wherein you don't have to pay any dues and you don't have to have any sense to belong to it. We have been a charter member ever since it was organized. This Club meets every night in the office of Jess Winn's garage and it's a forum wherein all economic and national questions are definitely settled every evening.

A few evenings ago the question up for discussion was "Inflation of the American dollar." Herb Maybury, a lumber dealer, said that the only thing that could save the country from utter collapse was inflation; that what we needed was cheaper money. Jess Winn, the Ford dealer, said if the Government would print two billion dollars and put them in circulation the depression would be over in thirty days. Perry Petersen, an ex-county clerk, asked him what the Government would base the issue on and Jess said it wouldn't have to be based on anything. The Government would just stamp a bill a dollar and it would be a dollar. Just then someone turned on the radio and there was a yap somewhere telling the farmers that the farmer's dollar was only worth 62 cents but he didn't say what the merchant's and laboring man's dollar was worth.

Judge Ingram, the county judge, said that he had been halting between two opinions. He wasn't just sure whether we needed inflation or deflation, that there was good argument on both sides of the question.

Shooting Both Barrels

The manager of the Fox office screened for us "My Weakness," a picture very much out of the ordinary. When Fox made this one they shot both barrels and hit the bull's eye. We'd rate it high class entertainment.

Last night we saw "When Ladies Meet," another good one from MGM. "Leo" has a right to roar about this one. It has Robert Montgomery, Ann Harding and Myrna Loy. Myrna had written a book in which she tried to prove that a woman could love a married man and they could both be happy, but when they tried it out in actual life her theory went haywire. It has the best dialogue we have heard in many a day. Ann Harding was exceedingly delightful, and this goes for Myrna and Montgomery also.

It's a 100 per cent woman's picture, but it will rate 30 per cent for the balance of a small town audience. It's high class drama, if that's what you want.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

THAT NEW LEISURE

Speaking before the Allied of New Jersey convention in Atlantic City, we discussed a topic that merits the most serious consideration of every exhibitor and manager, to wit:

"What are you doing to capitalize on the new leisure made possible to millions of wage earners now working a lesser number of hours under the provisions of the NRA?"

Even as these lines are being written, manufacturers of sport and recreational equipment, the stamp collecting industry, brewers, and a host of other worldwide enterprises are pouring a golden stream of dollars into advertising and publicity of all kinds to educate workers in the spending of the new found time and increased wages for the purchase of these products.

And what is the motion picture theatre doing in the bitter struggle for this new business? In the face of the competitive nationwide advertising barrage, exhibitors and managers must fight harder than ever not only to increase patronage but to maintain present attendance levels against these outside onslaughts.

Therefore, the theatre itself, as well as the attraction, should be sold to the public; the virtues of the motion picture as necessary entertainment must be plugged as strongly as the featured stars. A few smart managers are already doing so by hooking in their theatres to the new deal with institutional copy, as witness Earle Holden's ad, published in the Round Table section a few weeks back.

Good enough, as far as it goes, but showmen in every community should get together right now to devise ways and means for an adequate motion picture selling campaign matching in power the mighty broadsides of suddenly competitive industries.

In spite of its manifold difficulties, there is something warming about this business of the theatre, and it was brought home to us strongly by a chance meeting in Atlantic City last week. Visiting around, we dropped into Warner's, on the Boardwalk, and, much to our surprise and pleasure, found there Manager Floyd Wesp, a "corpsbruder" whom we had not seen since our Seattle days, some ten years ago.

And while chewing the fat about the good old days, the thought occurred that there was something in belonging to this trade of theatre managing; that no matter where a showman lands, he is at home just as long as there is a theatre nearby where he may find a cordial welcome from a brother member of the guild.

Yes, "guild," for no other word adequately describes the bond between theatremen from wherever they might hail. Go where he may, the manager is never a stranger. He may wander across the face of the globe, but never need he be friendless or lack for a greeting in any land where there are showmen who speak the "same language."

PLACE IN THE SUN

At a neighborhood theatre, a few evenings ago, we caught a two reel musical comedy that packed about as much entertainment as the feature, if the laughs and applause of the audience were any criterion. It was the kind of quality picture that encourages managers to plug these lesser(?) subjects in their advertising, as many are now doing.

Realizing the box office possibilities of high class short presentation, Fox and Educational have made available an exploitation booklet covering many angles of advertising their short subjects. This is good stuff, and should prove of distinct help for the manager smart enough to take advantage of it.

That well chosen shorts often bolster up a less than entirely satisfactory feature picture is nobody's secret. Showmen are giving more consideration to the proper selection of accompanying film units, and such aids as Fox-Educational are putting out should do much to obtain a better place in the sun for the often neglected one and two reelers.

IT CAN BE DONE

Ed Finney's new post at Monogram, that of advertising director and story editor, is one that opens up some very interesting possibilities for the future of picture advertising. Attempts have been made previously in actual picture production to incorporate various exploitation angles for box office highlighting, but until now few stories have been deliberately selected with this in mind, although some recent releases lean in that direction.

Ballyhoo is once more in the ascendant, and the dividends it pays should cause film executives to give more heed to picture angles that can be exploited. With this, the only too eager showman, burrowing for any idea he can flaunt profitably, is in hearty accord. Finney's long experience in theatre advertising, plus his sense of audience value, should enable him to select and recommend stories that can be plentifully spiced with the necessary box office ingredients while in production.

Managers Boosted In Newspaper Ads

Elmer Rhoden's campaign to publicize the managers in the Fox Midwest circuit has already started, and one of the earliest results is a series of institutional newspaper ads, with personal messages signed by each manager, including his picture at the head of the display.

A nice flash is the one used by Barney Joffee, of the Uptown Theatre, Kansas City, Mo., three columns by nine deep, headed "In Step With the Times," with copy to the effect that in order to flourish, theatres must be managed by members of the community they serve, and not by distant executives. The ad goes on further to say that from now on Barney will select the pictures to be shown, and winds up with a plug for the new "show year" and "Pilgrimage," his coming attraction.

To tie in with the "step" theme, the ad has been bordered on one side with a drawing of Uncle Sam stepping out with the NRA eagle by his side, and on the other a sketch of the front of the theatre. A box below carries the titles of coming attractions.

A very sound idea, indeed, and extremely effective institutional advertising that should help sell theatres through their personnel as well as by the attractions.

The same personal slant is being emphasized in mailing pieces sent out to theatre patrons. These also include the manager's name and photo, and stress the benefits of the new deal.

BEST OF LUCK, DAVE

Round Tabler Dave Silverman, former operating head of the Belmont and Parkway Theatres, in the Bronx section of New York, and more recently manager of the Claridge, Brooklyn, N. Y., announces that he has again taken over the Parkway Theatre which he will run by himself. Dave is an enterprising showman, and there is every reason to believe he will be successful with his new deal. Congratulations!

Walter Feeney Puts Over a Tugboat Race

Three days prior to the opening of "Tugboat Annie" at the Roxy Theatre, Tacoma, Washington, Walter Feeney, manager, engineered a tugboat race for the championship of Puget Sound and announced it on page one of the Tacoma News-Tribune. Marie Dressler was credited with having inspired the event due to her characterization as "Tugboat Annie." Other publicity advised that the Dressler trophy would be awarded the winner. The race, scheduled for Sunday afternoon, found six entries at the starting line. S. A. Perkins, commodore of the Tacoma Boat Club, was appointed official judge, and the presentation of trophy was made on his yacht, which was at their disposal for race. A tremendous crowd attended the event.

The Tacoma Ledger also ran stories in connection with race, and motion pictures were made and exhibited during the engagement of "Tugboat Annie." The Tacoma run of picture was hailed as the "Homecoming Premiere," which was launched with a midnight matinee. For the occasion a street demonstration was announced preceding the showing of picture. Included in the ballyhoo were Kleig lights, street decorations, an across-street pyramid display of 3,000 colored balloons, bursting bombs on roof of theatre, music and a radio broadcast over station KVI. In connection with the latter the guest of honor, Mayor Tennent of Tacoma, spoke to the radio audiences regarding the local phases of "Tugboat Annie," as did State Senator Foss and other civic and social dignitaries.

Free Book Matinee Builds House Prestige

An extremely practical and well executed prestige idea was recently put over by Manager Roy L. Patterson of the Gordon Theatre, Middletown, Ohio, who tied up with his local papers to give free admissions at a special matinee to all children bringing used school text books for distribution by the local Board of Education to children who could not otherwise afford them.

The newspapers came in for front page stories and free two column display ads in which was listed the names of the desired text books, the theatre and attraction. To be eligible for the free admissions, the children were requested to fill out a newspaper coupon with their names and addresses, these to be brought to the box office two days before the special matinee. In this manner, Patterson was able to secure a mailing list for a contemplated children's club he intends starting shortly.

That the local youngsters warmly endorsed this meritorius manner of providing free text books for poor children, is indicated by the photo below showing the contributions provided by the 600 children who took advantage of the free show offer.

A corking idea, indeed, and we regret not receiving the details before this so that other managers civically minded could do likewise in advance of the current school opening. However, it is recommended to those who may still be able to arrange it for the present season and, of course, it can also be placed in the files for future use.

ROUND TABLERS NOW PREPARING BOX OFFICE HALLOWE'EN SLANTS

Here Are Some Things Managers Have Previously Done in the Past That Have Proven to Be Profitable for This Event

Witches, black cats, jack o' lanterns, apples, are associated with the celebration of the big annual Hallowe'en holiday, originally observed, among other things, to give thanksgiving for good harvests. An occasion for mirth and merriment, theatres have for many years put on Hallowe'en parties, and although much of the exploitation has and still is pointed for children entertainment, the adults get just as much of a kick out of the event.

Study the following. They are recommended by showmen who have put them over to "harvest" a lot of extra admissions.

Kid Costume Contest

This is one of the most popular ideas and has proven a real sock. Frank Boucher divided the contestants into two age classes, from two to six years, and seven to thirteen. Ten dollars in prizes were given for the prettiest and funniest costumes, $2.50 to each of the two winners in each group. The judging was held on the stage at the matinee, with the audience as judges.

Floyd Fitzsimmons graded his two groups from three to seven, and from seven to twelve. He tied in with his paper, and selected prominent locals as judges. In his publicity, Floyd stressed that the grownups would enjoy the party as much as the kids, Boucher also used that angle. Both managers spent extra dough on papers, heralds, and posting, Boucher also wrote to all school teachers, asking them to bring the party to the attention of their pupils.

Novelty Presentation

Nelson Tower reports that the following went over so well last year he is now preparing to duplicate it on Oct. 31. A wire was stretched at a slant from the rear of the house to a corner of the stage floor, and a mounted cutout witch riding a broomstick, painted white with black lines to bring out details, was attached to the wire by a pulley arrangement.

At nine o'clock, after the feature, all house lights, excepting exits, were turned off. Thunder sheets were turned loose back stage, lightning effects came from the booth, and as a siren sounded, the witch cutout was given a shove and came down the wire followed by a baby spot. After which the lights were immediately turned on, and Nelson appeared on the stage to announce the beginning of the Hollowe'en festivities.

Stage Contests

Tower followed up his clever "witch ride" with games that included apple bobbing, and climbing greased pole. For the apple bobbing, two shallow tubs were placed on wooden horses, filled with water and apples, and prizes were given to the kids who picked up an apple with their teeth within a specified time, additional prizes given to those making the best time. The same idea was carried out in the greased pole climbing stunt.

Nelson also put on the costume contest in conjunction with the other games, and reports over 300 entries in his last year's events, which number he hopes to better this time, using these same ideas.

Lobby Contest

While George Laby was at the Olympia Theatre, Boston, Mass., last year, he put up a "pin the tail" donkey poster in his lobby as part of his celebration, giving passes to those who pinned the tail to the right spot (see photo). George reports this as one of the most successful of his Hallowe'en gags, and expects to use it again as part of his campaign in his new assignment. It certainly is a slick stunt.

Hallowe'en Front

Floyd Fitzsimmons pasted paper cutouts of witches, black cats, and scarecrows on transparent yellow tissue in his glass lobby doors. Paper jack o'lanterns were placed over regular lobby lights. Cutout jack o'lantern pumpkin on top of ticket chopper, so that tickets were dropped into it, and a huge cutout pumpkin with eyes, nose and mouth completely surrounded box office.

House staff was dressed in inexpensive costumes of bright colors and crepe paper hats, etc. Cornstalks, real pumpkins and squash were also used as lobby decorations. Floyd suggests cutting title of picture into paper pumpkins hung from marquee—an effective and novel slant.

That good old institution of Hallowe'en, on Oct. 31, still packs a money punch, as managers have long since discovered. On this page, we give you the highlights of some of the effective holiday exploitation put over by Round Tablers Frank Boucher, Maryland Theatre, Hagerstown, Md.; Nelson L. Tower, Tower Theatre, Miami, Fla.; George Laby, Victory Theatre, Holyoke, Mass., and Floyd Fitzsimmons, Grand Theatre, Vineland, N. J.

As will many other managers, these members intend putting on still bigger Hallowe'en campaigns this year that will include some of the ideas mentioned here.

If You Haven't Already Started, Begin Now to Lay Out Campaign to Gather Extra Business Waiting on This Holiday

Jack-o'-Lantern Contest

Good newspaper tie-in angle for best "jacks" either of paper, real pumpkins, or both. Adults as well as children can be invited, prizes to be awarded according to age and skill. Schools can be hooked in to this, judges selected from newspaper, women's clubs, and teachers. Wind this up with a parade, each contestant carrying his own entry, and while contest is still on, plant entries in lobby for display.

Corn Husking

Great stuff for city or rural spots. Secure ears, place them in piles on stage, invite both men and women to compete, and award prizes for best time. This is especially effective for farm communities and can be built up for real returns if sufficient publicity is generated among the rural trade. Chamber of Commerce, and local newspaper should go for this, as it will bring a lot of folks to town.

Beymer Hits Page One In Every Issue

Walter Beymer, down in Providence, Ky., specializes in front-page breaks, to judge from a copy he forwards of his twice-a-week local paper which gives the Lido Theatre three swell stories. The first on "Its Great to Be Alive" gets top position with a three-line head, and is a more or less out-and-out plug for the current and coming attractions, though handled as a regular news story and therefore more interesting than the average reader.

Walter says he gets this break in every issue for six passes weekly and a reduction of two and a half cents an inch from the regular display rate. The other page one stories describe a free party to the boys at a nearby citizens' conservation camp, and another fat break tells of a popularity voting contest for a prize trip to Chicago.

By landing these on the main page. Beymer feels that he is getting double value by following up the stories with inside page theatre ads, and not having readers and display space right next to each other, as is usually the case. Very good, Walter, where this can be put over as you have so successfully done. And, incidentally, how come you're not a member?

"WHEN IS A CHILD NOT——?"

Discussion on Children Prices Continues With Pithy Comment From Well Known Round Tabler

by WILLIAM A. LEVEE, Mgr.
Capitol Theatre, Riverhead, N. Y.

"How old are you?" This question is asked by thousands of cashiers in box offices of theatres all over the country every day in the year. That this is an all important question will not be denied by any exhibitor or manager. Almost every theatre has a fixed age for a child admission limit; these ages range anywhere from 12 to 15 years. But how are the cashiers to determine the correct age of a child?

William A. Levee

When a boy or girl comes to the theatre with the child admission price in his or her hand, they will always be prepared to answer the cashier's question by assuring her that "I'm only 12, or 13," or whatever the age limit on child admissions happens to be in that particular house.

I have managed theatres in localities where the youths grow tall and straight like the corn in their native soil. In more than one instance did boys who measured five feet six with a growth of corn silk whiskers on their chins bring me their birth certificates and proved that they were within the child admission limits.

Then again I've seen them come to the theatre box office quite the reverse, small in stature, broad of shoulders, trying to get in on a child admission price and I found them to be well past that entrance fee requirement.

Cashier's Judgment

What's to be done about it? Good sound judgment must be used by both cashier and doorman. In no theatre will this problem be 100 per cent correct. In my particular theatre the cashier has been on the job for seven years, and she has come to know the children intimately. She can spot them from a distance and I might add in all sincerity I have watched her work and she is about as nearly correct in her judgment as it is possible for a human being to be. Of course she makes mistakes. Who doesn't?

This problem has been more serious perhaps in the last few years of the depression than during normal times. Our business, the theatre, is generally conceded to be the most charitable, self-sacrificing organization on the face of the globe, and the real showman has a warm heart beneath his hard-boiled tired countenance.

Mothers have sent their children to the "movies" in the past few years, to get them off the streets; in many cases the mother had to sacrifice something for herself in order to get the few pennies together to provide the "kiddies" with the admission price.

Johnny, Harry, Bill and Helen must have some little pleasure, so she sends them to the movies. I have watched groups like this come in to the lobby with just enough money to pay their way in on child admission prices.

Johnny happened to be somewhat over the age limit for children, but he didn't have the extra dime it took to take them all into the theatre, so Johnny buys the tickets for his brothers and sister and decided he'd do without the movies that week. He came up to me and told me of his plight, so Johnny went to the movies that afternoon.

Trust Children

Unless one is a genius (and we have few geniuses, thank heaven), it is very difficult to correctly tell a child's age and whether he is or is not entitled to go in on a child's ticket must be decided on by the cashier or doorman. Members of this staff should temper judgment with mercy in many cases.

I have trusted a good many youngsters who didn't have enough to pay their way in on an adult ticket on the promise that they would pay the balance the next time that they came to the theatre, and 99 per cent of these did pay.

We must have a fixed age for admissions, but we'll never be able to regulate admissions by insisting that the child is not a child, for, after all, we're not their parents. Use good common sense in this problem and you won't go wrong.

No doubt there is more to be said on this important subject, and we expect other manager members to do the saying in these columns, as have Sid Holland, V. T. Touchett, and now, Bill Levee. In an early issue, you will hear more on this subject from John Forrester and Louis Maurin. Your Round Table is ready to print added comments from others. Let's have 'em.—MIKE.

Fall Flower Show Builds Good Will

That flower shows in theatres are productive of added prestige has again been proven by Manager J. M. Blanchard of the Strand Theatre, Sunbury (Pa.), who tied up with his local garden club for an elaborate Fall flower show, formally inaugurated by the Mayor of his town.

Among the pleasing features of the display was a presentation between the first and second evening shows in which hundreds of grade school children, carrying bouquets, paraded the aisles singing a special flower song. Many exhibits were entered and Blanchard rounded up a number of worthwhile prizes, consisting of cash and merchandise awards donated by local companies.

All available space on lobby and mezzanine floors was turned over to the garden club for this event and "J. M." reports that the theatre was a bower of floral beauty during the three days of the show, which we may well believe from the above photo illustrating just one entry.

We cannot recommend the floral show too highly for an actual box office stimulator and goodwill builder. Almost invariably they go over very big and we suggest that brother members who are interested in knowing more about the mechanics of putting one on get in touch with Blanchard, who no doubt will be glad to cooperate.

Frank Tops Campaign With Bally Premiere

Hollywood openings are quite usual in the larger cities, but they are still something to become excited over in the smaller towns, as witness Frank Boucher's splurge on "Gold Diggers" at the Maryland Theatre, Hagerstown (Md.). A local station rigged up a microphone to the curb, also furnishing announcers who introduced the various celebrities. Besides leading citizens, Mayors and newspaper men of surrounding towns were also invited. Flood lights were secured from the power company and Frank promoted an orchestra to play the song hits while awaiting the guests. In fact, nothing was left undone to put this over in big league fashion.

Roto heralds were distributed with every issue of the evening paper, at the only cost of a few passes to the circulation manager. Extra sized window cards were tacked in all outlying towns, within a 25 mile radius, and imprinted arrows facing in the direction of the theatre were fastened to all light poles.

For an out of the ordinary window display Frank secured from the studio some of the original costumes used in the picture, which stunt of course is always good for extra excitement and so proved in this case. A tieup with the leading jewelry store in which gold rings were given to all baby girls born during the week of the engagement was good for a story and display ad, the last paid for by the jewelers.

HOWARD WAUGH'S BATTING AVERAGE IS STILL HIGH DOWN MEMPHIS

Howard Waugh, manager of the Warner Theatre in Memphis, started his plugging for "Footlight Parade" weeks in advance of the national October release date, his "coming" lobby being up for weeks ahead. A little novelty gotten up by Waugh was a small memorandum pad which was distributed to office workers. The pad carried copy announcing that the next biggest event in world's history is "Footlight Parade" with Ruby Keeler, James Cagney and ten more stars at the Warner Theatre. Waugh took time by the forelock for "42nd Street" and "Gold Diggers," when he launched his campaign two months in advance of his play date. Both Warner musicals did a terrific business, which Waugh expects to be exceeded by "Footlight Parade."

How've you been, Howard; is old Doc Penetro still functioning?

Some Neat Ideas From Kentucky

From Harlan, Ky., comes some of the latest used by Manager C. R. Stoflet, Margie Grant Theatre, to bring in the customers. A teachers' complimentary ticket, good for one show up to Oct. 1, is sent to every rural teacher in the county. To make it more personal, "C. R." writes the name of the individual invited at the top of the comp, and reports that in most cases each guest brings along several others, who, of course, buy tickets. With the opening of school, this idea is timely and helps the good will.

For the inauguration of his new wide range sound system, Stoflet had one of his newspaper ad men sell a three-column display congratulating the theatre on the new acquisition, the ad paid for by the eight merchants who cooperated. To make it easier, the theatre gave a pass to each participant, and that wasn't too much to pay as most of the ad plugged the theatre and the new sound.

First Holdover Marks "Diggers" Campaign

Due to the exceptional campaign put on by Manager Harold Kaplan, and Ad Chief Martin P. Kelly, on "Gold Diggers," for the first time in the history of the Paramount, St. Paul, Minn., a holdover was accomplished. Many unusual slants were worked, one decidedly out of the ordinary being the planting of the theatre name and picture title in office building lobby directories.

Another that packed power was a midnight screening for employees followed by a pep talk, after which each of the house staff pledged 10 plug letters to friends. The moving box office was also put over (see photo), as was the distribution of enameled blotters in hotels, clubs and office buildings by costumed girls. Theatre cashiers, with all change, passed out small mimeographed cards plugging the attraction.

Among the newspaper plants that commanded attention was a special rack in the lobby with cards inviting patrons to check their skates and bicycles. This broke the papers for a story and picture. The classified chuckle contest was also arranged, in which the paper ran front-page boxes and had the newsboys call attention to it. The serial was also planted, as were feature stories, and all papers got behind a special society night which brought out all local celebrities.

Prominent radio station arranged contest, in which records of name bands playing the song hits were broadcast, listeners in asked to identify orchestras. Phone operators at nearby resorts mentioned the picture and theatre at the end of every call, and a parking tieup was made, with garage "jockeys" in costume handling cars to and from theatre.

These were the highlights, and the boys are entitled to worlds of credit for a campaign that clicked in every respect, and certainly deserved the resulting holdover.

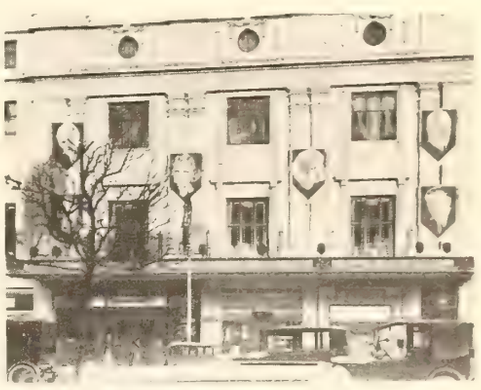
Dublin Opening Goes Hollywood

The opening of "Grand Hotel" at the Savoy Cinema, Dublin, Ireland, was inaugurated with an authentic Hollywood premier, engineered by Desmond V. Rushton, publicity director, who learned how to put it over during his years of residence in California.

The entire foyer was transformed into that of a hotel lobby, the color scheme being black and silver. Specially designed cash desks were installed, the girl cashiers being dressed in smartly cut dinner jackets. At the top of the grand staircases leading to the grand circle, kiosks were placed for the sale of candy, cigarettes and foreign periodicals.

A section of the Grand Circle was reserved for Government Ministers, members of the diplomatic corps, leading dignitaries and prominent citizens, who received special invitations for the occasion. The facade of the building was decorated with large oil paintings (see photo) of the heads of the stars, designed and executed in the theatre studios. Cables of congratulations were received from the stars and made into a trailer. A dozen express messenger boys held back the crowds with gold bullion ropes stretched from the door to the curb. Thousands thronged the street to watch the arrivals. Searchlights mounted on the roof parapet lit the sky and powerful arcs illuminated the front of the theatre.



Enlarged Heads on Theatre Front.

A microphone was mounted at a corner of the central registration desk, on which lay the guest book (similar to a hotel register, the cover of which was embossed in green and gold with the words "Souvenir of the Premiere Showing of Grand Hotel at the Savoy, Dublin"). Distinguished guests were asked to sign this book, and then invited to say a few words into the microphone to the assembled thousands outside. Rushton broadcast his personal experiences with the stars and anecdotes of Hollywood. Special programs were printed for the occasion furnished with printed slips with pencil attached, suggesting that patrons write their opinion of the picture, which were collected at the conclusion of the performance.

Rushton's Hollywood experience stood him in good stead, as the opening was covered by the Dublin papers in real big league style, resulting in, as he writes, "a gratifying effect on the box office."

JUST A FEW NEW MEMBERS!

VERNE T. TOUCHETT

who manages the Fond Du Lac Theatre in that city in Wisconsin, certainly starts his membership off on the right foot. Verne has already contributed some worthwhile material to our pages and we're in hopes he keeps up the good work. He is a young feller that's doing things and going places, and, unless we miss our guess, he'll come out on top of the heap. At any rate, we're rooting for him, if that helps any.

assists A. A. Kaplan at the Dale Theatre out in St. Paul, Minn., and he's just twenty-one. Harvey tells us he reads our pages avidly each week, and, judging by the enthusiasm he shows in his letter to us, he will certainly make his mark in the world. Between you and Mr. Kaplan, the Dale ought to be pretty well represented, so send in your stuff.

manages Loew's Lincoln Square in midtown, New York City. We've got Loew's tied up about 90 per cent and so we were glad to welcome John into our midst. But you're not to sit back on your laurels and not contribute; we'll be expecting things of and from you or we'll stop in and find out why not. You're very handy, you know, John.

assists Erwin Gold at the Walker Theatre in Brooklyn, a Frisch and Rinzler house. Morris tells us that ever since he started in business it has been in the film end of it. He was formerly assistant at the Leader in Brooklyn; for six years he was with Fox Film Corporation as travelling advertising sales representative. He has owned and operated his own house in Indiana, and if that all doesn't make him eligible for membership in our Club I don't know what does. Here's wishing you luck, Morris, and remember us to Monty MacLevy.

who holds down the fort at the Palace Theatre out in Morrilton, Ark., is another newly elected member and from the nice things we hear about him, he is doing a good job of it. Come on, Raleigh, get going and we'll do the rest by way of getting your stuff into print.

says he started in this "racket" at the tender age of 16 and had the distinction of being fired from his job in ten days. He now manages the Washington Theatre in Bay City, Mich. From there he became church organist and again "braved the public and irate managers" and set himself up in another house for the munificent sum of $10 a week, "rain or shine." Well, George, anybody with your stick-to-it-ive-ness should get somewhere, so don't hide your light under a bushel, but send your stuff in and we can't get too much of it.

must have a job on his hands because he manages the Uptown, Lorin, Strand and Lincoln Theatres in Oakland, Cal., and if that isn't a man-sized job, we don't know one when we see it. If you can manage to sneak a few minutes off to tell us how you do it, we'd appreciate it, Bob. Oakland is pretty solidly Round Table, so you have plenty of competition. He speaks of our mentioning the youthfulness of some of our members. Bob's only 24, but he's been places and does things.

manages the Lido Theatre in Providence, Ky., and Bob had better look to his laurels because Walt is only 23 years and he sounds as though he would give Monsieur Lippert a run for his money. How about some friendly rivalry between Ky. and Cal.? Can you take it?

DERENDINGER JOSEPH

And now we skip to Switzerland, where Joseph manages the Palace Theatre in Solothurn. Certainly looks as though our foreign membership were going to get a break and hear more of the doings of their friends on their own side of the water. Which is probably very good news to them and certainly glad tidings for us. We should like to know how you handle your patrons, Joseph, so let's hear from you.

who holds forth at the Skouras' Audubon Theatre, neighborhood house in the Washington Heights section of New York City comes along with us and says "well, here it is . . . now what do I do." Here's what you do, Ed, you sort of make a silent promise to yourself, only not too silent, that you will keep us informed of what's going on at your house. More years ago than we care to remember, we used to go to the "Audie" and we always held a sort of soft spot in our hearts for the old house, so don't disappoint us, and if you ever get down this way stop in and say howdy.

manages the Alemania Theatre in Koln-Sulz, Germany, and she joins the Round Table with several others from her country. We are always anxious to hear what our lady members do to keep their houses out of the red and so would be particularly interested to hear from you. Shall look forward to the next post bringing us a letter from you crammed with your showmanlike activities.

who manages the Paramount Theatre in Helena, Ark., starts his membership off in the proper fashion by sending us a photo of his lobby when he played "Song of Songs." Unfortunately, the snap was not clear enough for reproduction, but we're hoping you'll do better next time. You sound as though you are going to develop into a real active member, Sam. Are we right?

ALBERT JAMES MATTHEWS

is the general manager of the Dominion Theatre in dear old London. We lose a contributor from London in the person of Harry Crull and gain one in Albert. That is, we hope we've gained one; it's up to you now to see that your great city is heard from frequently; we have a soft spot in our heart for London, so come on, Al, and drop us a line or two.

is way out in Seattle, Wash., where he manages the Hamrick Blue Mouse and Music Box Theatres. Well, Bob, your houses are pretty well represented in our Club, so you'll have to be another to get on your toes and send in stuff to keep up with the rest of the gang. How's Sammy Siegal? Remember us to him.

manages the Deli-u-Schauberg Theatre in Benthan, Germany, and we bid him welcome in the Club. Our thousands of members and readers are always particularly interested in the activities of our foreign membership, so please send us in accounts of your activities so that we may publish them in our pages.

joins from the Opera House in Cedarville, Ohio, and he says that, in addition to being manager of the house, he is projectionist and "flunky." Well, Nelson, you certainly have your hands full, and we'd like to know how you manage to do it all alone. We were particularly interested in what you said about sending us several ideas that you have been using at your house. That's what the Club is, Nelson, an exchange of ideas, so get busy and send them in to us; we'll be waiting for them.

is the general manager of the Crystal, Palace and Rex Theatres, in Brusselles, Belgium, and is one of the younger set to join the Club. He says he has his certificate of membership hanging over his safe and wants to know if we can think of a "safer" place to hang it. Well, Brainos, you'll get far with your sense of humor; sounds like it has a touch of good old New York in it. May your certificate serve as a constant reminder that you should let us hear from you.

manages the Capitol Theatre out in Oakland, Cal., and he sends in his application from a town that is very well represented, Round Tably speaking, so you will have to be on your toes to meet the competition from your fair city. Remember us to your brother members and let's be a hearing from you, Wally.

of the Lichtespielhaus in Bahnhofstr., Germany, comes through with flying colors when he joins, sends us a photo of himself and the front of his house, which we expect to use shortly. That's the spirit; keep up the good work and we'll do the balance so far as seeing that your stuff is published. Are you with us?

is the manager of the Family Theatre way out yonder in Fort Wayne, Indiana. Our records boost of quite a few members out there and unless Pete wants to be left way behind, he'd better get busy and dig into his files and see what he can send us for use in the pages. With all the new winter activities getting underway there ought to be plenty that you could say that would interest your brother members.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features which are finished or are in work, but to which release dates have not been assigned, are listed in "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the distributors. Where they vary, the change is probably due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1933, unless otherwise specified.

THOSE INTERESTING

in the pictures you show have called for new ingenuity on the part of the producer. What is more, the photographing of the backgrounds has definitely demanded a special new type of raw film. Eastman Background Negative—recently announced and now widely used—is the answer. Possessing unique characteristics, it dovetails perfectly with this important technical advance. It greatly enhances the beauty, effectiveness, and value of projection background "shots." Eastman Kodak Company. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Vol. 113, No. 3 October 14, 1933

MR. DISNEY ADVENTURES

MR. MICKEY MOUSE, now being an institution of some five years of increasing success, is maybe a bit taken for granted. But now comes Mr. Walt Disney with something else again, a short, a Silly Symphony entitled "Three Little Pigs," which is more of a sensational success than any current dramatic production. The indications are that Mr. Disney has a deal of something besides good fortune—that his is not a narrow angled genius in the expression of a single concept. He is, in truth, taking the motion picture farther and farther from its primitive function of record and is making it more and more an independent instrument of expression.

'ROUND AND 'ROUND

THERE is that in the current flow of expression among the observers, commentators and participants of the disordered amusement world which fills one with the same sort of humor as the spectacle of a terrier pup in mad pursuit of his own tail.

Mr. John C. Moffitt of the Kansas City Star burns with excitement over a view of the motion picture industry hell bent to moral destruction. Mr. John S. Cohen of the New York Sun is a-twitter with a fear that there will be an inundation of Cinderella stories. Mr. Eric Knight of the Philadelphia Public Ledger is all upset for two columns because some producers sprig up their productions for selling purposes by employing "names" for brief bits, rather than bona fide parts in the show.

With the arrival of each morning's papers one is shocked to find how many things are the matter with the motion picture all of the time.

But the same papers bring us the questionable cheer of evidences that things are not importantly better in the world of the lofty legitimate, the stage.

Two outstanding expressions of grief and alarm, both accompanied by suggestions of remedy, have been presented in recent issues of the New York Times, which still leads its amusement section with the stage pages, and which was grudgingly among the last of metropolitan dailies to give the motion picture a department of its own. October 1, Mr. George M. Cohan, who has hoofed it up Broadway from Union Square to Times Square in forty years, surveyed the situation with reference to the stage and found it too dominated by sophistication and sex. He thinks "they would go to see the old kind of clean show if it were properly done." He took a look at the screen and decided that: "Their eyes have been on the ticket takers instead of the picture makers. . . . They will have to fire a bunch of useless employees. . . . They got the idea that they could throw money away on the production and still get it back. . . . Spending money doesn't make a good show. There must be something more."

Then last Sunday Mr. Elmer Rice, discussing for The Times a project for "a People's Art Theatre," remarked: "The plain fact is that our present theatre caters almost exclusively to the denizens of Broadway and Park Avenue, and the fringe which takes its standards of taste from those two thoroughfares."

Meditating on all this, on the New Canaan express the other morning, we tossed the matter at the philosophically minded Mr. Konrad Bercovici, who farms and fictions up in Connecticut, commuting the while. He shook his black gypsy mane, with a shrug.

"The trouble is," he muttered, "that everything is written and made to sell somebody instead of to say something. 'Writing down' never works."

Now it would seem that if the advice of Mr. Cohan and Mr. Rice were to be applied, we should have the spectacle of the motion picture, which has swallowed, somewhat lumpily, the sophistication of the stage, being subject to a rear action attack from the stage, coming up behind with material for the great common people. If that happens, the motion picture will be right at its heels, running rapidly around behind itself.

"ROXY" GOES ENDORSING

IN years agone, up and down Broadway, Mr. Samuel L. Rothafel was remarkably chary of personal proclamations concerning motion pictures offered under his auspices. So when he is discovered in this week's advertisements in behalf of the Radio City Music Hall saying: "It is my pleasure to announce the first presentation on Thursday of what I believe is the finest picture yet shown at this theatre—'The Private Life of Henry VIII' . . . " one may wonder if by any chance our "Roxy" is getting to be a free and easy endorser. Admitting that the imported "Henry VIII" is an excellent picture, one must also remember that Mr. Rothafel is hereby setting it above such American productions as "State Fair," "Cavalcade," "Morning Glory" and "Lady for a Day," all of which have played his theatre.

If we must have an economic revolution, and it seems we must, the battles of the codes are after all rather less disturbing than pike staffs and guillotines.

THE "ROAD"

To the once glorious "road," emaciated almost to extinction by the "movies," have legitimate producers from time to time attempted to apply resuscitation, invariably feeble. Now again, in the person of prominent Denver showman Arthur M. Oberfelder, comes another "physician." In New York, planning, casting, arranging, is Producer Oberfelder, assisted by veteran John McKee. Circuits are in the offing, one embracing Kansas City, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Columbus, another several southern cities. The price range: 25 cents to $1. Already, in Cincinnati, is Mr. Oberfelder encountering prospective labor difficulties. The road, a "has been," is not yet "in the running" as a film competitor. . . .

"INADEQUATE"

Ostensibly by reason of lack of sufficient artistic quality and inadequacy of the leading performer has the initial public exhibition of the Hitlerian motion picture, "Horst Wessel," been postponed in Berlin, perhaps permanently. But back of the fiasco which apparently is the cinematization of the life of the Nazi hero and "martyr," lies a story of petty political jealousy, conflict between Dr. Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda and public enlightenment, and Dr. Ernst Hanfstaengl, one time New York art dealer, long a Hitler friend, now Nazi leader. Origin, direction of the film was Hanfstaengl's, who, in consequence, infringed upon Goebbel's prestige, incurred his displeasure. Thus the "mysterious" postponement. . . .

"ONE SEEING——"

Ever and again is the perennial public interest in the motion picture's newsreel demonstrated. Came its highest recognition in the establishment of exclusive "newsreel theatres," well attended, profitable. Nor is this interest confined to the United States. This week, in London's West End, opened another, located ideally in a major railroad terminal, bringing the total of reel houses to a round dozen, at least, in the area. Always true, in any circumstance, is the ancient Chinese proverb: "One seeing is worth a thousand tellings."

GRAND TROUPER

Characteristic was the: "I'm not that important; I've been having birthdays for years," with which grand old trouper Marie Dressler, MGM star, greeted the well-wishers planning an enormous celebration of her 64th birthday November 9. Organized was the Marie Dressler Birthday Club. Recorded are quick responses to the far-flung nationwide invitation dispatched by Mrs. Ralph Hitz, club president. In New York this week the elderly star, who would probably resent the word, was honored via a testimonial dinner at the Hotel Roosevelt. From chorus to stardom, through vaudeville, circus, stage, screen, she pushed her way for 45 of her 64 years. From "Tillie's Punctured Romance," opposite Charlie Chaplin, to "Tugboat Annie" in 1933, the trouper has marched, a credit to her profession. . . .

FILMED SENTENCE

Sharp drama, sharper significance came this week to the newsreel as camera, sound men of Hearst Metrotone News took ready places in the court of Federal Judge Vaught in Oklahoma City, there to unprecedentedly portray in indestructible, widely circulated celluloid, the arraignment, sentencing of the desperadoes, accomplices there convicted of the kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, local millionaire. For the first time cameras clicked as a federal judge passed drastic sentence. From Attorney General Cummings came special permission, on Metrotone's request, and thence orders to Judge Vaught. Valuable, obvious is the newsreel's contribution to the U. S. battle against savage kidnapers. . . .

INTO THE LIMBO

Passed this week the famed legal effort of one Samuel Lionel Rothafel in defense of a nickname, as the U. S. supreme court testily "threw out" his plea for a review of the decision by which circuit court of appeals Judge Manton decided "Roxy" belonged on Seventh avenue and 50th street, New York, not on Sixth avenue, whither Mr. Rothafel had gone, as he thought, with his appellation. Now comes rumor that Harry C. Arthur, when spring comes again, will take the house as part of his eastern circuit, with the theatre by then out of receivership, a rumor which Receiver Howard Cullman is at pains to emphatically deny. Mr. Rothafel, of the RKO Music Hall and RKO Center (nee Roxy) theatres, continues active on Sixth avenue. . . .

SCREEN TECHNIQUE

To the presentation of the motion picture, apparently, has come one more advancement, one more technical improvement, in this instance from the Warner studio and Frank Murphy, chief electrician. Called importantly "deep stage presentation," the method involves moving back of the screen, use of a new lighting system operating from the lower fore part of the stage, promises "unprecedented" visual effects. Camera work on "Ever in My Heart," with which Warner will introduce the technique this week at the New York Hollywood, had the collaboration of Electrician Murphy. The science of the screen moves on apace. . . .

FILM AS "SALESMAN"

Unique is the new use to which motion pictures recently have been put in New York, that of real estate agent. In New York's vast apartment development, London Terrace, are 1,665 apartments, scattered in 12 tall buildings. Showing "prospectives" about is an agent-taxing task. In the reception room, facing davenport, chairs, is an ornamental window. As the callers wait, motion pictures detail the inviting features of the place, show housekeeping helps. Thus neatly is a troublesome problem solved, a prospect drawn into a receptive mood — via the motion picture. . . .

FREE TRADE

Well might U. S. film producers wish theatrical as well as educational films were to be included in the agenda of the international conference opened in Geneva this week to consider the removal of duties and other restrictions calculated to impede world distribution of educational films. For the United States was Vice Consul Curtis Everett present. . . .

ROSENBLATT REVISES CODE, BUT ROOSEVELT ASKS ABOUT THOSE SALARIES

by TERRY RAMSAYE

The Code Marathon in the Dance of the Blue Eagle dragged through weary paces this week up and down the halls of the Hotel Mayflower and the Commerce Building in Washington.

Wednesday brought from the flooding mimeograph serving Sol A. Rosenblatt a second revision of the first code draft, affecting only in minor aspects the draft presented in full in last week's issue of Motion Picture Herald.

The White House flared up again in the picture as a party at interest, as indicated in these pages before, when the Associated Press and the Motion Picture Herald's own special correspondent were permitted to issue, late Wednesday, dispatches saying in substance that President Roosevelt had asked the NRA for an investigation of the whole subject of motion picture star salaries.

Earlier in the week Mr. Red Kann of Motion Picture Daily had more than inklings of the story and said so, whereupon Mr. Rosenblatt, being in a somewhat delicate position, said in substance "poof poof," or any way you want to spell it.

AND SALLY RAND'S FAN IS ON THE AIR

Last night on the sacred air of NBC, on the Pabst Blue Ribbon hour, the old Maestro, Mr. Ben Bernie, remarked, "The next number is dedicated to Sally Rand's fan. It is entitled 'I have you where I want you'."

The code document as of Wednesday was in the expressed opinion of Mr. Rosenblatt 85 per cent done. So were the code makers.

New in the chameleon document of the code were sections aimed at clipping the spurs of racketeering agents of players, a proviso for the elimination of cut-throat bidding for the players, and, curiously, a stipulation that musicians—piccolo players et al—were left as is, in statu quo ante, which is quite a spot for a musician.

Continued were the struggles, some of them faintly, of exhibitor vs. labor, the agents against Section 9, the Academy anent Section 10, and the battles of that old two-gun villain "Double Bill."

The indications were that nothing new would happen about labor, that the agents would lose, that "Double Bill" would be left to the economic determination of his own career, and that stars would continue to go to the highest bidder.

The week was a continuation of the grinding process by which the motion picture's composite array of industrial processes and problems were being brought into relation to the National Recovery Administration's program-on-paper.

It is obviously a program-on-paper because not yet in the world of the motion picture or elsewhere among the codified industries has yet become apparent any imposing machinery of enforcement and application.

Further, it was and is obvious that should recovery arrive before the prescription is written, it will not be taken to the drug store.

Half of the battle of the codes, in re the motion picture and other industries, has been not so much toward a code as toward a clarification of the patterns of problems and proper, reasonable conduct, an understanding and an airing.

On the question of the Code Authority and its personnel, the agitation and excitement has been considerable and thus far much submerged. A fortnight past Motion Picture Herald recorded the voyage to Europe of Mr. Joseph P. Kennedy, of Boston and New York, with young Mr. James Roosevelt, son of the President, and some eight other members of the family thereunto related—coupled with the report up New England way that Mr. Kennedy might emerge as the motion picture's dictator under the code. However, one would assume that if it appeared imminent that Mr. Kennedy was to be importantly set back into the motion picture scene, or expected to be, we should not this week have had news that four of his stalwarts were to go into the service of National Distillery Products, starting with a survey of New England for outlets.

TRIAL BALLOONS FOR HERBERT SWOPE

Merely through editorial lassitude it was not at the same time recorded that trial balloons were set aloft, liberated dove-like, by the friends, certain friends, of Hr. Herbert Bayard Swope, once of the New York World and variously friendly and allied with the General Electric-Radio Corporation of America group.

The "suggestion" concerning Mr. Swope appears to have progressed about as far as Mr. Louis McHenry Howe of Fall River and Washington, secretary to President Roosevelt —and to have progressed no farther immediately.

It seems reasonable to assume, if one were put to the necessity of assuming, that the problem of the Code Authority and its personnel

ACTORS' SECESSION SPLITS ACADEMY; NEW GUILD MEMBERS NEARING 1,000

Switch of Small Group of Leading Players Precipitates Movement Bringing New Union's Enrollment to 529 in a Week

Fashioned Along Lines of Equity But With No Apparent Connection; Report Directors' Branch Planning Similar Action

Marking one of the most sudden and decisively effective steps ever undertaken in the unionization of a group of motion picture employees, screen players of Hollywood have set up an independent and unaffiliated union of their own. And the creative workers of Hollywood thereby virtually extended the hand of welcome to Actors Equity Association of the stage, as they struck an undermining blow at the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. It was the Academy that had fought so vigorously on occasions to prevent Actors Equity from gaining a foothold in Hollywood.

Fashioned along the lines of Equity, but with no apparent connection with that association, Hollywood's union of actors has taken the form of the Screen Actors Guild, incorporated some weeks ago. Besides the obvious basic purposes—of protecting the interests of creative workers in all normal relations with producers—the Guild is prepared to face a reported threatening crisis in any proposed salary control legislation which might come under the NRA code now under consideration at Washington. However, adoption of such a proposal has been repeatedly denied.

Expect 1,000 in Guild by Weekend

A switch to the Screen Actors Guild was undertaken late last week, quietly at first, by a small group of leading actors who were among the most active members of the Academy's actors branch. By Monday night of this week, the Guild had tied together all the loose ends of organization, and had become the largest creative union ever to operate in Hollywood, enrolling some 529 members in a week, with predictions flowing freely along Hollywood boulevard that 1,000 would be on the roster by the weekend.

The Academy, which recently was reorganized, supposedly to strengthen the voice of the creative workers and to end the influence of producers, appeared over the weekend to be weakening as additional stars were preparing to bolt and join the insurrectos in the new Guild.

Actors' Branch Largest in Academy

At a mass meeting at the El Capitan theatre in Los Angeles, last Sunday evening, the Academy bolters openly declared that the Academy was failing to serve their interests, and that they felt more can be done for the actors by an organization composed entirely of actors, whose duly appointed spokesmen would know their problems better than anyone else.

Additional players well known in the studio capital said they could not see any benefit in continuing as Academy members and they set about to write resignations to join the Guild.

The actors branch of the Academy has been generally accepted in the industry as the backbone of the Academy, and with their complete secession, if effected, there would obviously not be much left of the Academy, "employee" membership of which is divided as follows (approximate figures):

BRANCH	MEMBERS
Actors	263
Directors	100
Assistant Directors	48
Technicians	191
Writers	137

The writers previously had formed their own Screen Writers' Guild, causing a split in that branch of the Academy, and persistent reports in Hollywood during the week indicated that the directors' branch was contemplating similar action.

In view of Washington's repeated denials of the existence of a definite salary-fixing clause, which ordinarily might have stopped the bolting actors, it appears evident that the revolutionaries were intent upon forming their own actors' union, regardless, in order to sever all relations with the Academy.

Salary-Fixing Reports Bring Climax

The discontent in the Academy's actors ranks came to a climax a few weeks ago during the concluding sessions of the code hearings at Washington, where there were heard many vague rumblings of a proposal to incorporate in the code a clause which would establish a maximum of possibly $2,000 weekly, for socalled "excessive" star salaries. Various denials of any definite action were made at Washington, although there were insistent reports that the Administration favored some form of regulation for top salaries.

However, on Monday of this week it appeared that salary-fixing for stars would never materialize under the code, because both the legal machinery and the legal precedent for such action were believed nonexistent. Also, reactions from producer quarters, both at Washington and in Hollywood, indicated they believed such regulation would be impractical, and could not be enforced, although some producers were said to feel that deals could be made with stars whereby a maximum of $2,000 weekly would be augmented by a split on the profits.

A new development in the salary-fixing situation appeared suddenly at Washington Monday night, when Lester Cowan, executive secretary of the Academy, petitioned Deputy Rosenblatt for a public hearing, on behalf of the Academy members, in the event that the original text of Article 10 —which had no stipulation for maximum salaries—is changed to include such a clause.

Actors Dissatisfied

Meanwhile, worried over the reports of fixing maximum salaries 26 of the Academy's most prominent members bolted the ranks last Monday, including: James Cagney, Eddie Cantor, Frank Morgan, Adolphe Menjou, Fredric March, Gary Cooper, Robert Montgomery, Chester Morris, Spencer Tracy, George Bancroft, George Raft, Ralph Bellamy, Warren William, Boris Karloff, Kenneth Thompson, Paul Muni, Ann Harding, Otto Kruger, Charles Butterworth, the four Marx Brothers, Ralph Morgan, Miriam Hopkins.

Eddie Cantor is president of the new Guild, and the following are vice-presidents: Adolphe Menjou, Fredric March, Ann Harding. Treasurer and assistant treasurer are Groucho Marx and Lucille Gleason, respectively.

Since the first group left the Academy, six others added their names to the resignation list, and at press time another 24 were preparing to do likewise, all joining the Guild.

Some 800 actors of Hollywood, principally non-members of the Academy, answered the Guild's call for the Sunday mass meeting, and 500 signed membership blanks immediately. Others said they would mail theirs.

Six Attempts by Equity

Denials at Washington to the contrary, members of the Guild predicted on Monday night that any attempt to limit actors' salaries to $2,000 a week, as reported, or to control earnings to any extent, will be met by aggressive action, probably by a walkout. However, such an eventuality was believed to be unlikely.

Actors' Equity Association of stage players has made six attempts to "organize" Hollywood and effect a "closed shop" for motion picture players. In most of these attempts, the group met with the successful opposition of the Academy, which had been formed in 1929, after Equity had launched

Establishment of a maximum salary for socalled "excessive" star salaries will not be a part of the film code. This issue, which was the principal cause for splitting the Academy's actors' ranks, is reported on in detail on page 9.

That President Roosevelt desires a study by NRA of directors' and stars' salaries, especially child actors, was admitted at the White House.

Eddie Cantor, president of the new Screen Actors' Guild, said in Hollywood that reports that the Guild would join Actors' Equity Association, with local autonomy provided, were untrue. He said that the Screen Actors' Guild is a local Hollywood organization and is not a belligerent body.

MAJORS COMPLETE HALF OF DEALS; SALES FAR AHEAD OF LAST SEASON

Busier and Better Year Than Any Since 1930 Is Forecast by Sales Managers, Despite Late Start of Selling

Major distributing companies have closed 50 per cent of their sales deals for the entire 1933-34 season. Though the new selling year was one of the slowest to get under way, it has increased its tempo until now practically all large companies report sales to date substantially greater than they were for the corresponding period of 1932, and the sales managers are unanimous in their expectations of a busier and better year than the industry has seen since 1930.

Large distributors who for a variety of reasons could not get their salesmen into the field before late July and early August already show records of proportionately greater numbers of accounts closed for the 1933-34 season.

Hesitance on Double Bills

A few of the smaller companies, however, have been unable to present favorable reports. This they ascribe to ramification of the code activities as having a more direct bearing upon their business than that of the major distributors. They point out that a great many exhibitors, who ordinarily buy film from independent producers early in the season, have withheld their pens from contracts for films which they know can be played only on double feature programs. And independents say the same obstacle will confront them until the problem of whether double bills are to continue as a fair trade practice has been settled once and for all.

The major companies, too, were delayed by the code in getting their selling activities under way. Bankruptcies and receiverships likewise, played their parts in holding back the proceedings, yet the season has developed into a far better one, as a whole, than was last year, when business was beginning to hum toward the end of May.

Contrary to oft-expressed earlier opinions that the new season would bring higher film rentals proportionate to the upward trend of business and commodity prices, few companies are proceeding along these lines. There have been, however, more percentage deals than heretofore, and more combined percentage and flat rental accounts sold than ever before. Some companies' percentage rates are slightly higher than last season, but, in spite of this, exhibitors are "jumping at the opportunity to play pictures on this basis," as one distributor phrased it.

The method of selling also appears to be turning into new channels. For the first time in many years film salesmen are said to be actually selling the product and not the company they represent. Exhibitors are buying quality as they never bought it before and are placing reliance in those producers who during the past year have delivered consistently good product to them. Much of this is laid to the breakdown and decentralization of major theatre circuits, with a healthier, more competitive atmosphere today than the industry has known in years.

Preferential bookings are the order of the day. Some pictures in a contract are sold at 35 per cent, some at 30, 25 and 20 per cent. This is chiefly applicable to the larger situations, but in many instances contracts are being closed with small exhibitors on the same terms. Individual pictures, too, as in the case of Warners' "Gold Diggers of 1933" and "Footlight Parade," are being sold exclusively on a percentage basis, to large and small exhibitors alike. Others carry flat rentals and a few the rental and percentage plan, or percentage and guarantee.

As an example of what has been happening in the last two and one-half months, Warner Bros., with its sales force out only since the middle of July, already is selling faster in every point of importance than it was at this time in 1932, said A. W. Smith, Eastern and Canadian sales manager. More than 2,500 situations have been sold to date and accounts being closed are increasing substantially each week. Last year Warner closed approximately 8,000 situations for the whole 1932-33 season, then a company record for new accounts, and practically all of these have been sold for the new product. Selling in the eastern section this year has been virtually completed. The many circuits sold include Loew's, Publix New England, Famous Players Canadian, Kincey & Wilby, E. J. Sparks, Griffith circuit (Oklahoma), Balaban & Katz, Butterfield, Schine Upstate New York circuit, M. A. Shea, and Ed. Fay of Providence, R. I., and John Hamrick in Seattle. Aside from these and the independent acocunts, Warner has its own theatre circuit, totaling 400 houses.

The Warner selling season in 1932 got away in May, but this year, due to pictures remaining on the 1932-33 schedule and to code problems, the selling season did not get underway until the middle of July. At this time last year, despite a six weeks' head start, little more than 2,000 accounts had been closed. Mr. Smith also said that not less than nine pictures on every contract are sold on a straight percentage basis and that percentage tops have been increased slightly.

Monogram, on the other hand, as a large independent producer-distributor selling double features, has found its sales activities retarded pending final code action. Exhibitors do not know whether to buy single or double features at this time, according to W. Ray Johnston, Monogram president. "We are almost 50 per cent below what we had accomplished last year at this time," he said, "and are being forced, as a result, to sell on a picture-by-picture flat rental basis."

Herman Gluckman, president of Majestic Pictures, reported a 25 per cent increase in sales over what they were a year ago, with a great many new accounts and a considerable number of unaffiliated circuit deals closed. "We have not been particularly bothered by the double feature situation in the industry code," Mr. Gluckman said Wednesday. "We are aiming for the Class A houses with our pictures and therefore are not being held up." About 75 per cent of the company's product is being sold on a flat rental basis.

MGM 100 Per Cent Ahead

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is 100 per cent ahead of its sales for this time last year, according to Felix F. Feist, general sales manager. All major circuits have been sold, for the most part on a straight percentage basis, and percentage rates have not been increased.

Columbia is chalking up at least a 40 per cent increase in sales over the same period last year, according to Jack Cohn, vice-president.

"Despite the fact that our current season started six weeks later than it did last year," Mr. Cohn said, "we have closed practically all our large circuit deals, both affiliated and independent, for the season. The improved showing indicates what will probably be the most successful year the company ever had."

An increase in percentage deals made by Columbia this year was reported by Abe Montague, general sales manager, who said the company is using its individual contract form and not the standard licensing agreement, ratified by Columbia and six other large distributors last spring. Mr. Montague also pointed out that circuits are buying earlier this year than in other seasons.

Among deals recently closed are: Sparks circuit; Griffith; Loew's, Rosenblatt, Shiffman

"Better quality films and a wider market presage a successful season" in the motion picture industry, according to Dow, Jones' Wall Street Journal, which sounded a generally optimistic note for 1933-34 in a report on the motion picture situation, published Tuesday night. Here are some of the highlights:

Earnings of moving picture companies are showing a material upturn. . . .

Marked increase in number of theatres operating, and admission prices have been raised slightly, all of which has helped film rentals. . . .

Film industry has been suffering from lack of product, as well as lack of public spending power. . . . Outlook for the coming season, however, is considerably brighter and by the beginning of the winter season all of the large producers should be well in the black. . . .

Loew's report for fiscal year ended August 31 will probably show a net profit of $1.75 a share for the 1,464,205 shares outstanding . . . after giving effect to a number of unusually severe write-downs. . . .

Paramount-Publix . . . operations are proceeding normally through a number of subsidiaries. . . . The company on this basis is running in the black. . . .

Foreign business is the brightest spot in the situation at the moment. . . .

Warner Brothers is now running in the black and current operations are ahead of a year ago. . . .

Fox . . . is proceeding with normal operations and, for the first time since it met with financial difficulties some years ago, seems to be running smoothly. . . .

FRANKLIN RESIGNS; MAY BE PRODUCER

Probably Will Enter Independent Production After Short Vacation, Probably With RKO Arrangement, Says Aylesworth

Wednesday afternoon the Radio-Keith-Orpheum publicity department issued an announcement, as follows:

"M. H. Aylesworth, president of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, announced today the resignation of Mr. Harold B. Franklin. Mr. Franklin, after a short vacation, will probably enter independent motion picture production, probably under some arrangement which will continue his relationship with the RKO group."

When Mr. Franklin entered the employ of the Radio Corporation's subsidiaries, it was without title. It is understood that he contemplated being placed in charge of all RKO Radio independent unit production. Mr. Franklin was, however, assigned to other duties, first in a theatre advisory post, and then as chief of theatre operations.

An Announcement

Late in July announcement issued from Mr. Aylesworth's pen:

"Mr. J. R. McDonough, executive vice-president of Radio Corporation of America, has been given a leave of absence from his executive duties in the Radio Corporation during the period of the receivership of Radio-Keith-Orpheum and its reorganization. Mr. McDonough will devote his full time to the activities of the various organizations of Radio-Keith-Orpheum and will report directly to the president. . . . Mr. Aylesworth states that the executive officers of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum organization will continue to function as at present."

Mr. McDonough had been long in the confidential service of Mr. David Sarnoff of the Radio Corporation of America.

Mr. Franklin said Wednesday: "I have an exceedingly high regard for everybody in the RKO organization, and I sincerely hope they have for me. My association here has been most pleasant. The reason for my resignation was that an excellent opportunity to enter production, possibly under the RKO banner, came along and I simply wanted to take advantage of it." He promised an interesting announcement after a vacation.

Meanwhile, at the RKO and NBC home office, Mr. Aylesworth was reported to be "out of town"—as usual—"until Friday."

Mr. S. L. Rothafel—better known as Roxy—said: "I know nothing about Mr. Franklin's resignation."

The Radio City Music Hall opened at 8 o'clock on the night of December 26 and remained open until 2 o'clock on the morning of December 27. Mr. Rothafel was ill. Presently he was discovered in Texas—recuperating from a basic operation. Meanwhile Mr. Franklin was in charge of the Radio City Theatre.

An Interview

On April 26, Mr. Franklin was interviewed by the New York Herald-Tribune, which said:

"While the matter has not been decided definitely, I feel sure there is a place for Roxy in the organization. He ought to be able to slide back into it in a place where he will fit without too great a disturbance." . . .

During the first week in May, it was reported that Mr. Franklin gave a dinner to Mr. Rothafel, in honor of his return. According to the Herald-Tribune:

"Places were laid for twenty-eight executives, with Roxy at the head with Mr. Franklin and Mr. Aylesworth. . . . The executives also were represented by baskets of roses with their cards attached, all wishing good luck to the managing director upon his return." . . .

Another Interview

On the day before the dinner, Mr. Franklin was quoted by the New York Journal as follows:

"We are glad to have Roxy associated with us once more and to work with him in establishing new standards of motion picture presentation. . . . In these efforts he will have the full cooperation of the entire RKO Theatres organization."

Harold B. Franklin was born in New York City April 4, 1889. He has been engaged in the exhibition of motion pictures since 1914, starting with M. A. Shea in Buffalo. He was later vice-president of Publix Theatres, then president of Fox West Coast Theatres—and next, president of Hughes Franklin Theatres. This post he resigned, to commence his affiliation with RKO.

Educational Luncheon Marks Start of Eastern Production

Educational Pictures entertained about 60 persons at a luncheon Wednesday at the Paramount Astoria studio to celebrate the start of production in the east of approximately 20 Educational two-reelers which will be produced by Jack White and Al Christie. The two will also direct their own pictures. Among the players who have been signed are Ernest Truex, Lillian Roth, Moran and Mack, Stoopnagle and Budd, Charles Judels, Tom Patricola and Tom Howard.

Open Theatres at Grand Rapids

Opening of the Regent theatre at Grand Rapids, Mich., and B. F. Keith's Empress, also at Grand Rapids, on Saturday, was announced by RKO Theatres and W. S. Butterfield Theatres.

Warner Suit Is Postponed Again

Trial of the Department of Justice's years old anti-trust suit against Warner Brothers was postponed again this week in U. S. district court, New York, this time until November 6. The suit was an outgrowth of Warners' acquisition of First National.

Although no expressions have been forthcoming from the Department of Justice as to what effect the NRA will have on such government-instituted anti-trust suits, indications both in Washington and New York this week were that such action, including the current Warner suit, will be shelved after the industry's code is finally adopted.

Film Men in New York Mayoralty Campaign

The McKee for Mayor campaign committee in New York this week appointed Wayne Pierson of Weldon Pictures as chairman of its stage, screen and radio division. J. J. McCarthy of Paramount was made associate chairman, and Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, chairman of the motion picture division.

The campaign committee is holding a luncheon at the Motion Picture Club next week, date to be announced later.

Meyer Golden Dies; Vaudeville Producer

Meyer Golden, RKO vaudeville unit producer, died early Tuesday while asleep at his home in New York. He was 63 years of age. Mr. Golden had been ill for the past 10 years and returned from Europe 10 days ago, where he had gone for his health. He is survived by two sons, Maurice and George, who will continue in the business.

Universal Promotes Manager

A. J. O'Keefe, former manager of Universal's Portland, Ore., exchange, has been promoted to the management of the Los Angeles office. G. C. Craddock, former Seattle salesman, will assume the management of the Portland office.

THE CAMERA REPORTS

SHOT IN ACTION. Joseph Gibson, Universal Newsreel cameraman, shown "at the front" in Havana, this occasion being a battle between Communists and government troops. Later Gibson was shot in both legs as he was moving his camera to a better point of vantage in the thick of street fighting.

EXPLOITATION. Helen Hayes before the microphone at the NBC New York studios as she and John Beal broadcast a scene from MGM's "Night Flight," on a sponsored program prior to presentation of the film at the Capitol.

DISCOVERED. Wini Shaw, Cleveland cabaret singer whom Fox has signed, following screen tests for "Fox Movietone Follies."

HOST TO 600. (Below) Jack L. Warner presiding at the luncheon tendered Naval officers, federal lawmakers and prominent Californians at the Warner studio. Will Rogers acted as master of ceremonies. All studios were represented.

RETURNS. Continuing a career that began in the silent days, Lois Wilson has a prominent role in Ruth Chatterton's Warner picture, "Female." Thus was she snapped the other day at the First National Sunset Boulevard studios.

SIGNED. Suzanne Kaaren, New York stage actress and artists' model, who will make her debut soon on the screen, having won a Fox contract.

EXTENDS POLICY. Stanley W. Lawton, who has added the Broadway to the George M. Cohan theatre in New York as a popular price picture house.

IN DEBUT. This study being, we take it, the photographer's subtle symbolism for her "coming out party." For she is June Knight, who inaugurates her screen career with Universal's "Ladies Must Love."

MAID OF ANOTHER DAY. Katharine Hepburn as she appears in RKO Radio's production of the Louisa M. Alcott classic, "Little Women," recently completed and scheduled for early release. This will be Miss Hepburn's fourth picture.

PLAYS THAT HIT THE PICTURE IDEA

DeCasseres Reports on Screen Values of Five of Broadway's Newest Footlight Offerings

by BENJAMIN DE CASSERES

HEAT LIGHTNING

"Heat Lightning," by Leon Abrams and George Abbott, is the first play of the season that hits the picture-idea right smack on the kisser.

Many things will have to be done with this play of crime and love laid in the lunch-room of a filling station in an auto camp on a highway crossing the Southwest desert; but it has all the spine and many of the fillings of tense drama, with a lot of comic background in the Mexicans and the Vere de la skims of the New York and Reno social sets, all trekking one way or another for no particular reason at all.

For one thing, in the picture I'd like to see the radio menace played up. The whole Southwest country is talking about a double-murder in an Idaho bank. The murderers have got away.

There is a radio in this filling station, and when Bob Gleckler, the murderer in person, and his weak-kneed pal, blow in, for some reason the authors have the radio go static.

Here was a chance for hourly bulletin stuff as the airplanes and autos head Southwest in pursuit and the murderers' reactions in front of the sheriff and others who believe he is an oil-prospector.

The girl who runs this filling station was an old flame of the desperado back in early Oklahoma days. There is some nice love-play between them.

As the scent gets closer and closer, George, the bank stick-up, tries to rob the safe of valuable jewels that belong to some rich Reno and New York girls travelling with a sweetheart chauffeur. Olga, the girl Socony, kills her old sweetheart while he is on the job, preparing for the get-away.

The character of the desperado is a Louis Calhern or an Edward Robinson role made to order. The play suffered from diabetic coma, and cannot be registered as a stage hit; but there is a strong action picture in it.

DOUBLE DOOR

Elizabeth McFadden must be writ down in history as having put over the first big stage hit of the '33-'34 season.

Played and directed faultlessly, with a masterly crescendo of horror and thrills, deftly spun in plot and vivid in characterization, "Double Door," suggested by the old shuttered Wendel residence at 39th and Fifth Avenue and its curious inmates, held me, an old cynic at melodramatic hokum, spell-bound from beginning to end. It is such fine picture material that the only question is What price?

The character around which the whole grim drama revolves is elderly Victoria Van Bret (played memorably by Mary Morris). She has a will of steel, is money and real estate mad and believes in preserving the Van Bret name and its early Knickerbocker afflatus at any price—even torture and murder.

She has reduced to quasi-idiocy a sister, whom she is always threatening with imprisonment in a secret wall safe-vault. She tries to disrupt her half-brother, Rip Van Bret, and his bride, a nurse, by a series of carefully woven suspicions and a heavy gumshoe private dick. Finally, she tries to murder the bride by shoving her in the vault, and then giving up the house.

The hunt for the bride in this creepy house is highly thrilling, and will be more so in the picture. Then there are angles over the will, a string of pearls worth $500,000, and finally the complete collapse of Victoria, deserted, hugging her pearls.

It is not just cheap melodrama; but is a psychological study in pride and egotism.

With deft directing and an actress of the grim-severe type, "Double Door"—containing romance, thrill, horror, and an almost Caligari atmosphere—can be made one of the high points of the screen for the gasp and goose-flesh trade.

MURDER AT THE VANITIES

A comic essay might be written on the influence of picture titles on play titles. Personally, I like sensational and flaming titles; but I admit it is a matter of record that a good title never made a success of a bad picture or a bad title ever damaged a picture inherently b. o.

"Murder at the Vanities," the dramatic-mystery-beauty-show concoction offered by the exotic-minded Earl Carroll, has a title that was made for pictures. And I believe that Carrol and Rufus King, who concocted this loose and lamentable thing, had pictures in mind when they did the deed. Even at that, with the title, it will take a lot of mental canoodling to land the screen values in "Murder at the Vanities" heads up.

It's "Broadway" and "The Phantom of the Opera" combined and ruined. There is a series of baffling murders going on on the stage, off stage and up in the wings, while the performance of the Vanities is going on.

During a dancing rehearsal a dead girl is lowered from the top of the stage. Murdered. No one knows her. She is dressed for a Vanities part.

Arrives Inspector James Rennie, and the whole cast is made prisoner in Earl Carroll's cathedral.

More murders happen while the night performance is going on. Bela Lugosi walks around the stage in a Lexington Avenue Swami's costume. He has a dagger that he uses every once in a while in a black-out. Women scream while men murmur Tosh!

Finally the inspector runs down the murderer—a crazy wardrobe mistress. Every one is suspected, there is a gag-man in the shape of a hungry and bawdy-tongued assistant stage-manager, and plenty of room for songs, dances and roller-skating for the artistes of Hollywood.

THE SELL-OUT

The attraction about the radio-story picture is that it allows some crooner—Bing or otherwise—to muscle in on the show. For that reason these pictures are just at present, so I'm told, going b. o. attractions, often as second fiddle on the program.

"The Sell-Out," by Albert G. Miller, is going to make good screen stuff. There are comedy and gangster angles played around the new beer-advertising ballyhoo. Here's foothold for some brand-new air-spoofing.

Gates Advertising Agency is on the skids. Widow, of the old Mrs. Grundy generation, who is head of the agency, takes over the Stiltz beer account. Consternation among the conservative employees.

Big Mike Angelo, who still runs the beer game in the State, busts in and threatens things. Now the comedy switch. Emily Burke, Big Idea girl, vamps Mike out of gun-play and "why not, Mike, become a legal racketeer—radio advertising!"

You could have slain Mike, but he's on. He buys a controlling interest in the radio company and does business with a rod on his desk—even holding a gun over the radio reviewers.

Now there blossom some more chortling angles. There is the love-approach between tough Mike and the morally up-stage widow. And when Mike learns that she has sold 49 per cent of the stock to Frogface Matz, a brand-new kind of racketeer, there are some real loud haw-haws. Hunky-dory finis.

As a play, "The Sell-Out" went boom because of too much rush-work on it. But it is obviously a picture product.

Picture value, 75 per cent.

CRUCIBLE

Another prison story, by Hubert Connelly, and as a play it is about the crudest melodrama that I ever looked in on. But if the jail-break and pop-gun crime picture is still on its feet, "Crucible," properly reshuffled, will produce some thrilling and breath-catching moments.

The set-up is in the Tombs. There is a phantom figure known as the Blight, who is the organizer of the jail-break.

Tom Deering, an innocent kid, is convicted of murder. He's in love with Rosemary Adair (shades of Harry Miner!).

Anyhow, the kid is freed, and his brother Danny shoots the Blight in Rosemary's apartment.

"Crucible's" weakness is its conventionality.

SOME SIGN; INDEPENDENTS PROTEST

is yet to be solved—and, if current expressions from Washington are an index,that they will not be solved without some strong suggestions from the immediate vicinity of the White House.

The motion picture, as has been pointed out by Motion Picture Herald before, is recognized by President Roosevelt as a most important medium to the people of these slightly United States. What it says and how it says it assumes, therefore, something more of importance in the national life than the mere function of amusement.

Meanwhile there was great importance in the address of General Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, before the American Federation of Labor in Washington, variously reported by radio and the press Tuesday night, in which he stepped out with great candor and remarked that it was the present plan and view that the country was to be run by neither labor nor capital but by the whole people for the whole people, with the government operating as a governor and set of timing gears controlling the whole machine—to keep business from racing its motors, and to keep it from stopping on dead centers.

WASHINGTON SEES CODE GOING TO JOHNSON

by FRANCIS L. BURT
Washington Correspondent

With completion of a second revision of Sol Rosenblatt's code for the film industry, late Tuesday, film men in Washington and National Recovery Administration officials were hopeful that within a few days the agreement will be sent to General Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, and thence to the White House for approval by President Roosevelt.

With the exception of the membership of the code authority—to be named after the code has been approved by General Johnson—the agreement now appears to contain its full quota of provisions and revisions, including those relating to agents and actors, which have been the subject of controversy and speculation for the past two weeks.

However, no claim is made by Deputy Rosenblatt, in charge of amusement codes, that the second revision is in the form in which it will finally be approved. Not only are there possibilities that further conferences with various groups in the industry may lead to changes, but the agreement has yet to run the gauntlet of the several divisions of the recovery administration—the legal division, the labor advisory board, industrial advisory board and the consumers' advisory board—any one or more of which may insist upon amendments.

The latest edition, however, has met with the approval of many, it was disclosed by Mr. Rosenblatt, and several in the industry already have signed—in escrow, as it were—with the provision that their signature shall apply to the approved code if not substantially changed. Mr. Rosenblatt refused to divulge the names.

There are others who probably will not sign, but their action will not in any way affect its operation, since the agreement will apply to all members of the industry when signed by the President. The final draft would become effective ten days following affixing of the President's signature.

The revising into the new draft climaxed a week of steady effort by Mr. Rosenblatt to bring into line all factions. Until almost the last minute, the proposal for establishing maximum actors' salaries was "in the air," also many conferences were going on with respect to agents.

The question of regulating socalled "excessive" star salaries was by far the outstanding feature of the week. Although it was certain there was no provision in the National Recovery Act, nor any precedent in codes already approved, which would permit imposition of maximums upon salaries, there were many rumors that the President had demanded drastic cuts in the pay of headliners and that the code would set up a board to pass on salaries.

Board on Salaries Not included in Draft

President Roosevelt's interest in actors' salaries and his desire that a study be made by the NRA to determine whether directors and stars, especially child actors, were being paid excessive salaries, was admitted late Wednesday at the White House.

The question of salaries has been variously rumored in Washington to have been raised during the conference between the President and Mr. Rosenblatt two weeks ago, but the latter steadily has refused to confirm or deny the report.

Establishment of a board to pass on actors' salaries is said to have been proposed by the producers and was the subject of a number of conferences between Mr. Rosenblatt and representatives of the industry but was not included in the revised code completed this week..

It was said Wednesday that Mr. Rosenblatt had been asked to investigate whether socalled child stars are receiving "unconscionable" salaries, but the impression on Capitol Hill is that the survey will cover the whole question of salaries—including actors' salaries generally and those paid to directors.

However, there is no salary limitation provision in the code but, on the contrary, under its provisions, actors will be able to auction themselves off under a provision that if a producer makes any offer for the services of any employee of another producer he must notify the employing producer to that effect, stating the full terms of the offer, and the employing producer is to have an opportunity to negotiate with the actor.

The same provisions call for the "blacklisting" of any employee who refuses without just cause to perform his obligations under any contract of employment.

Of outstanding interest to exhibitors was the decision to continue the provision which decrees that wages of the various types of employees having organizations shall be those prevailing on Aug. 23, 1933. The exhibitors had asked for the wage levels of July 1, when cuts were in effect, wages having been restored to former levels in most localities by Aug. 23.

NRA Goes Sleuthing On Telegrams of Protest

Coincident with the release of the revised code, Mr. Rosenblatt disclosed that a little detective work had been indulged in by the NRA administration to determine the origin of a large number of telegrams which had been received at the White House and by General Johnson, all very similar in nature.

As a result of the investigation, the deputy administrator displayed copies of "instructions" sent out by New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania groups of Allied, recommending that all theatre owners with "favorable contacts" of any kind should have such connections send telegrams direct to the White House. Exhibitors were to have employees send wires to the effect that if the code were approved they would be out of work and subjected to public charity. Business men were to wire that the crushing of the theatres would cause untold loss. Women's clubs and civic organizations were to wire protests demanding incorporation of provisions of morality.

The theatre owners were to send a second wire to General Johnson opposing the code. A quota of 5,000 telegrams from New Jersey alone was set by the organization, with each theatre owner to be responsible for from 35 to 55 or more, depending upon the size of his community. If 100,000 telegrams were sent to the White House, it was declared, "it would do the job" of defeating the code.

Exhibitors were told that if those whom they approached would not pay the expense of the wires, they were to do so themselves. Appended was a list of arguments to be used in the telegrams with a footnote that they could be so used "but change the words."

It was admitted at the White House Wednesday that a number of protests against the code have been received from independent producers and exhibitors and it was indicated that a thorough study of the situation is to be made as result of complaints from the West Coast.

A scathing criticism of Mr. Rosenblatt's de-

COMMISSION WILL STUDY VIOLATIONS

The Federal Trade Commission, in keeping with its present scope of operation, will undertake the study and clearance of violations under the code, according to reports from Washington Tuesday. It is understood the National Recovery Administration's plan is to provide that violations are to be turned over to the Department of Justice for action, insofar as the commission has no enforcement powers.

PLEDGED TO MEDIATE LABOR DISPUTES

nunciation Tuesday of alleged propaganda to flood the White House with telegrams of protest from exhibitors, theatre employers, business men and others, was issued Wednesday at Washington by Abram F. Myers, general counsel for Allied States.

Asserting that the theatre owners had a right to register their protests in any way they saw fit, Mr. Myers declared Mr. Rosenblatt's statements to have been unwarranted and demanded that he be given until Friday to complete his independent analysis of the new code and file his views. It was indicated that if Allied finds the new code seriously adverse to exhibitors another public hearing will be asked.

Rosenblatt Will Hold Additional Meetings

Mr. Rosenblatt declared Tuesday that while approximately 85 per cent of the code had been agreed upon and disposed of, the remaining 15 per cent would necessitate some additional meetings. He declined to designate the groups involved, but it is to be assumed that the "insurgent" groups are among those which will rate some attention. They will not be permitted to delay proceedings, the deputy administrator said. Another group with whom he will hold additional meetings is the exhibitor committee on labor, the first one of which got under way Wednesday morning.

In explaining why the question of the "right to buy" was omitted from the code, Mr. Rosenblatt cited as an example the situation where a picture is sold on a 30 per cent basis, and a small theatre, charging 10 cents, could not possibly make as much money as the theatre charging 50 cents. "Therefore," he asked, "where would the distributor get off on such a basis?" He also said that no two theatremen in Washington at any time had been able to agree as to how any "right to buy" arrangement would work in a specific case.

Whether the various insurgent groups of independent producers, distributors and exhibitors would have ready this week their previously promised analysis of the code appeared questionable.

There were but a few eliminations made during the week in the first Rosenblatt draft presented to the industry October 4.

In Section I, pertaining to labor other than actors, musicians were eliminated from classification, because of "the professional character of their employment." Therefore, the minimum wages and maximum hours of musicians will continue to be governed by existing agreements with exhibitors.

Most Changes Only To Clarify Meaning

The majority of changes appearing in Mr. Rosenblatt's second draft deal with revised phraseology, for purposes of clarification, and do not alter the original meanings. Then, too, original numerical and alphabetical identification markings on code clauses and sections appear differently in the new code, naturally, because of the inclusion of new articles.

At the very beginning, in Article I ("Definitions"), the new code has practically nothing which did not appear in the first draft. One addition defined the term "Administrator," which shall be deemed to mean the National Recovery Administrator.

Added to the list of crafts which would be governed by the code were: operating engineers, ornamental iron workers, structural steel workers (all in production), and billposters.

Two clauses were added in order to place "free-lance" players in Hollywood under the code. In the first draft, no mention of free-lancers had been made. The new section would undertake to provide for rules and regulations to be binding upon all producers with respect to "free-lance" players, and appoint a committee representing employers and "free-lance" players, to effectuate the purposes and terms of any provisions made for such players, and to supervise the same, receive and pass on complaints and grievances.

The committee, under the supervision of the Code Authority, shall make full investigation with respect to the working conditions of "free-lance" players.

One of the most important additions to the labor provisions of the code, as it affects theatre labor and exhibitors, was a new clause relating to disputes arising between employees and employers in exhibition. Both parties pledge themselves to attempt to mediate all such disputes.

Two important points of issue which had been settled since Mr. Rosenblatt presented his original code last week were the producers' original clauses, Article 9 (governing the activities of agents in Hollywood), and Article 10, which would control relations of producer and stars and other creative workers. Both were finally made a part of the code, and constitute probably the most important additions to the new document. These clauses become a part of the unfair trade practices in the producers' section. Highlights of both articles follow.

Producers would be prevented from doing business with any agent who would be adjudged by the Code Authority as

(1) Having given, offered or promised [illegible] to any employee to influence the action of such employee in relation to the business of the producer.
(2) Having alienated, or attempted to alienate, any employee under contract.
(3) Making false representations to a producer in negotiations.
(4) Having violated or evaded, or attempted to violate or evade Part 5 of Article V of the code. (Relating to activities between stars and producers.)

The article would require agents to be licensed under the Code Authority, which license could be revoked, after a hearing, for violations.

Producers, or their employees, may hold or secure an interest in the business of an agent, only when they notify the Code Authority accordingly. The Code Authority may require public disclosure of the fact. All acts, decisions and recommendations of the Code Authority would be under supervision of the Administrator.

Clause Governing Actor-Producer Relations

This clause, over which there has been considerable squabbling in producer and Academy ranks, would prohibit producers, secretly or otherwise, from:

(1) Enticing or alienating an employee of any other producer, or to advise such employee to do anything in conflict with employee's contractual obligation.
(2) Fomenting dissension, discord or strife between any employee and his employer with the effect of securing employee's release, or a change in contractual terms.
(3) Negotiating or offering negotiatings to any contract employee prior to 30 days of contract expiration.

When a producer offers employment to any employee under any of three given classifications he must make known his intentions, listing his terms, to the employing producer, and the new negotiations must not be concluded until the employing producer has had an opportunity to negotiate with such employee for his continued services. However, the employee shall have a free choice as to which offer he will accept.

The post of Registrar is set up to record all notices, documents and other data which may be used in these negotiations.

Blacklisting for Violators

Contract employees who are found to have refused to perform their contractual obligations would be "blacklisted" for such period of time as designated by the Code Authority, and any producer disregarding such blacklisting would be violating the fair trade practices. Also, distributors would not be permitted to distribute, nor exhibitors to show, pictures of blacklisted stars made during the period which the employee is on the black list. All parties would receive a hearing before a ruling would be made, and a further hearing could be held by the Administrator.

Producers deliberately violating provisions of this clause could be subject to such restrictions, prohibitions or conditions as the Administrator may deem proper.

The Registrar shall be appointed and removed by the Code Authority, at will, and any act or decision of the Registrar shall be subject to review, reversal or modification by the Code Authority.

Cartoon Producers Covered in New Clause

Trade practices to govern the activities of cartoon producers come under another new clause of producers' unfair trade practices.

Another code change, under unfair practices in distribution, eliminates newsreels in rules governing the booking of shorts with features.

Permission to include "riders" in exhibition contracts is seen in a revised clause which would permit a distributor to require specific playdates where such is provided for, specifically, in the contract.

An entirely new clause in distributors' trade practices compels their exchanges to abide by fire regulations promulgated by the Code Authority.

Under exhibitor-distributor practices, there has been inserted a new clause which will govern cancellation privileges.

There were other changes, all of a minor nature, in the trade practice sections governing both distributors and exhibitors.

DEMOUNTABLE THEATRE PATENTED IN EAST

Demountable theatres, constructed of interchangeable steel beams, with from 278 to 600 seats each, have been patented by Pix Theatres Corporation, newly organized under New York state laws. Frank R. Wilson, formerly vice-president of Principal Distributing Corporation, and John S. Clarke, Jr., are the sponsors.

Their plan, they say, makes possible the construction of theatres at less than $50 a seat, which is said to be less than half the cost of regular permanent theatres. Each house will weigh approximately 60 tons, including seats, furnishings and decorations, and will be equipped to project standard width films.

The sponsors point out that if such a demountable house does not pay in one situation, it can easily be dismantled and set up in another.

Mr. Wilson and Mr. Clarke are said to be drawing plans for theatres having more than a 600-seat capacity, but the immediate plan is to be confined to three classes of theatres, one seating less than 300, a second approximately 450, and the third about 600.

MEXICO'S OWN FILMS AROUSE CENSORS' IRE

Charge Local Picture Distorts Revolution; Dispels the Idea That the System Is Aimed Solely at Foreign Product

by JAMES LOCKHART
Mexico City Correspondent

It seems that those folk were in error who thought that motion picture censorship in Mexico is directed entirely at foreign products as a means of establishing high hurdles for films from abroad to surmount in an endeavor to protect and even coddle the struggling national production industry. True, since film censorship started in this country several years ago, foreign pictures constituted practically all the targets for thumbs down action taken by the official reviewers. But, after all, it has been only a few pictures that have failed to make the grade down here, as far as the federal and states governments' censors are concerned. It is only fair to say that those pictures which were given the ban had things in them that were offensive to public dignity, and so on, this side of the border. All in all, Mexican censors are quite reasonable.

Banned Film Wholly Native

Now, for the first time since official censoring of pictures was begun in Mexico, a made-in-the-Republic picture, dealing with a tragic episode of this land's history, spoken entirely in Spanish, written by a Mexican, directed by another, photographed by still another, acted by native players, in fact, a 100 per cent national production, has been ordered barred. This action was taken against "El Prisoniero 13" ("Prisoner No. 13"), done by National Motion Picture Production Company, an all-Mexican enterprise which began operations at studios in Mexico City about two years ago and has a number of sound features and shorts to its credit. This picture, the theme of which deals with episodes of the dark days of 1915, when Pancho Villa was ravishing the land and old General Huerta seized the presidential chair, was ordered withdrawn by order of Provisional President General Abelardo L. Rodriguez.

Action Causes Surprise

The action caused much surprise in Mexican film circles and on the part of the public as well. Everybody wants to know how come that a national picture, made entirely in Mexico and dealing with a Mexican historic episode, should arouse official ire. It was explained officially that numerous complaints about various scenes in the picture, which, it is alleged, distorted the true Mexican revolutionary spirit and gave a warped impression of the ideals of the Mexican Revolution, the great social movement that began in 1910, had been made to the chief executive by government officials and private individuals who had viewed the production.

The producing company's officials conferred with high federal government officers in an endeavor to prevent their output from becoming a total loss. The result of these discussions was that the government officers agreed to the company's suggestion that it would eliminate scenes which had aroused objections. So the producers are now busy clipping and retaking about 20 per cent of the scenes in the film, a work which it is estimated will tack around another $7,000 onto the production costs. In Mexico City government circles they are saying that it would be profitable for producers to become conversant with all Mexican history.

Poland Interested in Product

What Mexico is doing in the way of making pictures has inspired active interest in parts far removed from this land, geographically as well as in a linguistic sense. News that made-in-Mexico pictures are finding a ready acceptance in Latin America or Spain or are being given more than a look immediately north of the Rio Grande is something in itself. But now the ministry of foreign relations announces that the Mexican charge d'affaires in Warsaw has reported that such made-in-Mexico pictures as talking dramas and comedies, and scenic, travel, folklore shorts with sound and music, have attracted much attention in Poland, so much so that Solfilm, an important producing and distributing enterprise of the Polish capital, has asked him to arrange for acquiring such productions for exhibition in Warsaw and all the larger cities of that country.

The Ministry has passed along this good news to the native producers and it has not made them cry.

Two Portland Exchanges Open

National Film Exchanges have opened in Portland and Seattle, distributing old Tiffany and other films in Washington and Oregon. Northwest Film Exchange, also in Portland, will distribute in Oregon Pathe reissues, including "Red Hot Rhythm," "Sailor's Holiday" and others.

Loew's Takes Buffalo House

Loew's, Inc., will resume operation of the Great Lakes theatre in Buffalo when it reopens, expected in the fall. The lease was assumed late in 1931 by the Shea Operating Company, and now reverts to Loew's.

Trans-Lux Reaches Canada

Trans-Lux theatres are expected to invade Canada in the near future, under the direction of a Canadian branch of the company now being formed in Toronto. Theatres will be in Toronto, Montreal and other centers.

Lenehan with National Screen

George Lenehan, former Pathe and RKO district manager, has been appointed representative of National Screen Service in the Pittsburgh territory. He succeeds Walter Freudenberger, resigned.

Coast Sees New Camera Truck

At the invitation of Majestic Pictures, technicians from 14 Hollywood studios attended a demonstration of a new type of camera truck developed by Louis Meyers, technical expert for Phil Goldstein, Majestic's production head.

The camera head is capable of being raised by hydraulic pressure to required heights and can also be dropped down absolutely level with the floor of the stage, it was pointed out. This movement is on a specially constructed triangular casting which weighs approximately a quarter of a ton and a steady movement is obtained through the use of a specially patented handle valve which can be operated by the camera man, according to Majestic.

The entire perambulator and camera head weighs over a ton and is moved upon specially constructed duraluminum rails. The great weight of the dolly is carried upon rubber tires and the movement of the carriage upon these rails represents an improvement in camera steadiness, it was said. Various sets of these have been constructed, some circulate and some semi-circulate so that unique camera effects and moving shots can be secured. Dismounted from the rails, the perambulator may be moved upon its rubber tires for use as a standard dolly. Parts of this new mechanism are patented with rights being held by Majectic Pictures. Through the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences two of the large studios have asked for permission to reproduce th' new dolly.

Tilford's Cinema Classics To Make Several Series

Walter Tilford, former owner of the Tilford studios in New York, heads Cinema Classics, Inc., which is to make several series of short subjects. The first series will be 12 featurettes, "The Beautiful Sin," with William Nigh directing. Following will be a group of musical shorts with screen and radio names.

"GAINED MUCH", SAYS KUYKENDALL

by ED KUYKENDALL
President, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America

Because there are so many varied and different opinions as to what the proposed first revision of the Code as submitted by Mr. Rosenblatt, does and does not do, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America feel that the exhibitors of this country are entitled to a fair and impartial analysis of what has been accomplished up to now, holding in mind that as we issue this statement further revisions of the proposed Code are being made.

The MPTOA up to the present time have been working on the formulation of a Code that would be fair and impartial to all interests alike. We have been ever mindful that we are representing thousands of small theatre owners who are unable to represent themselves at these Code hearings and we are trying, with every bit of energy in our beings, to protect them. We feel that the theatre owners are entitled to every consideration in the way of fair trade practices and in the correction of the evils and abuses that have so long beset our industry.

Contrary to all of the wild rumors and reports that "we have given up everything and gained nothing," we wish to say to the theatre owners throughout this country that we have given up nothing, nothing we ever had and, quite to the contrary, have gained much that we never had. So, with these thoughts in mind, we are proud to point out to the theatre owners of America what we have gained up to this point, asking that you keep in mind that we are still contending for those things that we think are constructive and will be most helpful to the motion picture industry as a whole—because no one phase of this industry can survive without the rest of it functioning:

1. SELF REGULATION

The greatest single achievement in the whole Code has been the recognition of the first principle laid down by the MPTOA that there must be a place for every man with a problem to go. We have steadfastly maintained if there is to be a code of fair competition it must provide a method for correcting the long existing evils and abuses in this industry as they have existed and arise. In this fight we have been victorious. Under the new system of Boards and the National Code Authority there is a place for every wrong to be righted and where every man, large or small, can find relief from unjust discriminations.

These boards are four in number and cover every field of exhibitor activities.

(a) Zoning and Clearance Boards, to correct all abuses which may come up from unfair discrimination and excessive protection.

(b) Grievance Boards, to correct the evils of overbuying, unfair withholding of product and playdates, unfair competition between theatres and any other justifiable complaint of a wrong suffered or injustice done.

(c) Arbitration Boards, to adjudicate all complaints arising under contract.

(d) Labor Boards, for the arbitration of all disputes arising between employers and employees with the power to forbid lock-outs, strikes and sabotage.

(e) The Code Authority, a National Board with unlimited powers and government representation to review the findings of any of the preceding local boards on appeal. To initiate investigations of its own and to enforce the provisions of this code fairly and impartially.

Under this system of self-regulation we feel that 90 per cent of the problems can be fairly dealt with.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, through their representatives in the code activities, "have given up nothing and quite to the contrary have gained much" for "thousands of small theatre owners" whom the MPTOA is "trying to protect," said Ed. Kuykendall, president, this week in the accompanying analysis of Sol. A. Rosenblatt's First Revision of the Industry Code.

2. LABOR

We have successfully opposed the demands of labor for two men in the booth. We have successfully opposed their demands for A. F. of L. intervention in non-union situations.

3. UNIFORM STANDARD CONTRACT

An understandable contract of identical and uniform provisions binding on all distributors alike, approved and enforced by Government authority.

4. DEFINITE AVAILABILITY AND FORCED RELEASE

Whereby protection periods run automatically against prior runs to insure availability of product within a given time to the subsequent run, thereby preventing the arbitrary withholding of product by the prior run.

5. ELIMINATIONS

A flat elimination of 10 per cent of product where the average price per picture is $250 or less on group license.

6. DESIGNATED PLAYDATES

On a given day of the week cannot be arbitrarily forced by the exchange without the consent of the exhibitor at the time of contract, and even where so contracted the designated date may be changed if unsuitable to exhibitor's patronage on the designated date.

7. TYING SHORTS WITH FEATURES

Sharp restrictions designed to prevent forced buying of more shorts than exhibitor requires.

8. FORCED BOOKING OF SHORTS WITH FEATURES OR VICE VERSA

This practice is outlawed where optional arbitration clause is agreed to by exhibitor.

9. OVERBUYING

Prevented where done for the purpose of depriving competitor of product.

10. SUBSTITUTIONS

Definitely defined with acceptance optional with exhibitor.

11. POSTER EXCHANGES

We have successfully opposed the demands of distributors to eliminate poster exchanges.

12. INTIMIDATION AND COERCION

By threats of competition to induce exhibitor to sign a contract, are prohibited.

13. DISTRIBUTORS' EMPLOYEES

Prohibited from using positions to interfere with competitive buying where such employee has interest direct or indirect in competing theatre.

14. NON THEATRICALS

Prevented where unfair competition to established theatre.

15. BOX OFFICE RECEIPTS

Confidential information and their divulgence by a distributor or agent is prohibited.

16. PRICE ADJUSTMENT

Provided for where contract is bought on an average price per picture and all pictures not delivered.

17. COMPULSORY IDENTIFICATION

All pictures must be designated by reference to star, director, author or descriptive synopsis on contract.

18. SELECTIVE CONTRACTS

Notice of selection or rejection must be given within twenty-one (21) days of date of availability, thus speeding up availability for subsequent runs.

19. UNFAIR COMPETITION

Rebates, script books, lotteries, coupons, throw-aways, two-for-ones and other similar methods of unfairly reducing admission prices are prohibited.

20. PREMIUMS

Prohibited by vote of 75 per cent of theatres in a given clearance zone.

21. INTERFERENCE WITH POSSESSION

Interference with negotiations or peaceful possession of a theatre by one exhibitor over another is prohibited.

22. INDUCEMENTS TO BREACH CONTRACTS

Or to procure unfair advantages or to deprive another of product are prohibited.

23. EXHIBITOR AS DISTRIBUTOR'S AGENT

Under instructions to forward film, the exhibitor for this purpose acts as the distributor's agent.

24. DUAL FEATURES

And other similar matters. The MPTOA has always maintained that these are matters for local determination, and it has never sought to dictate to its units their policies. We feel that conditions throughout the country are so varied that this, and similar problems, should be left to local determination.

B. I. P. Plans Drive On American Market

British International Pictures has decided to produce 15 instead of 25 pictures annually at a total cost of $5,000,000, according to Arthur Dent, B. I. P. official, in New York last week. The budget will be the same for the 15 as for the 25, he indicated. The American market is being taken seriously by the company, Mr. Dent said.

The executive noted two factors, adverse to the success of English films here, which he considers have been overcome. The first is the English accent, the other the lack of stars. He brought with him several completed films, featuring American players.

New Series for Jack Pearl

Jack Pearl, the "Baron Munchausen" of the radio, who has just completed MGM's "Meet the Baron" in Hollywood, began a new series of broadcasts over NBC network this week. He is working on screen anecdotes and gags with Cliff Hall, the "Sharlee" of the radio, and Billy K. Wells, author of their material.

MERIAN C. COOPER, EXECUTIVE PRODUCER

TEXT OF ACTORS' GUILD CONTRACT

a bitter fight in Hollywood to enroll screen players. Equity has variously called the Academy a "company union."

Meanwhile, current dissatisfaction of the actor members of the Academy started to appear on the surface last March and April following the famous 25 and 50 per cent industry-wide salary cut. In order to appease this mild revolt, which resulted in the abdication of Conrad Nagel as president, Academy factors set about during the summer to strike a "new deal" for the creative workers by shaping a program devoid of producer influence. This program was adopted by the membership in August and J. T. Reed was elected president, with all workers' branches supposedly getting a dominating voice in the organization's management and operations.

Three Forms of Guild Membership

The official application for membership in the Screen Actors Guild, Inc., provides for one of three forms of member participation in the organization, namely: Class A, entrance fee, $25; Class B, fee, $10; Class C, fee, $10. Accompanying each application is a printed contract, all applicants must sign. The contract reads as follows:

Whereas, the entire motion picture industry is and has been in a state of uncertainty and transition, and those engaged in the creation of pictures can exert no helpful influence for the betterment of the business without unity of action; and

Whereas, actors are among the creators of motion pictures; and

Whereas, better working conditions for actors can only be secured by unified action among them,

Now, Therefore, the members of the Screen Actors Guild, Inc., hereinafter sometimes called the "Guild," do agree with the Guild and with each other member of the Guild, as follows:

(1) If the Guild hereafter shall adopt a Code for Actors, hereinafter sometimes called the "Code," in the manner hereinafter set forth, no member shall enter into any contract of employment or do any work as a motion picture actor, directly or indirectly, which does not conform to such Code. Neither the Code nor any amendment thereof shall apply to any contract existing before the adoption of the Code or such amendment, respectively, or to any work done or to be done in the performance thereof. Such Code may contain a provision or provisions that no member not bound by existing contract shall enter into any contract of employment or do any work as a motion picture actor, directly or indirectly, for any producer or other person or corporation employing motion picture actors who shall refuse to abide by the Code and/or insert its provisions into all contracts entered into with motion picture actors, and that no member during the progress of a vote as to whether or not to declare a producer or other person or corporation employing motion picture actors unfair and in violation of the Code shall enter into any contract of employment obligating him to do any work directly or indirectly for such producer, person or corporation, if such producer, person, or corporation is by such vote declared unfair and in violation of the Code. No producer or other person or corporation employing motion picture actors shall be declared unfair in violation of the Code, unless and until the Board of Directors shall submit the question to the membership either at a meeting duly called for that purpose or by written mail vote with a time limited by the Board of Directors for voting thereon, and three-fourths of those voting thereon shall vote in favor of the proposition. Whether said vote is by mail or at a meeting, votes must be in writing. Only Class A members shall have the right to vote.

Three-fourths Vote Necessary

(2) Any article of the Code shall be submitted to the written vote of the membership and a time limited by the Board of Directors for voting thereon, and shall be adopted upon the written affirmative vote of three-fourths of those voting thereon. Only Class A members shall have the right to vote. The Code, or any provision or article thereof, may be repealed or amended in like manner. Upon the adoption of the Code, or any amendment thereto, the Board of Directors shall cause to be mailed to the last known address of each of the members, or to such address as appears on the records of the Guild, a copy of such Code, Article, provision, or amendment, and notice of its adoption. Within five days thereafter such Code, Article, provision, or amendment, shall be in effect for all purposes, but any defect in the giving of notice shall be cured by proof of actual notice to any person violating this contract and claiming a defect in the notice.

(3) The exclusive purpose of the Code shall be to establish rules and regulations and other provisions concerning compensation and working conditions of actors in the motion picture industry, but said Code may also contain provisions for cooperation with other employees in the industry. Such Code shall contain no provisions establishing any maximum rate of compensation. Without in any wise limiting the generality of the foregoing, such Code may contain a provision that no member not bound by existing contract shall enter into any contract of employment or do any work as a motion picture actor directly or indirectly for any producer or other person or corporation employing motion picture actors who after a certain date employs non-members and/or members who have violated this contract and a provision that no member not bound by existing contract shall enter into any contract of employment obligating him to do any work directly or indirectly as a motion picture actor in any picture in which a non-member works as an actor, and a provision dictating the atitude and position of the members to any attempt to obtain any general abrogation or modification of the provisions affecting compensation in then existing contracts. Such Code when adopted shall be a part of this contract.

Remedies for Violations

(4) Upon the violation of this contract by any member, the member agrees that the following remedies shall be available against him:

(a) The Board of Directors, after giving the member a hearing by the Board as is provided in Article IX of the By-Laws of the Guild may submit to the Class A membership in the same manner as is set forth in paragraph (1) of this contract the question as to whether the member shall be declared in violation of the contract and this remedy invoked against him. If three-fourths of those voting decide to invoke this remedy, the Board shall notify the members, and thereafter, until otherwise notified by the Board, no member not bound by existing contract shall enter into any contract of employment with any producer or other person or corporation employing motion picture actors, which directly or indirectly obligates the member to work in any motion picture as an actor in which the member declared in violation of the contract also works, and every member not bound by existing contract shall refuse to work in any motion picture as an actor in which the member declared in violation of the contract also works. In the submission to the members, the Board of Directors shall summarize its finding as to the facts. Since the question must be submitted to a vote of the Class A membership, the accused member shall not have the right to appeal to the members as is provided in Article IX of the By-Laws.

(b) Expulsion of the member from the Guild upon order of the Board of Directors of the Guild after proceedings had in accordance with the By-Laws of the Guild.

Liability for Liquidated Damages

(c) Liability of the member hereunder for liquidated damages on the contingency and in the amount hereinafter specified. In this behalf it is agreed that from the nature of the case, it would be impracticable and extremely difficult to fix the actual damage resulting from a breach hereof. If a member, not bound by existing contract, after a producer or other person or corporation employing motion picture actors has been declared unfair and in violation of the Code, or during the progress of a vote to determine the question, if the Code provides he shall not contract for his services as a motion picture actor during such vote, contracts with such producer, person, or corporation, for his services as a motion picture actor during the progress of the vote or after a vote in favor of declaring such producer, person, or corporation unfair and in violation of the Code, or works for such producer, person, or corporation after such vote so declaring, directly or indirectly, as a motion picture actor, then such member shall be liable in liquidated damages to the Guild for all compensation of such member under such contract or for such work and hereby agrees not to assign such compensation or any part thereof to any person or corporation.

(d) A fine on the member in a sum up to $1,000 upon order of the board of directors of the Guild, after proceedings had in accordance with the By-Laws of the Guild.

(e) Injunctive relief.

(f) Any other remedy given by law or equity.

Cumulative Remedies

Each and all of the foregoing remedies shall be cumulative and may be enforced concurrently or consecutively, and no choice of remedy shall bar the pursuit of another and different remedy. In any action hereunder the Guild shall recover in the same action its costs and reasonable attorney's fees in said action.

(5) This agreement may be signed by any member by executing a membership application expressly assenting to this contract. All such counterpart originals shall be the agreement. One original of this contract shall be executed by the Guild. This contract is not only between the Guild and its members, but between each and all of the members jointly and severally with each other. Suit may be brought under this agreement against any member by the Guild, or by any other member, or members, provided such member, or members have obtained the written consent of the Guild thereto. No resignation or expulsion from the Guild or suspension therefrom or cessation of membership therein by operation of law or the provisions of the By-Laws, or otherwise, shall release the member from the provisions hereof, and the term "member" as used herein and in the Code shall include him except that after resignation, suspension, expulsion or cessation, he shall have no vote, except that at the option of the Guild upon such resignation or suspension or expulsion or cessation of membership, or at any time thereafter, the Guild may, by written notice to the member, declare him no longer a party to this agreement. No waiver of any breach hereof shall release the member from any of the obligations hereof.

51% Consent for Cancellation

(6) This agreement may be cancelled by the written consent of the Guild and the written consent of 51% of the Class A members.

(7) No defect in the organization of the Guild as a corporation, or in procedural steps for the adoption or amendment of its By-Laws, or in election of its officers, or its board of directors shall be a defense to any action hereunder against any member. In any such action it only shall be necessary to prove (a) the execution of the contract by the member in the manner hereinbefore set forth, and (b) its breach. Prima Facie proof of any record fact such as the adoption of any provision of the Code, may be made by the production of the affidavit of the then acting Secretary of the Guild to such fact, such affidavit to be based upon inspection of the records of the Guild.

(8) In this agreement, whenever the context so requires, the masculine gender includes the feminine and/or neuter and the neuter gender includes the masculine and/or feminine, and the singular number includes the plural.

(9) If one or more of the provisions of this agreement shall be held to be void as in violation of existing law, the other provisions of this agreement shall be separable and shall be in full force and effect.

Dated at Los Angeles, California, this 8th day of July, 1933.

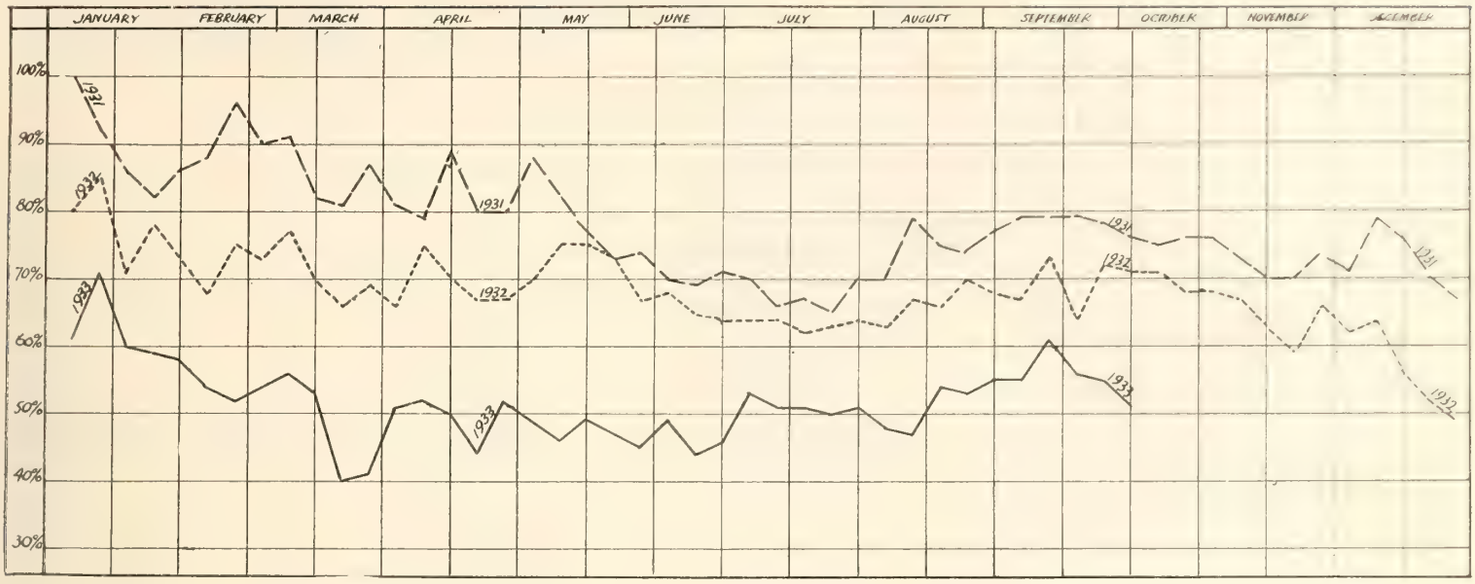
LIVING MUSIC DAY IN SAN FRANCISCO

Living Music Day, which originated in San Francisco as a boon to the use of musicians in theatres, held the spotlight in the Coast city last week more prominently than in previous years. The enlargement of orchestras and their use in theatres previously without them, featured the event. The palatial Fox theatre has Ted Fio-Rito and his orchestra on the stage indefinitely. The Orpheum has Rube Wolf acting as master of ceremonies and directing his band, and Walt Roesner has returned to the Warfield to handle an augmented group of musicians.

Schlaifer Heads Sales For Bryan Foy Product

L. J. Schlaifer, formerly general manager of distribution for Universal, has been signed for similar duties with Bryan Foy Studios, and will also have executive duties in production plans, with Lou Golder, Bryan Foy and Ben Stoloff, planning to release and distribute their own product.

Mr. Schlaifer and Mr. Golder went to Dallas last week to establish their first district office and had prints of the two current Foy productions, "Elysia" and "The $50,000 Beauty."



The chart, based on Motion Picture Herald's tabulation of box office grosses, indicates the changes in receipts from twelve key cities during the period from January 3, 1931, to September 30, 1933. The receipts for the week ended January 3, 1931, were taken as 100%. The cities used are Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Hollywood, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, New York, Oklahoma City, Omaha, Portland, and San Francisco.

Sales by Majors Half Completed

and Randforce, all of New York; Jansen-Von Herberg, Seattle; Lightman, Memphis; Poli, New Haven; Wometco, Florida, and Lichtman, Washington.

Paramount has completed all sales for the new season except in a few small situations, according to Robert Gillham, advertising and publicity executive. Without divulging any figures he said that "Paramount is 'way ahead of where it was last year at this time." Among circuits with whom deals have been closed, in addition to the various units of the far-flung Paramount theatre system, are Loew's, Fox West Coast and RKO. These deals all have been consummated since August 1, Mr. Gillham said. The majority of pictures of the company are being sold on a flat rental basis, some on percentage and guarantee.

Radio Sales Doubled

"Our selling at this time is more than 100 per cent better than it was last year at this time," according to the office of Jules Levy, general sales manager for RKO Radio. "Deals have been consummated a little faster this year chiefly because we started later than in 1932. A considerable number of new accounts has been sold and this includes practically all large circuits, with whom deals have either been closed or are now pending. A substantial portion of these are being sold on a percentage basis, according to the type of theatre, but we are now concentrating on smaller accounts. Terms are slightly higher, but then, business generally is so much better that terms which two years ago would have sounded ridiculous to the average exhibitor are now being accepted with little or no hesitation." Among circuits getting Radio product for 1933-34 are Balaban & Katz, of Chicago; Kincey-Wilby, and Saenger, on which a deal is pending.

Al Lichtman, vice-president in charge of United Artists sales, said Tuesday that while the company sells on a picture by picture basis, with virtually nothing sold in advance of production, the company's 1933-34 schedule is now 50 per cent sold. "We are extremely satisfied with the progress of our sales," Mr. Lichtman said, "and I feel confident in saying that this season will mark a very definite turning point for the better in this industry." Some of the company's product is sold on percentage, with a smaller proportion on a flat rental basis.

Although actual facts and figures could not be obtained from Fox sales executives, it was unofficially stated that the company's sales are far better at this time than a year ago. It was indicated that in round figures sales have even passed the 2,500 mark set by Warner Bros.

Exhibitors in the Middlewest are said to fear the effects of impending currency inflation, particularly the probable results on film rentals, according to reports from that sector. Those companies which have boosted their rentals, however, are said to have experienced less sales resistance than they expected, due almost entirely to improved business and a more optimistic outlook.

Major company sales managers this week described as "decidedly liberal" the straight 10 per cent cancellation privilege on pictures which average $250 or less, which was agreed upon for the industry code by company heads and the Administration last week in Washington. Approximately 39 pictures from the annual output of the eight major companies would be subject to cancellation under the provision, they estimated.

"The theatre accounts eligible for the cancellation privilege as defined are numerically large," said one sales executive. "They will run into the thousands and will include a substantial part of the distribution revenue.

Based on the major company product announcements the 10 per cent cancellation privilege would be apportioned over the eight companies as follows: Warner-First National, 6; Paramount, 6; Fox, 5; MGM, 5; RKO Radio, 5; Columbia, 4; Universal, 4, and United Artists, 4.

Throughout the summer in the Chicago territory the big sales issue rested in buying combines. While distributors had no hesitancy in announcing they were negotiating with individual exhibitors who formerly booked through combines, counter action in early September, before the public code hearings in Washington, took the form of a letter from Aaron Saperstein of Midwest Theatres, to local and downstate exhibitors, urging them to "stand pat" until the situation was defined. In the code submitted to the industry last week, and written by Sol A. Rosenblatt, deputy administrator under the NRA for the motion picture industry, the question of buying combines or their ultimate disposition was not mentioned.

RCA Seen Cutting Losses in Quarter

Noting some improvement in Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, the Wall Street Journal indicated last week that Radio Corporation, of which RKO is a subsidiary, probably will show another loss in the third quarter of the current year, but declared the loss will not be as great as that of the first six months, when the deficit, after charges including depreciation and amortization, amounted to $1,268,212.

The financial newspaper also pointed to the probability that the company may in the final quarter overcome a good portion of the loss so far recorded this year, if business continues to improve. Dividends on the RCA A and B shares will not be resumed until there is a return to a profitable operating basis, the Journal indicated, despite the strong current asset position.

There is promise of further betterment in the RKO situation, the paper said, noting increased theatre attendance over the country. Business at the two Radio City theatres has materially increased, with losses proportionately reduced. RCA has an investment of $16,365,000 in RKO, owns 64 per cent of its stock and consequent control, and has $9,000,000 of its debentures.

Film Theatres in Russia Show a Marked Increase

The Soviet Russian newspaper Voks recently published motion picture statistical data indicating the number of socalled "permanent" cinema theatres in the country for 1932 as 27,000. This total is indicated as the result of a steady increase from a total of 7,251 in the country in 1927. The totals for the following years were: 1928, 9,756; 1930, 21,985; 1931, 25,593. Films are exhibited in villages, according to the report, only during six months of the year, with an average of one performance each day, while in the cities three and four performances are given daily throughout the year.

BIOGRAPH STUDIOS BACK IN PRODUCTION

Pioneer Plant Being Modernized for Joint Operation by Consolidated and Biograph; RCA Photophone Equipped

Biograph Studios, Inc., one of the oldest studios in the eastern section of the country, will return to active production early in December, under a deal completed by Herbert J. Yates, president of Consolidated Film Industries, with RCA Photophone and Biograph. Independent producers in the East, therefore, will be presented with a modern studio, completely equipped by RCA and operated jointly by Consolidated and Biograph.

According to officials of RCA, that company has no financial connections with the deal, its only participation being the installation and maintenance of its high fidelity equipment, technical facilities, sound men and engineers. These RCA will control completely.

Yates to Continue Financing

A considerable amount of speculation has been heard the past fortnight as to who, or what interests, might be behind the projected deal. Officials on all sides have been busy denying their companies had financial interests in the matter, but it was intimated on more than one occasion that Mr. Yates himself was the chief financial backer. On Wednesday, after repeated attempts to reach him, Mr. Yates declined either to deny or corroborate the reports that he was contributing the bulk of the new studio's financing. He did say, however, that Consolidated would continue its financing of independent production and that much of it would be done in the Biograph studio.

The Biograph studio was built in 1910 and has been the scene of many of the early important productions and the home of equally important producers. It is located at 807 E. 175th Street, the Bronx, its original site.

The Biograph studio was the world's first great motion picture plant conceived and erected by engineers who had developed authority and leadership in film technique. It was built under the supervision of the late Jeremiah J. Kennedy, who had been put in charge of the affairs of the Biograph company by the creditor Empire Trust Company in 1907. The motion picture industry was then in the throes of a patent war between Thomas A. Edison and The American Mutoscope & Biograph Company, with border line skirmishes amidst independents, pirates and infringers. The picture makers dared make no investments in adequate plants and equipment until after the formation of the Patents Company in December of 1909, an achievement shared by Mr. Edison, H. N. Marvin and George Kleine, with the iron handed Mr. Kennedy in the role of leadership.

The big Biograph plant uptown, supplanting the old brownstone at 11 East Fourteenth street, was the first and most significant expression in stones and mortar of the coming of a new stability and a sense of organization into the world of the motion picture.

In passing it is to be recalled that it was this same Jeremiah J. Kennedy, consulting engineer, who decided that motion picture plants should no longer be known as factories but as studios and laboratories. He deemed this essential to interesting a class of employee above the level of "factory hand" intelligence.

Remodeling Under Way

Remodeling and general alterations, including sound-proofing of the studio's various stages, is already well under way, according to Robert H. Hammer, studio official. The plant will be completely ready for operations December 1, he said.

New contracts for Radio Pictures' print work, which will split the work between Consolidated and Pathe Exchange's laboratory at Bound Brook, N. J., went into effect October 1, with Pathe taking over the printing of Pathe News and the Van Beuren short subjects for RKO Radio, and Consolidated getting the remainder of the product. It is understood that the Pathe participation is, in part, a consideration for RKO indebtedness on obligations outstanding since the RKO-Pathe acquisition.

Exhibitors' Screen Service, trailer producer and distributor, was bought by National Screen Service last week and passed into its complete control on Thursday. National immediately began the job of actually taking over and servicing theatre accounts on the acquired company's books.

Mentone Subjects Aid Catholic Guild

The Catholic Actors' Guild of America has completed arrangements with Mentone Productions for a series of 13 two-reel variety and musical short subjects, which will be released through Universal. Proceeds will be used by the Guild for its sick and relief funds. The films will be shown over the country.

Guild members and other prominent stage, screen and radio personalities will appear in the subjects. The first of the series, titled "On the Air and Off," was written by Ballard MacDonald, who also did the lyrics, while the music was composed by Milton Schwarzwald. In the cast are Nick Lucas, screen and radio singer; Adelaide Hall, colored entertainer; the Bovard Sisters and Murray, trio; Hizi Koyke, Japanese prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera; Eddie Carr, mimic; Leon Belasco, orchestra leader; Oliver Wakefield, English comedian; Kelvin Keech, NBC announcer, and Sam Liebert, character actor.

Meyers Produces Comedies

Zion Meyers has been placed in charge of all comedy production at Columbia on the Coast. Rollie Asher will act as general assistant on story and production.

Zirn Loses Round In Paramount Case

The present status of Paramount Publix Corporation's original equity receivership, under fire of a motion brought by Samuel Zirn, attorney for minority stockholders, to have the original receivership declared invalid, was continued by the U. S. circuit court of appeals Monday and Mr. Zirn's motion was dismissed.

Mr. Zirn also has before the court of appeals a motion seeking to appeal a decision of last summer denying the removal of trustees Charles D. Hilles, Eugene W. Leake and Charles E. Richardson, and Henry K. Davis, federal referee in bankruptcy. A ruling is expected next week.

Motions for dismissal of the appeal on Monday were made by Godfrey Goldmark, representing the company and counsel associated with Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine. The motions were heard by Justices Manton, Hand and Chase. Mr. Zirn's appeal had been denied by Judge William Bondy in U. S. district court, New York, in June, and in handling down their dismissal Monday, the justices reserved decision on another appeal from an order of Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey directing payment by Paramount trustees of all fees connected with the equity receivership. Approximately $200,000, said to be principally in attorneys' allowances, is involved.

Asks Relief from Back Rents

Clarence E. Linz, of Dallas, Texas, receiver for Southern Enterprises, last week asked the federal court for relief from delinquent rents and for new leases on four first-runs in Texas, including the Melba, Dallas; Kirby and Metropolitan, Houston, and Worth, Fort Worth. When the receivership began in February, more than $500,000 in back rents was due on these houses, according to Mr. Linz. Since February he has paid rents at the rate of 10 per cent of the gross. The leases have from 12 to 18 years to run. He also asked the court to approve rental reductions on 15 houses.

On Thursday Referee Davis approved reorganization of three important units of Publix Enterprises, Inc., through a petition submitted by the trustee to form a new corporation for the theatres operated by A. H. Blank in Iowa and Nebraska, Karl Hoblitzelle in Texas, and Hunter Perry in Virginia and Tennessee.

In the reorganization of the Nebraska and Iowa situations, the trustee will receive a large sum in cash and will retain one-half of the newly issued common stock. Mr. Blank is to contribute $25,000 toward forming the corporation, and will receive a portion of the common stock. In addition, he is to manage the theatres under a special contract in which the trustee reserves the right to buy back the Blank stock under specified conditions.

Hoblitzelle Retained

Mr. Hoblitzelle will be retained as manager of the new corporation formed out of the Interstate Circuit of Dallas. He also will make a contribution of $25,000 to help form the new corporation and will receive one-half of the common stock. The trustee will retain the other 50 per cent.

Mr. Perry will manage the new corporation, to be formed out of three corporations, involving Virginia-Tennessee Corp., of which the bankrupt held all the common stock, Publix-Virginia and Publix-Newport News, of which the bankrupt held three-quarters of the common stock. Mr. Perry will manage the new corporation and will receive 49 per cent of the common stock, for which he will pay $10,000.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

A gesture unique in theatre advertising occurred in Boston last Saturday, when Weldon Pictures took $1,000 worth of local ad space to acknowledge a courtesy extended by Metro.

Weldon's "Damaged Lives" had played the Majestic two weeks and was to be followed then by "Dinner at Eight," but recognizing the volume of business, MGM was reluctant to take over the house until the independent could secure another. So Mr. Schenck's company voluntarily set back its opening a week. On Thursday "Damaged Lives" moves into the Park.

The Weldon ad, in announcing the switch, said: "Weldon Pictures trusts the Boston public will receive Metro's great picture, 'Dinner at Eight,' with the same generous acclaim accorded 'Damaged Lives.'"

It is one thing for an independent to thank a major company for a courtesy, but quite another to spend $1,000 to do it for the benefit of the competitor's box-office.

Park & Tilford inserted the ad, which listed some 65 wines and liquors, including everything from Oud's "Advocaat" to "Old Grand Dad" (16 years).

PARAMOUNT'S ACE THEATRE, standing at the crossroads of the world on noisy Times Square, brought "fan-dancer" Sally Rand to its stage over the weekend, fresh from an appealed jail sentence at Chicago. Immediately the management entered the pretty miss in a nip-and-tuck—not a neck-and-neck—race with Minsky's burlesque "strippers" up the street.

Spicy advertising in New York newspapers carried full-length photos of Sally in the all-together—except in Adolph Ochs' Times, where the editors evidently figured that she might catch cold and so draped her with a brassiere and a pair of pants. Even the usually dignified Tribune printed the nude shot in its ad columns, times being what they are, while the Sun, trying to uphold its reputation of a "family" paper, tacked on an extra fan where it was needed most.

Nor did the city editors ignore Sally's fan dance. The Daily News sent Jack Miley up to the Paramount to take a look. He reported back that Sally's "shapely chassis was sheathed in just enough gauze to bind a busted finger," and that she exhibited plenty of what he called "epidermis," as she pirouetted about the Paramount stage "in a costume she'd mailed here for only three cents postage."

Back stage, the reporter heard from Sally herself. "I had to take my pants off to make money," she said, laughingly.

One week later Zach received a long letter from Panama, where the paragraph had been seen by a friend who had been lost to Zach some twenty years. How's that for coverage?

Solomon Rosenblatt thoughtlessly selected MOTION PICTURE HERALD's press night, a week ago last Wednesday, to present his version of a film code. The staff was ready for him to a man, but only after cancelling three dinner appointments, two bridge games (Culbertson system), and one lesson in reducing.

On the other hand, Mr. Rosenblatt indirectly did his part for the NRA, giving employment at our print plant, in order to meet the deadline, to a special crew of linotype setters and an assortment of proofreaders, copyholders, a printers' devil or two and the rusty vocabulary of the print shop foreman.

Any way, Mr. Rosenblatt's right hand man, one Hippolite Chavannes, distributed copies of the code at Washington—first to exhibitors—at 5:10 on the evening of Wednesday, October 4. Within three hours, Terry Ramsaye had read every one of the 13,450 words (actual count), specially transmitted by fast wire to his editorial desk in New York. The transmission from Washington did not set a record, but the reading did.

When Marlene Dietrich returned recently to New Yorn from a vacation in Europe, she was asked by ship reporters what she thought of Mae West. Whereupon she was supposed to have replied that she did not know Mae, had never heard of her and had not the slightest idea what Miss West did for a living, this despite the fact that they both are stars on the Paramount lot. Mae's box-office power was building importantly while la Dietrich was in Europe. Anyway, a few days later there came from Paramount's Times Square headquarters the following quotation accredited to Miss Dietrich:

"Of course I know Mae West and I am a great admirer of her and her work. The quotation credited to me can be blamed on only one thing—my misunderstanding of the question asked by the reporters. For the five months that I have been in Europe I have spoken almost no English and I found it a little difficult to understand and answer the barrage of questions asked by the newspaper men who met me aboard the ship. I hope the reporters will forgive me for my mistake and I sincerely trust that Miss West will understand that I certainly did not intend to say that I did not know her."

BRITISH MERGER MOVES POINT TO STRENGTHENING OF THE INDUSTRY

Associated British Cinemas and British International Affected by One Consolidation, Gaumont-British in Another

by BERNARD CHARMAN
of London Correspondent Staff

To the dispassionate onlooker the struglings and schemings that go on between the nations—as, for instance, those now in progress among the European countries—are a matter of interest. But to those who by birth or location are more directly involved in these surgings and upheavals the issue is of much more vital concern. So, while you in America may look on in bewilderment and some amusement at the little-minded machinations of the European statesmen, we in England live in a maze begot of fear at the possible consequences of their folly.

I perceive something of an analogy between these conditions and the currents we now can see flowing through the internal structure of the British motion picture industry. Maybe it is not altogether justifiable to use the broad international canvas as a metaphor for the more restricted field of the film business, but there is nevertheless some similarity.

That the industry here is in the throes of a silent revolution, which will vitally affect its whole course of development, there can be no doubt, and events just now taking place indicate the beginnings of a process by which the whole structure eventually may be welded into a unified piece, distinct from the jigsaw of little bits of which it is at present composed.

"Omnia Gallia in tres partes divisa est," said Caesar, and were he living today he might make the same profound observation about the picture business in Britain. "All Gaul is divided into three parts"—and for "Gaul" substitute "the British film world."

There is the Gaumont-British organization, with its production, distribution and exhibition interests; the British International set-up, with equivalent facilities, and there are the independents. The independents we can rule out for the moment—they will not object, for it is their usual fate—and consider the case of G-B versus BIP. These two are the dominating influences here today, and according as to how they function so will the wheels of the whole industry revolve.

Merger Movements

Thus it will be realized that there is a deep significance in the latest events fostered by the two groups, independently of each other, it is true, but related in their purpose nevertheless.

About a week ago, as I write, the annual reports of British International and its affiliated exhibiting concern, Associated British Cinemas, were issued, and in them was announced a proposal to merge ABC completely into the parent body, reconstituting the entire organization as Associated British Picture Corporation. This step is to be ratified by shareholders of the two companies, who are asked to signify their approval of the financial maneuvers which the operation will entail, and then the whole process from production to exhibition will be centralized for the group in one self-contained unit.

Meanwhile, Gaumont-British has been preparing another plan, which in its turn is intended to consolidate the handling of output from that corporation's studios. This has been to link up into one comprehensive piece the various distribution concerns in which the G-B organization has gradually acquired interest, and so to coordinate the entire distribution of output from the studios at Shepherds Bush and Islington.

Consolidating Distribution

By this arrangement two of the oldest renting concerns in this country pass completely out of existence, and out of them is born—Gaumont British Distributors, Ltd.

Formerly films produced by the corporation were handled by three companies, Ideal Films, the Gaumont Company and W. & F. Film Service. Earlier this year the two first-named were consolidated under the title of Gaumont-Ideal, Ltd., and that company in turn is now brought fully under control of the W. & F. unit, which forms the basis of Gaumont British Distributors. As the equipment end of the corporation's activities was separated from the film renting side of the Gaumont Company (actually one of the oldest equipment houses in the trade) several months ago, the Gaumont-British group is now a self-sufficing body with an easily identified department covering each branch of its activities.

And so the stage is set for these two parallel organizations, each a powerful force, to work out between them the destiny of the British motion picture industry. Whether the BIP group will consider itself sufficiently strong to challenge the position of the G-B organization is a matter in question, or whether the outcome will be a closer understanding between the two is an alternative to ponder over.

Signs of Progress

All this is, of course, a part of that inexorable thing called progress. There may be some sentimental tear-shedding at the eclipse of the historic old concerns, there may be some woe for those inevitably displaced by the new order. But above it all there is the realization that the welfare of the entire scheme of motion pictures is better served this way, and that by the cutting away of dead wood and simplification of the general structure, the industry will be in a better position to concentrate on the creation of product capable of holding its own in all the territories of the world.

I think 1933, and the present moment in particular, will be looked back upon as one of the most vital in the history of the business.

The report and financial statement of BIP and ABC do not make as good reading as those of Gaumont-British published several weeks back. British International certainly has done fairly comfortably, with a trading profit of £132,395, and is to pay a dividend of 5 per cent. The circuit company, on the other hand, is down substantially on its net gains, and is not to pay a dividend on ordinaries.

It is significant that in these reports, as well as those of Gaumont-British, reference was made to the increased burden of entertainments tax, which is blamed in part for the fall in profits, especially in the case of the theatre operating companies. In the past financial year the theatres became subject for the full year to higher rates of taxation than previously.

In connection with the proposed merger outlined in the foregoing, BIP proposes the creation of additional capital to bring the total capital value of the new Associated British Picture Corporation up to £3,500,000 sterling. "In taking this step," states the report, "the directors consider that it is of paramount importance at this time to pursue a policy of merging the interests of the company and its principal subsidiary. Such a policy of coordination and consolidation will bring considerable advantages to both concerns."

Associated British Picture Corp. and Gaumont-British Distributors To Work Out Destiny With the Independents

Dent Dicker Reported

There is one odd item that should be mentioned. This is the report that Arthur Dent, leading executive in the group, now returning from a hush-hush visit to the United States, is dickering with Columbia in respect of American distribution of BIP product. Mr. Dent, the rumor has it, offers in exchange facilities for obtaining British quota product, an obligation with which Columbia find themselves faced since entering the distribution field here on their own account.

Warner and MPTO Settle Difference on "Gold Diggers"

Warner has settled its differences with the MPTO of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware and with the ITOA relative to percentage terms for "Gold Diggers of 1933." Exhibitors will not have to pay more than 35 per cent of the film's gross, the deals also lacking a guarantee. The arrangement is also said to provide that in the event the exhibitor does not break even on the film the terms will be adjusted accordingly.

Exhibitors, in signing for the musical, are not under the necessity of including the 59 other Warner-First National pictures. In addition, the exhibitors is not required to take "Gold Diggers" with the other product. Warner has the right to sell the film independently of the others, or to include it. In some instances the company has been selling the film on a basis of 50 per cent of the gross.

ITALY DEMANDS FOREIGN FILMS BE DUBBED THERE, AND ADDS TO QUOTA

76 Clubs Invited To Film Council

With the aim of independently helping exhibitors select the best type of entertainment and recommending pictures suitable for children, rather than advocating censorship, the Better Films Council of Greater Kansas City has been organized under the sponsorship of Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, Second District.

Besides the 55 clubs in the Federation district, these 21 organizations have been invited to participate, and most have accepted:

Business and Professional Women's Clubs, University Women's Club, Woman's City Club, Hotel Greeters, Soroptomist Club, Women's Chamber of Commerce, Women's Interdenominational Missionary Council, Commission on Social Service of Council of Churches, Daughters of Isabella, Catholic Women's Club, P. E. O., Y. W. C. A., Parent-Teacher Council, D. A. R., Federation of Child Conservation League, W. C. T. U., Antioch Circle of North Kansas City, Kansas City Colony of New England Women, Kansas City Branch League of American Pen Women, Book Chat Club and Junior League.

RKO-Cohen Deal for Palace Dropped; Changes in Circuit

By mutual agreement, the negotiations between RKO and Sydney S. Cohen concerning the contemplated leasing by Mr. Cohen of the Palace, on Broadway, in New York have been terminated, and the house will continue its present policy of vaudeville and pictures as a part of the RKO circuit. The negotiations between RKO and Mr. Cohen fell through because of difficulties with certain phases of the vaudeville and film booking contracts. Herman Whitman has been appointed manager of the theatre.

Harold B. Franklin announced the transfer of the Cleveland theatres, Palace and 105th Street, from the Ohio division, of which Nat Holt is operator, to the midwest division of Nate Blumberg. This transfer becomes effective with the resumption of the policy of major vaudeville and pictures at the Cleveland Palace on October 6.

Vaudeville will be resumed at the Albee, Providence, on October 6. This theatre will play the major vaudeville attractions booked by RKO.

The Capitol, Trenton, has increased its prices five cents.

The only division in the RKO circuit which does not show net improvement against last year is the Ohio group of theatres, including Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus and Dayton. "This," it was said by RKO, "is the result of the state tax on theatre admissions which is imposed on top of the Federal tax. The total tax on tickets in this territory is 20 per cent of the admission price."

Harris Circuit Now 20

Addition of two theatres by Harris Amusement Company at Pittsburgh raises to 20 the holdings of the company.

Also Calls For Tax on Dubbing and Synchronizing; Dropping Subsidy; Planning Prizes For the Home-Produced Pictures

by VITTORIO MALPASSVTI
Rome Correspondent

All foreign-produced motion pictures for the Italian market must be dubbed in Italy, effective this month, and there is to be an increase in the proportion of Italian films to be shown each year in comparison with foreign product, under a plan approved by the Council of Ministers.

Establishment of a tax on dubbing and post-synchronization is another project, the proceeds to go toward State prizes for those nationally produced pictures presenting special merit in artistic and technical execution.

Subsidy to be Dropped

On the other hand, the Government will suppress the subsidy established by the law of June 18, 1931, which was raised by an entertainment tax amounting to 2,500,000 lire per annum.

In other words, in order to place the national industry in a position to compete with the foreign industry, the Council of Ministers has perfected the law of March 25, 1927, providing for obligatory programing of Italian films in the proportion of one-tenth of the total number of pictures presented during the season from October 1 to June 30 of each year, and that of June 18, 1931, establishing prizes for the producers of Italian films, and has suppressed from the coming season its subsidy to the national industry of 2,500,000 lire a year.

One Italian to Three Foreign

The new provisions call for

1. Compulsory showing during the season October 1 to June 30 of one Italian film for every three new foreign pictures presented by the first and second run houses in the key cities and in cities with a population exceeding 50,000.
2. Obligatory dubbing of foreign films in Italy.
3. Payment of a tax of 25,000 lire on the dubbing of each commercial film.
4. Exemption from payment of the tax on four dubbed films for the producer of one Italian film.
5. Institution of cash prizes to the producers of Italian films in substitution for the State subsidy.
6. Perfection of the system of commission examination of the artistic and technical qualities of films and nomination of a commission to establish prices of national productions to be obligatorily shown.

Universal Party Nov. 25

The Universal Club, employees' organization, will hold its annual dinner-dance at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York on November 25. It will be known as a "Circus Ball."

Renee Adoree, Star Of Silents, Dies

Death of Renee Adoree last Thursday in a sanitarium at Sunland, Cal., wrote the final defeat of a long-attempted comeback since tuberculosis forced her to leave the studio after completing MGM's "Call of the Flesh" in 1930. After seventeen months in a hospital at Prescott, Ariz., she returned to Hollywood this spring, but had to go back to various hospitals for treatment.

Miss Adoree, born in Lille, France, 31 years ago, was a dancer at 10 in her father's circus troupe that traveled all over Europe, but left circus life to fight her way to success on the screen in America. After a divorce from Tom Moore in 1928, she was married to William Sherman Gill, former New York newspaperman.

It was perhaps as the French girl opposite John Gilbert in "The Big Parade" that Miss Adoree was best known, but she was featured in many other silent pictures, among them "La Boheme," "The Show," "Mr. Wu," "Forbidden Hours," "The Cossacks," "The Pagan," "Tide of Empire," "The Spoilers," "Redemption" and "The Singer of Seville."

Bud Pollard Takes Over Royal Studio, New Jersey

Bud Pollard, producer and director, has taken over the Royal Studios in Grantwood, N. J., which is to be reopened as production headquarters for the Pollard and other independent units. The plant is equipped with RCA, Western Electric and Independent sound systems. The studio, to be known as the Pollard Studios, will be formally opened with a dinner-dance and reception October 21.

Mr. Pollard will maintain New York headquarters at 125 West 45th street, operating under the name Pollard Productions. The company plans a series of features under Mr. Pollard's direction. Work on "Dance Hall Dames" starts next month, featuring Betty Hamilton and Mary Penfold.

Fox West Coast Shift Seen in Skouras Visit

The reorganization of the Fox West Coast circuit by January 1, 1934, and the retention of the Skouras Brothers as operators of the theatres, is understood to be the purpose of the trip this week of Charles Skouras to New York. He is believed to be consulting with Spyros Skouras and representatives of the Chase National Bank on the new alignment of the Coast circuit.

All salable properties of subsidiaries of Fox West Coast Theatres are to be offered for sale this month by Referee McNabb. The properties are estimated at $5,000,000 value.

2,000 FRAMES A SECOND

Shattered Glass Like Drifting Snowflakes in Film From New Camera Demonstrated by Erpi

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The motion picture camera appears ready to discharge part of the standing debt to its parentage. This child of gears and glasses, busy building an industry for commerce and a medium for entertainment, now has rewarded its science fathers with a motion picture camera that shoots 2,000 frames a second, 7,200,000 in an hour, and records the time as well.

Last week Electrical Research Products, Inc., J. E. Otterson president, placed the motion picture at the service of industry and science in a new form with the introduction of a high speed, 16 mm. timing camera capable of photographing simultaneously both action, in from 30 to 2,000 frames a second, and a time record, in fractions of one one-thousandths of a second.

Cracked Glass Like Snowflakes

At the laboratory experiments, pieces of cracked glass from a shattered electric light bulb resembled to us slowly drifting snowflakes under the photography of the high-speed camera. A flashlight's instantaneous flare produced the effect of slowly lighting a stage. The hand reacting to a cigaret burn seemed to move sluggishly. And all of these actions took place in not more than 26/100th of a second while being photographed in minutest detail, we were told.

The service of this new branch of motion picture photography to industry and science is plainly indicated, they informed us. A means of measuring deflection and displacement, of catching the hitherto elusive flash movements of the ejection of a shell, the whirl of an 80 h.p. motor and the explosive action of gases in a combustion chamber, are a few of the known possibilities cited.

In the dark chambers of the small testing booth we witnessed the projection of other phenomena caught on celluloid by this new lightning-like eye. Running water from a faucet appeared like a steady stream of jelly. The wink of an eye seemed to take minutes. Contact between a driver and a golf ball appeared to deflate the ball to two-thirds of its original size.

Later we learned that pictures taken by this new camera had revealed to one of America's largest automobile manufacturers a defect which had jeopardized one of the most important parts of the mechanism, a defect which months of research had failed to unearth to the naked eye.

Timing in Film Printing

One of the largest motion picture printing and developing laboratories was unable to discover the reason for imperfect timing in its mechanical processing. The camera solved the problem in a few minutes.

The camera, a joint development of Bell Telephone Laboratories, Electrical Research Products and Eastman Kodak Company, in many ways is an outgrowth of the "Kirby Race Timer," introduced by Electrical Research Products at a Columbia-Syracuse track meet in 1932. But it took more than that to record mechanical phenomena moving with the lightning rapidity of a piston rod or a Bendix drive.

Such a camera did exist, Erpi said, one of foreign manufacture, but it weighed several tons, was immovable and cost a small fortune. Accordingly, the development engineers of Bell, Erpi and Eastman pooled their knowledge and resources. The result was this new high-speed camera.

Can Be Handled by One Man

The finished, demonstrated model weighs 28 pounds. It can be moved by one man, can be mounted on a tripod and tilted in any position or angle while in operation and, according to Erpi, it can be made available at only a fraction of the cost of its foreign contemporary.

The time is recorded by a precision electric clock driven by a current generator which consists of an electrically actuated tuning fork. The fork is thermostatically controlled with a current cycle accuracy of one part in 25,000 under any operating conditions of outside temperature ranging from minus 20 degrees to 120 degrees Fahrenheit. In temperatures of from about 40 degrees to 90 degrees the current has a cycle precision of better than one part in 100,000.

The clock indicates time on three concentric revolving discs giving the time in minutes, seconds and hundredths of a second or in seconds and thousandths of seconds. The image of these discs as well as the moving object is photographed by the camera, so that a permanent record of both time and action is recorded simultaneously on the film. The clock picture occupies but one-eighth of the width of the film.

The 16 mm. camera is of the non-intermittent type and affords continuous electrically driven operation up to 200 feet of film.

Removing Causes of Waste

Time alone can determine its full sphere of service. New fields will undoubtedly open up. Today it admittedly bridges a chasm never before covered by science, according to its sponsors. Conceivable causes of waste in manufacture that have never been discovered because the human eye was too slow to catch their source, appeared exposed to us by the high-speed photography in an irrefutable record. It is conceivable, also, that new developments have been retarded because of the lack of an adequately slow motion picture study of recurring and non-recurring phenomena moving with such rapidity as to escape any known form of visual retention. This camera, it was pointed out, can make an indelible record of such happenings so that they appear to be in slow motion, permitting permanent study on a basis of detailed movement.

Yugoslavian Film Control Organized

The Minister of Trade and Commerce of Yugoslavia has prescribed regulations regarding the makeup and operation of the recently organized State Film Central, according to George R. Canty, American trade commissioner in Berlin, who has forwarded to Washington a translation of a recent article in the Belgrade "Politika."

The registration fees, Mr. Canty reports, will amount to approximately $8 at the present rate of exchange for each American film brought on the Yugoslavian market. The State Film Central is an independent office under the Ministry of Commerce and Interior, with its membership composed of two representatives of the ministry, and one each from the Ministry of Education, the Central Press Bureau of the Council of Ministers, and the ministries of Interior, Social Politics and Health, War and Navy, and Finance.

The Central periodically will summon as experts representatives of domestic producers, distributors and exhibitors who will be selected for each season. The functions of the Central are to manage and control production, import and trade in motion pictures; to sponsor domestic production; to render assistance to educational efforts and a useful propaganda of pictures. All films to be shown must be submitted first to the Central for registration and possible censoring. A complete exhibitor record is kept by the Central. Theatres are required to show a certain percentage of domestic product, and at each performance one or several subjects of a cultural nature.

Radio Broadcasts Made Part of Old Roxy Programs

A new alliance between the motion picture theatre and radio was launched recently by Howard S. Cullman, operating receiver for the Seventh Avenue Roxy, New York. An agreement whereby the program of an important commercial sponsor will be broadcast regularly three times a week from the stage of the Roxy marks an arrangement with a broadcaster for a regular feature of the program, Mr. Cullman said.

"It has long been known that radio audiences have a distinct desire not only to hear but to see their favorite performers, and that there is an enormous interest in the mechanics of broadcasting," Mr. Cullman said.

All programs will be broadcast with the facilities of Station WOR and will be created by Hanff, Metzger, Inc., agency.

Famous To Reserve 25% Of Time for British

Famous Players Canadian Corp. intends to reserve 25 per cent of its playing time for British films for 1933-34, N. L. Nathanson, president, announced last week. It is Mr. Nathanson's contention that more money will be made for all concerned than under a higher United States' film percentage for the circuit's 200 theatres.

"The Canadian public is now sold on the better type of British product," Mr. Nathanson said, "largely attributable to the campaigning of this organization which probably helped in a large measure to kill the quota law in Canada."

The Worst Woman in Paris

(Fox-Lasky)

Love in Kansas

Don't let the title mislead you into believing that this show is a racy, zippy, scandal-tinged yarn of the gay French metropolis. Rather it's a Kansan love story, a picture of a woman who sacrifices her love dream so that while two were bitterly disappointed more would be made happy. It might just as easily be shown in a church auditorium as in a theatre. Scarlet chapters suggested by the title tone are absent; color and atmosphere that will be expected are only relative. There's little action; dialogue carries the story.

The real punch is wrapped up in the Peggy Vane-John Strong romance situation, with Mary a satellite. Tiring of Parisian gayety and the companionship of Adolphe, Peggy is injured in a Kansas train wreck wherein she saves a child's life. Taken into the Strong home, love quickly develops for her and John, who is the only thing in little Mary's life. It inspires John, principal of a small school, to accept the presidency of State College. Then Peggy decides that her international reputation couldn't be anything but harmful to a man holding such a dignified position. Amid much dramatic and bitter heartache for the lovers, which of course opens the way for Mary to comfort John, Peggy returns to Paris. Using her wealth to enable the playboy shipping magnate, Adolphe, to rehabilitate his fortunes, they marry and the finale is atmospheric of the start, Parisian night life again, with Adolphe prone to flirt upon the slightest provocation.

The picture will be difficult to sell. The sacrifice angle should stimulate understanding and sympathy for the woman. The fact that the show is so radically different from what is suggested by the title is a definite handicap. Adopt a line of publicity that suggests that the worst woman in Paris is really a real woman who was big and courageous enough to eliminate herself from an idyllic rural romance.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

The Sweetheart Of Sigma Chi

(Monogram-W. T. Lackey)

College Comedy-Romance

In every way this picture has the entertainment and showmanship values that make it worthy of a spot on any exhibitor's program. It's a lively, sparkling, collegiate yarn, bubbling over with the hectic spirit of youth—fraternity boys and sorority girls. Novelty in idea and treatment sets it apart from the formula rah-rah stories, giving it an atmosphere of naturalness that eliminates any semblance of forced theatrics.

Clean, clever, gay and stimulating from beginning to end, the coeds are a carefree, happy-go-lucky gang who never become involved in an objectionable situation. There is a charming romance-love angle, zestful comedy in both action and dialogue, contrasting drama that's significant but never heavy and a thrilling climactic sports spectacle. It should appeal to all classes of fans, adults and kids, but particularly to the high school and collegiate crowd.

Music assumes an important function. Several variations of the Sigma Chi melody constitute the theme song. Two other numbers, "In the Spring" and "Fraternity Walk," which feature Ted Fio-Rito and his orchestra, should click with audiences.

The novelty of building the story around crew rather than football should prove a potent novelty.

Against the campus background, with all the related student activities intermingling, Bob, a big, strong, silent oarsman, finally falls hook, line and sinker for the campus siren, Vivian. Kidded by his pals and learning that Vivian makes a hobby of collecting frat pins, he calls off his romance. Ready to quit school, bitter against every one, he is brought back to his senses when the stroke-oar, Morley, breaks his arm while out joyriding with Vivian. Heading the call of school spirit, he makes his peace with the coach, and the great race is on. It's a thriller, but Raligh is trailing its chief rival until the coxwain, Harry, shouts into Bob's ear that Vivian still loves him, and then comes the exciting garrison finish to victory.

There's just about everything any one needs to sell to real business in this show. Names, with Buster Crabbe, Mary Carlisle, Florence Lake and Charles Starrett heading the list, are more than adequate. And there's another, Eddie Tamblyn, whom patrons will be talking about as they leave the theatre. There's an unusual value to the show in that it is based on the old song, "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi," and is dedicated to that collegiate group.

You can well afford to spend money in circusing this show to the skies in typical collegiate fashion—flags and pennants for decorations, tieups directly with chapters of the fraternity where possible, otherwise contacts with individual members and grad-groups. Also go after the high school girls and boys with hammer and tongs. The show is the kind of stuff they like to see on the screen. Be sure that the song numbers get plenty of plugging and put more than the usual effort into building up the novelty of the great crew race. But don't ignore the adults. Let them know the show will surprise them in more ways than one.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Walls of Gold

(Fox)

Dramatic Romance

Essentially a semi-sophisticated dramatic triangular romance, "Walls of Gold" is the story of a man who felt that faith and love had no place in marriage and that romance was for love-sick children. A standard set-up, true, but it is one that many times has demonstrated its box office power.

Jeanie, in love with Barnes, is dazzled by the lavish attentions showered upon her by his wealthy uncle, Gordon. Her heart still with her first love, she marries Gordon and the disappointed Barnes transfers his affections to her younger sister, Honey. A recognized tragic motif prevailing, Jeanie rapidly is robbed of all her happy illusions and Honey dies during childbirth. Jeanie, preparing for a divorce, experiences a final humiliation as her husband is involved in two more beyond-the-pale affairs, the denouement coming during a grand ball in his home. Finally the unhappy lovers pick up the broken thread of early romance.

There is plenty of material of which alert showmen can take good advantage. The title has an unusual ring that can be made more glamorous by supporting catchlines. With Sally Eilers, Norman Foster and Ralph Morgan heading the cast, there is enough personality value further to heighten the story-title assets. The fact that the picture is based on a story by Kathleen Norris is a factor that should be capitalized in appealing to her many readers. Provocative copy, built along the "can wealth and luxury insure happiness" line should be expressive of the picture's tone.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Charlie Chan's Greatest Case

(Fox)

Mystery

The delightful and often humorous characterization of Warner Oland as Charlie Chan makes for more entertainment in this production than in the run-of-the-mill mystery film and therefore it should be much more successful at the box office. Oland has made here, as in others of the same stories, a completely appealing figure of the late Earl Derr Biggers' famed fictionalized Chinese detective of Honolulu, with his innumerable Chinese-American children, and his battered and complaining vehicle of transportation, a true "flivver."

This particular film has all the elements of good mystery, the suspense, the inevitable suspicion cast on six or seven implicated persons, the clues scattered here and there, and the background romance. It requires rather a large amount of footage for establishment of the situation, the murder and the various bits of significant and deliberately misguiding background before Oland appears on the scene. But when he does, he fills it in an expansive fashion, designed to make him one of the most generally lovable of all screen detectives, with his quaint speech and his subtly phrased aphorisms.

The exhibitor should concentrate his selling on the long popular Warner Oland in another of his attractive "Chan" roles, without too much stress on the "greatest" portion of the title, for though the story is reasonably good of its type, and Oland makes the most of it, the picture is hardly "greatest."

Heather Angel, John Warburton, Walter Byron, Virginia Cherrill are somewhat familiar names which may serve fairly well in support of Oland's on the marquee. Robert Warwick, father of Miss Cherrill, is a wealthy resident of Honolulu, hated by his grim-visaged brother for his scandalous conduct. Miss Cherrill, engaged to marry Byron, is returning with him to the island. On the same boat are Miss Angel, daughter of a hotel keeper, and Warburton, of a New England family, sent to bring his aunt, Clara Blandick, home and away from the influence of her brother, Warwick.

Warwick is found murdered, Chan is called in, and evidence points to a possible motive on the part of the brother, Miss Angel's father, a visiting captain and several others. A mysterious strong box features in the affair. Warburton, to maintain the romance, attempts to assist Miss Angel in clearing her father. Chan eventually unravels the situation and establishes the guilt of one of the least suspected.

The exhibitor has a mystery to sell, but more particularly a Charlie Chan mystery, with Warner Oland in the role he has made famous. The exhibitor should not neglect the origin of the film, since Mr. Biggers had a large and rather enthusiastic following over the country.—AARONSON, New York.

Produced and distributed by Fox. Directed by Hamilton MacFadden. From the novel by Earl Derr Biggers. Screen play by Lester Cole and Marion Orth. Photography by Ernest Palmer. Sound by George Leverett. Settings by Duncan Cramer. Release date, September 15, 1933. Running time, 71 minutes.

Picture Brides

(Allied)

Romantic Drama

Smacking of good old-fashioned melodrama entertainment, this picture has plenty in the way of audience interest and selling values to recommend it, with dramatic romance against a colorful and different background. Principally a conflict story, its character portrayals concentrate on bringing out the best and worst in men and women. Scenic production values reflect the atmosphere. Well handled suspense holds the picture tightly together, yet all conclusions are logical and in line with what audiences will hope for. While there is continual starkness, there likewise is a humane trend. It is adult entertainment.

Dealing with the experiences of a group of girls sent into Brazil's diamond field jungles to become brides of men whose pictures they hold, the show concentrates on Mary Lee, who was tricked into the trip. Believed by her companions to be a fakir, she suffers mental torture until she wins the friendship of hard-formula ran- Drama gets under way at once, as Mame gives Mary her man's picture, only to have Dave first spurn the girl and then change his mind as Von Luden rages because he is to be deprived of this delectable bit. Dave saves his bride from Von's attack. With contrasting comedy and dramatic situations, the picture builds to a point where Von is plotting a dire revenge on the newlyweds. Secret Service men brought into the jungle on Von's tip are set to pinch Dave, when Von, unable to restrain his passions, becomes the victim of Dr. Rogers' gun. Dave, surrendering to the officers, is willing to go home and take his medicine, happy in the thought that his wife will be awaiting him when he gets out of jail, and that with Von out of the way Brownie and Mame will run the diamond mine for him.

The show is fast-moving, yet restrained. There are no theatrical heroics about it. It's just common, ordinary folks caught in a tough situation where anything might happen.

The title has an out of the ordinary sound and at the same time suggests some tricky exploitation. A cast that includes Dorothy Mackaill, Regis Toomey, the newcomer, Dorothy Libaire, Alan Hale, Will and Gladys Ahern, Mary Kornman and Mae Busch has sufficient name merit for marquee, lobby and advertising purposes.

Sell it with publicity expressive of the novelty, punchy drama and romance, and intimate the inherent melodrama.—MCCARTHY, Hollywood.

Chance at Heaven

(Radio)

Romance

Here's one of those good "little" pictures, possessing sufficient entertainment and production values to capture the imagination of the every day theatre-goer. Basically a rich girl-ordinary boy love story, it speaks of and deals in situations which common folk understand. There's only one thing that keeps it from being ideal entertainment for the entire family, and that's an unfavorable sex situation. Discounting that, its romantic angle is a novel premise of the triangle set-up; the dramatic contrast is sufficient to direct audience sympathy for the three leads, and the spontaneous dialogue and situation comedy kev the show to a lively pace.

Blacky, a service station operator, is very much beloved by Marge. She does everything she can to have the question popped, but the boy can't seem to catch on. He's waiting until he has enough dough in the bank to insure security. Enters Glory Franklyn, pampered daughter of wealth and luxury, to worm her way hectically into Blacky's affections and upset Marge's applecart. A sudden elopement is a bitter pill for Mrs. Franklyn, but Marge remains a good fellow, teaching Glory all the domestic arts and lending Blacky every encouragement. News of a baby makes Blacky deleriously happy. But Glory's mother insists that she go to New York. There are weeks of absence and Blacky cannot understand her letters. Going to New York, he finds Glory cold to him, is stunned to hear that his doctor made a mistake and there is to be no baby and a quick divorce. Back at the little New England village, Marge is waiting for him and of course there's the happy "don't go out of your class for happiness" ending.

The picture is done mainly in a popular motif. While not pretentious, the settings and related production values are good looking. The cast is adequate and the three leads act with naturalness that gives the show a color of youthful impetuosity.

One showmanship asset of which full advantage should be taken is that the picture is based on a story by Vina Delmar which ran serially in Liberty several months ago.

The show will appeal especially to the youthful contingent, the shop-girls, stenographers, and so on. Yet because of the mother interference angle, there's a reason for going after the more mature patrons on a moral warning basis. Put some of the colorful sparkle of the show into your advance advertising, and get over the idea that there is plenty of satisfying entertainment.—MCCARTHY, Hollywood.

The Girl from Maxims

(London Films)

Farce of Naughty Nineties

An effervescent affair introducing the indiscreet doctor who is mighty involved in his efforts to conceal a fluffy little Parisian dame from his none too sympathetic wife. The saucy little lady, played with extraordinary vivacity by Frances Day, is an unrestrained little can-can dancer, and she lets go some naughty lines, and gets into some risque situations while her lover, the doctor, struggles hopelessly to free himself. There is freshness about the atmosphere and the usual Korda brilliance about the treatment and photographic interpretation. The music is breezy and there is some delightful comedy work by Leslie Henson as the doctor, and by George Grossmith and Stanley Holloway.

The whole thing oozes gaiety, elaborate settings including shots of can-cans, night cafes, bathing beaches and gambling spots. It is an easy laughter maker played any place, though the talk is distinctly English.—MOORING, London.

Doctor Bull

(Fox)

Comedy-Drama

More than faintly reminiscent of another in similar vein released a short time ago, Fox's—and Will Rogers'—"Doctor Bull" is definitely down-to-earth entertainment for the masses, and perhaps for the classes. The locale, the settings, are of the home variety, being the typical small town in Connecticut, extremely familiar, pleasant and appealing.

There should be, of course, no overlooking of the value of the Will Rogers name, which is to be sold for all it is worth, and that should be plenty, in the small town, or the big center. However, grandiloquent promises of the type of "the best" and "the greatest," are not advisable.

Rogers lends to the rather slowly moving adaptation of James Gould Cozzens' "The Last Adam" his own peculiarly appealing brand of half-whimsical, half-philosophical humor. His supporting cast is competent, but not especially important from the box-office standpoint, with the possible exception of Marion Nixon, who has, however, a comparatively minor role. When the leading role is taken by Rogers the exhibitor need not worry particularly concerning cast and names. In any case, it is a one-man picture from start to finish.

It is the homely story of Doctor Bull of New Winton, the elderly, bachelor, small-town physician, who has tended the ills and ailments of the community for many years, often enough receiving potatoes for fee, more often receiving no fee. His frequent visits to the home of the wealthy and attractive widow, Vera Allen, excite the straight-laced, scandal-mongering minds of the village gossips, and arouse the opposition of the town's wealthy family, the Bannings, of whom Miss Allen is a persona non grata member. Rogers' shyly hesitant romance with Miss Allen, the opposition to him and his "old fashioned" methods by the Bannings, his difficulties in getting whole-hearted community support when a typhoid epidemic breaks out, his efforts to cure Miss Nixon's paralyzed husband, and the eventual sensational success of a serum he has developed which establishes Rogers' reputation in medical circles and the community after the local board forced his resignation, form the body of the story. It concludes with his marriage to Miss Allen.

Not startling, not in any way brilliant, the film is good entertainment, especially for the Rogers followers. Sell Rogers, the often humorous, philosophically minded and browbeaten small town physician, who sticks to his work regardless of his own comfort, aided by Miss Allen. There should be an appreciation, reflected at the box office, of Rogers and his characterization in the larger community, and an additional value in the setting and its authentic-appearing atmosphere in the small town theatre. It undoubtedly will be found attractive entertainment by the majority of the patronage.—AARONSON, New York.

Produced and distributed by Fox. Directed by John Ford. Based on "The Last Adam," by James Gould Cozzens. Screen play by Paul Green. Continuity by Jane Storm. Photography by George Schneiderman. Sound by E. F. Grossman. Art director, William Darling. Wardrobe by Rita Kaufman. Musical director, Samuel Kaylin. Release date, September 22, 1933. Running time, 77 minutes.

You Made Me Love You

(British International)

Thelma Todd as a Shrew

When William Shakespeare wrote his "Taming of the Shrew" he may not have heard of motion pictures, but his idea of the untamable woman certainly motivates this story which forms the first British film to star Thelma Todd.

Thelma teaches Mary and Doug the secret of filming Shakespeare: they must forget the old costumes and the prithee talk, and play up the comedy. British International has forgotten to give poor old Shakespeare a credit title; unless Stanley Lupino is Shakespeare reincarnate.

Here is his wild, wild woman, married and tamed by a resourceful man. The man in the case is Stanley Lupino, a vendor of an old wine in new bottles. His style is frankly knockabout: his gags are always fresh and new. In this one he is excruciatingly funny in a honeymoon sequence which presents the novelty of a first night among the pigs and cows, during which he serenades beneath the window of the glowering bride.

It may be that Thelma Todd could have had a less Marxian partner than Lupino for her first English film, but whether or not her script, direction and support had been better, she could not have given a finer performance. It is the rollocking kind of comedy which ought to appeal to the mob: it is slickly directed; moves fast and furiously; has stellar pull, and introduces some of the best novelty song numbers written by the oncoming British song writer, Noel Gay.

Chief among them are "What's Her Name" and "Why Can't We?" the latter crystallizing this writer's view that since British theatre operators certainly should make a packet of money with this picture, American exhibitors might ask themselves, "Why Can't We?"—MOORING, London.

Produced and distributed by British International. Directed by Monty Banks. Story by Stanley Lupino. Scenario by Frank Launder. Photography by Jack Cox. Sound recording, A. E. Rudolph. Art direction by David Rawnsley. Musical direction by Harry Acres.

Jack and the Beanstalk

(P. A. Powers)

Excellent Novelty

The familiar tale of "Jack and the Beanstalk" has been done into an amusing and fantastic cartoon in color by Ub Iwerks, the first of a series being produced for P. A. Powers. Satisfactory color treatment is afforded and a first-rate instrumental and vocal accompaniment is provided.

Hitting the market at the moment when there is great and well-merited excitement over another sensationally successful cartoon in color, this new series should find a welcome spot on thousands of theatre screens.

The initial subject of this series is well-produced. Iwerks has provided a group of amusing figures effectively animated. The story is appropriately fanciful and bizarre.—Running time, 6 minutes.

The Big Benefit

(Universal)

Excellent

Considerable entertainment is provided in this the third of the Mentone series. A group of youngsters gives a benefit for a swimming pool, and each mimics a known stage star. As the youngster goes into the act, a fade-in brings the star into action, and there's variety fun from such vaudeville performers as Rae Samuels, Bill Robinson, Bobby Jordan and Leon Janney. The exhibitor can expect good words from his customers after the show.—Running time, 21 minutes.

Mickey's Tent Show

(Columbia-Darmour)

Good Comedy

Laugh-a-second comedy, this should hit both adults and youngsters right on the funny bone. Against an atmospheric carnival tent show background, Mickey and his Fontaine Fox cartoon gang are set to stage a juvenile circus. But the inevitable pest, Stinky Davis, sore because the gang eliminates him from their plans, concocts a scheme to mess up the party. Stealing his dad's radio, he sets the instrument up outside the tent and puts the chill on Mickey's show. As the kid actors imitate the strong man, flying ring artists, bearded lady, etc., Stinky's father goes in search of his treasured radio. He finds it just as the wrath of little Billy is being wreaked upon the music box with a hatchet, the music playing until the last tube is broken. Mickey, naturally, is suspected of being the villain, but truth will out and Stinky gets a dose of woodshed medicine. Two specialty numbers, the animal calliope gag and Mickey's ludicrous lampooning of Mae West, are outstanding. Show moves fast, has plenty of laughs and carries enough novel comedy to interest the audiences.—Running time, 18 minutes.

Out of the Ether

Fair Cartoon Comedy

A welcome surprise introduces this Krazy Kat subject. In an operating room, hidden behind a quartet of assisting surgeons, a mysterious wielding of knife, saw, this and that, is under way, while in the ampitheatre an assemblage watches attentively. The assistants part company, and there's Krazy Kat, the operation completed, and the radio working. He mounts a magic carpet with it, and visits cartoon representations of radio singers in action.—Running time, 7½ minutes.

Queen of the Underworld

(Principal)

The Bee at Work

A happy thought is the title of this subject in the "Conflicts of Nature" series. It actually treats of the hectic yet orderly life of bees, the magnified shots making bees removing a sliver of wood equivalent to a squad of men toting off a huge log. Within its field the picture is a lively six minutes. How the patron seeking amusement may judge it may or may not be another matter. Frederick Shields describes developments, the microscopic studies being by Louis Tolhurst.—Running time, 6 minutes.

Goofytone Newsreel No. 2

(Universal)

Good Idea

There's a refreshing thought behind these newsreel burlesques, from original sketches by George Frame Brown, but in this second issue there is a handicap of over-prolongation of several subjects. One of the better bits is a Swedish dialect turn that really sounds like Swedish dialect.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Her Majesty—The Queen Bee

(Principal)

Insect Study

The exhibitor will know his own community best as to reaction to the subjects in the "Conflicts of Nature." The closeups of the larvae and the bees scarcely can be called amusement, but there should be interest in the less-close-range portrayal of the life of bees and the microscopic study by Louis Tolhurst. Exhibitors should note the spoken phrase referring to the larva as "souvenir of a brief honeymoon." The narrator, Frederick Shields, provides the necessary light comment and gives the picture a completed pattern.—Running time, 6 minutes.

Turkey in the Raw

(Vitaphone)

Amusing

There is a good deal of rather active amusement in this comedy, featuring Gus Shy, as the incredibly henpecked husband, whose wife refuses to have her brother-in-law for Thanksgiving dinner, but invites her own sailor brother. Hubby goes for a turkey, gets one and something under his belt, and proceeds to invite a host of bums to the house, meet unknowingly and vanquish the sailor, and curb his wife after some hectic, but rather entertaining comedy of the slapstick variety in and about the house.—Running time, 20 minutes.

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 194.—(A) Give us your views regarding the use of rheostats, mercury arc rectifiers, transformers and motor-generators when the current supply is a.c. When it is d.c. (This is a very important question, hence no other will be asked this week. I shall examine the answers with much interest, since the question requires a rather wide knowledge to enable one to answer it competently and in detail. I shall try to judge the answers with due leniency insofar as concerns the language of the answers, but competent knowledge must be made evident to get by).

Answer to Question No. 187

Bluebook School Question No. 187 was: (A) Draw sketch of a simple, easily constructed tester for both plug and cartridge fuses. (B) How are fuses marked as to their voltage and amperage capacity? (C) At what various points are fuses required? (D) Must every circuit, regardless of its capacity, have fuses? (E) Does blowing of a projector circuit fuse necessarily indicate fault in the circuit?

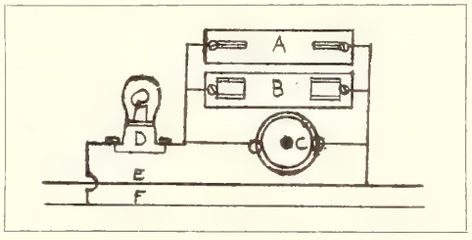
The following made acceptable answers: G. E. Doe; S. Evans and C. Rau; K. Dowling; D. Danielson; H. H. Menefee; B. Doe; J. Wentworth; H. Edwards; T. Van Vaulkenburg; L. Van Buskirk and E. Kroll; H. D. Schofield; W. Ostrum; L. F. Evans; R. D. Konley and S. Maybe; J. H. Rathburn and D. Little; D. Emmerson; G. Johnson and N. T. Kane; H. True; L. M. Pglesby and Son; J. C. Richardson; E. Harlor and G. Harrison; S. L. Hill; B. M. Granby; M. G. Greig; E. Rymer and B. L. Tanner; R. C. McDonald and T. N. Williams; H. R. Baldwin and W. T. Soar; B. Diglah and P. Jackson; D. L. Mason and J. T. Ballinger; R. M. Thomas; A. Bailey; G. Tinlin; T. Kelley and C. Cummings; D. Holler and D. R. Peters; B. L. Blinkensdorfer; B. L. Banning and L. Jones; D. V. Peterson; O. L. Daris and M. Simms; W. and S. F. Love; H. C. Lake; A. T. Jackson and P. Conforti; J. Clark and A. M. Ginsburg; D. C. and H. B. Coates; D. T. Arlen and M. Spencer; P. L. Danby; L. L. Jones; U. H. Hanover; D. Goldberg and L. Hutch; R. H. Patterson and L. H. Danville; L. G. Lamb and D. R. Lyon; A. Breaston and D. Haber; D. L. Tapley; C. A. and D. L. Prince and C. F. Kenney; L. Hendershot and R. Rubin; L. Summers and D. L. Banks; E. Hart and R. B. Hammil; D. L. Catlin and F. Butler; A. Ilks and P. L. Jensen; G. Farmann; O. L. Evans; T. H. and J. N. Wilson; O. Allbright; M. L. George and R. Singleton; R. Wheeler and R. Suler; F. F. Franks and P. K. Daniels; H. Miles, F. S. Perkins and L. Graf; D. U. Grainger; T. McGruder; M. R. Davis; S. B. Schneider; W. Oakland.

There were a very great many excellent drawings sent in by projectionists in answer to Section A of this question. I feel it would be unfair to single out any one of these many of equal excellence made by projectionists, hence to side-step that I am going to publish the one made by W. Ostrum, a young man serving his apprenticeship (unless I am in error about the "apprenticeship") under Dale Danielson, a Bluebook School "student" and a projectionist of Russel, Kans. Anyhow I know the two study together. Here is the drawing:



(B) G. E. Doe says, "Plug fuse voltage and amperage capacity is stamped on the brass cap. Amperage capacity usually is stamped on the center contact. Also plug fuses of under 15 amperes capacity have a hexagonal mica-covered recess in their caps, whereas those of larger capacity have one of different shape. Link fuses should have their amperage rating stamped on their metallic terminals. Cartridge fuses have their voltage and amperage capacity printed on the paper label on their barrel. Some have it stamped on the ferrule."

(C) The following is almost the exact copy the answer of dozens of school fans: "The various points at which fuses are required are, (a) main service fuses located ahead of main switch, (b) fuses for emergency circuits, (c) fuses for each individual emergency light, (d) fuses for exit and running lights, (e) fuses for projection circuits, (f) fuses for each projection circuit, (g) main fuses for house lighting, (h) fuses for individual circuit, (i) fuses should be installed where ever a change in size of wire occurs." I have a grave suspicion that some of you must have looked at page 119, Vol. 1 of the Bluebook!

(D) Messrs. Evans and Rau say, "Every circuit, regardless of its capacity or what it is used for, should be protected by its own individual fuses."

(E) M. G. Greig answers, "The blowing of a projector circuit fuse does not necessarily indicate a fault in the circuit. It may be due to a sudden influx of current because of some condition outside the circuit itself, or to some combination of circumstances, such as, for example, shortening of the arc combined by a rise in line voltage."

Cameramen on Coast Resent Action of Cinematographers

The cameramen's union in Hollywood is actively antagonistic as a result of the attempt by the American Society of Cinematographers to form a company union, and charges coercion between John Arnold and the Producers in attempting to develop a working agreement between producers and the ASC. The ASC represents about 227 men, while the union represents 750.

It is estimated that in the event the Society should win in its battle for unlimited hours, for which purpose John Arnold was sent to the Washington code hearings, more than 400 cameramen would be numbered among the unemployed. The union is emphatic in demanding limited hours as a means of creating more jobs.

Miller Is Named to Head Screen Writer Conciliation

Seton I. Miller has been appointed chief conciliator on the commission on conciliation, arbitration, ethics and discipline by the executive board of the Screen Writers' Guild in Hollywood. Mr. Miller replaces John Emerson, relieved because of illness.

Ernest Pascal and Arthur Kober have also been appointed to the board to fill vacancies left by the resignation of John F. Goodrich and Huston Branch. Samuel Ornitz has been elected to the executive board to replace Louis Weitzenkorn, resigned.

RCA-Victor Denies Green Charge

The RCA-Victor Company, of Camden, N. J., has denied charges of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, that it was violating the NRA labor protective clause by forming company unions. The company claims every employee has the right to join the A. F. of L. if he so desires.

IT'S MADE OF THE STUFF THAT MADE THE MOVIES

Great

sensational seller

Stirring revolt of a wife against a man who used their marriage as a smoke screen for his indiscretions...and repaid her loyalty by refusing her the right to motherhood. A woman's picture of tremendous emotional appeal... with gorgeous settings, stunning gowns.

In the Cutting Room

advance outlines of productions nearing completion of MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S Hollywood Bureau

MAN OF STEEL
Columbia

A character romance drama that reunites Fay Wray and Jack Holt, the stars of "Dirigible." The original story is by Chester Erskine, who collaborated on "Rain" and "Hallelujah, I'm a Bum." The screen play is by E. E. Paramore, Jr., and Seton I. Miller. Lambert Hillyer is directing. Chief supports are Theodore Von Eltz, Walter Connolly and Berton Churchill, currently in "Golden Harvest."

There is much spectacle and excitement in the production, the first in the steel mill locale, and the excitement in the big business, stock-market episodes. The plot is familiar. Holt, the laborer, works himself up, falls in love with and eventually marries Fay Wray, Churchill's daughter. Strikes, battles for control, double-crossing provide the suspense, with Holt emerging as an executive genius, who stages a losing one-man battle against the powers of high finance. Losing his wife's love and respect on the way, he lands back where he started on the slag pile, with the inevitable climax that sees him restored to supervision of the old mill, reunited with his wife and again the workers' hero.

As usual in these red-blooded, he-man pictures, drama is powerful and there is plenty of thrilling action, the kind of entertainment that the Holt fans go for. The steel mill phases offer much that is educational, the show carrying all the way through from the raw ore stage to the heavy finished product.

PRIZEFIGHTER AND THE LADY
MGM

A novel, up-to-date sporting world picture, this production's outstanding showmanship feature is the sensational casting that has two of the day's most talked of prize ring characters, Max Baer and Primo Carnera, battling for the world's championship with Jack Dempsey as referee. The yarn was written by Frances Marion, whose "The Champ" of several seasons ago is adequate testimony that she knows her fight technique. Direction is by W. S. Van Dyke, who did "Trader Horn" and recently completed "Eskimo."

Baer is starred in his first film and the picture names featured include Myrna Loy, about whom the romantic angle revolves; Walter Huston, the clowning Vince Barnett and Otto Kruger, who appeared previously for MGM in "Beauty for Sale."

The story in topical dramatic fashion deals with Huston as a drunken, chiseling manager-promoter who once had a champion. Living in his days of glory, he picks up one stumble bum after another in his search for a big meal ticket, until he finds Baer. This boy is painted in the character made familiar to the public by sport page stories. Climbing the ladder, he pauses now and then to trip the primrose path, meeting Miss Loy, Kruger's girl, and sweeping her off her feet into marriage. Booked for a bout with the champion, Carnera, the big highlight of the show, it results in a draw, but puts the boy in a position where the world is at his feet and the manager is in clover.

Sensational, timely showmanship is the big feature of this show. Even the idea of having famous picture stars as Lionel Barrymore, Jean Hersholt, Lupe Valez, Johnnie Weissmuller appear in the extra mob at the fight, is of unusual interest. But the thing that should most excite patrons, men particularly, is the matching of Baer and Carnera, thus insuring a news-sporting page ballyhoo of unprecedented effectiveness.

A MAN'S CASTLE
Columbia

A vivid, romantic drama adapted from the Lawrence Hazzard stage play. The screen play is by Jo Swerling. Frank Borzage is directing. Treated in a style remindful of the "Seventh Heaven" atmosphere, the yarn deals with a group in the lowest walks of life, in the familiar depression dump villages. Spencer Tracy and Loretta Young are starred in the lead roles, the supporting cast including Helen MacKellar, Arthur Hohl, Walter Connolly, Glenda Farrell and Marjorie Rambeau.

A stark note predominating, the production contrasts squalor with glamour, and majors in human interest, individual roles being particularly adapted to the players' characters. Tracy is the big shot of the jungle camp. He finds the forlorn, hopeless Miss Young and takes her to his hovel, where first sympathy and then love are born. Any kind of job that will insure his eating will do and he has many until, as a process server, he meets the show-girl, Miss Farrell. A life of ease is in the offing, until he finds that Miss Young is to have a baby, when he walks out on Glenda Farrell. In the closing sequences a colorful stage tinge is developed, in which Harry Axt-Edward Eliscu music sung by Miss Farrell and played by Earl Dancers Band is featured. Similarly a note of excitement and tragedy is inserted as Tracy and a pal attempt the robbery of a toy factory. The finis has the lovers riding a freight train to whatever the future may hold for them.

Columbia has high hopes for this one and an indication of what to expect may be gleaned from the fact that Borzage thinks this is the best story and most finely balanced cast he ever has had to work with.

THE FIRE CHIEF
MGM

A bizarre comedy, put together by funsters, this picture stars one of the most colorful stage and radio broadcast clowns, Ed Wynn, and is produced in a manner to squeeze the last possible giggle out of the material. The original story is by Arthur Caesar, Charles Reisner and Robert Hopkins, who also did the screen adaptation. It is being directed by Reisner, who has a long list of successes to his credit.

Ed Wynn is "the chief." Dorothy Mackaill, making her first major appearance in some time, has the leading feminine role. The principal supports are Effie Ellsler, William (Stage) Boyd, Chic Sale and Purnell Pratt.

The yarn is located in The Bowery, timed in the gay nineties. Wynn is one of those nuts with a yen for chasing the fire wagons and a burning ambition to get on the department. Eventually he does, and immediately becomes involved in a lot of farcical political intrigue, in which his foes, to knock him off his pedestal, set the torch-singing vamp, Miss Mackaill, on his trail. However, all plans are upset as love dawns for the pair and when Wynne saves a child, who afterwards turns out to be a midget, from a burning building he is the local hero.

As is to be expected, much of the fun will be extemporaneous, that never appeared in the original script. Wynn introduces any number of specialties hardly related to the theme, all of which are uproarious. Action is slam-bang and dialogue is full of smart cracks.

DUCK SOUP
Paramount

A crazy comedy is the next link in the Marx Brothers' chain of mirth melanges. The story looks to be the funniest the quartet ever had, and when one considers the ad-libbing that will go into it, the standard of "Monkey Business" and "Horsefeathers" should be maintained. Story, music and lyrics are by Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby, with added dialogue by Arthur Sheekman and Nat Perrin and, of course, whatever Groucho et al happen to think up. Leo McCarey, who handled Eddie Cantor's "The Kid From Spain," is directing.

Slambang action predominating, the brothers go to war, out of which Groucho emerges as the dictator of an imaginary European state. Fun all the way through, the show is colored by a spectacular girl atmosphere which culminates in an extravagant comedy ballet number which is being handled by Seymour Felix, who as a Ziegfeld director staged the dance numbers in such shows as "Whoopee," "Rosalie" and "Hit The Deck." In pictures he directed the dancing choruses in "Sunnyside Up," "Just Imagine" and also produced "Stepping Sisters" for Fox.

Although the four brother unit is sufficient for name purposes, the supporting cast includes Raquel Torres, of "So This Is Africa," as the leading woman and Louis Calhern as the villain. Others are Margaret Dumont, Verna Hillie, Leonid Kinsky, Edmund Breese and Edwin Maxwell. To these are added the gorgeous girl ballet and several hundred extras.

BLOOD MONEY
20th Century-United Artists

To mark his first screen appearance since "Lady and Gent," a typical character story has been chosen for George Bancroft. The story is a dramatic expose of the bail-bond racket with a night life and sporting world background. Rowland Brown is credited with authorship, direction and collaboration in the screen play with Harold Long.

Currently timed, with a locale which might be any big city, where graft, politics, intrigue, double-crossing and scandal go hand in hand, the story looks to be right down Bancroft's alley. There's plenty of power and inside stuff in the script, and with Rowland Brown having a finger in so many different phases, it should be amply laden with punchy color. Opposite Bancroft in the leading feminine role is a newcomer, Judith Anderson, who during her metropolitan stage career scored in such successes as "The Dove," "Mourning Becomes Electra" and "Strange Interlude." Although the cast is lengthy, bringing in many side characters, the best known supporting names are Frances Dee, Chick Chandler, who as the waiter contributed so much comedy to Radio's "Melody Cruise," and Blossom Seeley, vaudeville performer, currently appearing in "Broadway Through A Key Hole."

J. C. Jenkins--His Colyum

Lincoln, Neb.

DEAR HERALD:

As this is being written we understand that the IATSE is demanding that the motion picture code provides that every theatre operator have one man for each machine in the booth, and that the minimum wage shall be $25 per week for each man.

We can't imagine that this kind of a drastic provision will be approved by the government, and if approved, that it would be enforced. We are personally acquainted with at least 3,000 exhibitors who would be forced to close their theatres should this drastic measure pass.

In our travels we have met hundreds of exhibitors who are forced to do their own operating in order to keep their overhead down to a point where they can continue to operate.

Says It Would Be Confiscation

We can see no justification for this kind of requirement, the net results of which would amount to confiscation, and we don't believe that the Government will approve of such a measure. We have no quarrel with the unions. We believe that unions are necessary in order to protect themselves against unscrupulous and greedy employers, but we don't believe that a union has any right to try and force its edict upon exhibitors in communities where unions do not operate and are unknown, and especially where it is bound to force the closing of theatres.

We can't believe that this measure will become a law to the extent that the Government will require its observance, and we don't believe there is anybody better qualified to speak for the small exhibitors than we are, because of our long association with them and our knowledge of their conditions, and we can imagine nothing that would close their theatres quicker than to enforce this code should it become a law, which we doubt.

Out here in what is known as "The Corn Belt" there is being manifested a decided spirit of unrest among the farmers.

Farmers Scratching Heads

The territory comprising the greater part of this corn belt is the north half of Illinois, all of Iowa, all of Missouri and the greater part of Nebraska. Here corn is the main stable crop, and the wheat grower in this section would stand in a ratio of about one to ten thousand of the population, and since the processing of wheat by the Government has raised flour from 85 cents to $2 per sack the ten thousand who don't grow wheat are beginning to wonder if they are being penalized $1.15 per sack of flour for the benefit of the one wheat grower.

The same thing is true regarding cotton. There is no cotton of any consequence grown north of the Oklohoma boundary, and in this vast territory where there is no cotton grown, the price of manufactured cotton goods has advanced from 40 to 60 per cent since the Government processed cotton and this is also causing the farmers to scratch their heads and wonder what has hit 'em.

The farmer has been feeding the kitty all his life and he probably always will, but he is beginning to wonder when he will get that damcat filled up. Some lay the trouble to the agricultural program of Secretary Wallace, and are demanding his resignation. The spirit of uncertainty is becoming more acute as the prices of manufactured goods go up and the farm products stand still or go down. Personally we are expressing no opinion, but just giving you the conditions as we find them.

Many argue that inflation of the dollar is the only thing that will save the country. We have asked more than a hundred people how to go about inflating the dollar and nobody has been able to tell us yet. Our personal opinion is that "there haint no such animule." Prices of the commodities which we exchange for the dollar may be inflated or deflated as conditions arise, but the dollar is still a dollar; it was yesterday, it is today and it will be next 4th of July in New York, San Francisco or Hoboken, and this talk of inflation or deflation of the dollar is a lot of horseradish, should you want our opinion, which you probably don't. We may be crazy, sometimes we think we are ourself, but no sanity commission has so decided as yet.

If we were to be asked for our opinion as to the principal reason for the depression we would say that it was brought about mainly through lack of confidence. Time was when a man with reasonable rating could go to a bank and borrow money with which to carry on his business, but now it takes a crowbar to pry loose one dollar.

All of which leads us to remark that—

If the N. R. A. and R. F. C.
Don't bring relief to you and me
And the H. O. L. C. and N. E. A.
Will let us drift from day to day
And not relieve our dire distress
We'll flash P. D. Q. and S. O. S.

Then after that they destroyed 5,000,000 little pigs which these farmers claim would have furnished a potential market for 100,000,000 bushels of corn, and that's why we say that these farmers are in a state of unrest, which is becoming more pronounced day by day.

According to the press reports, the wife of another prominent Hollywood star has secured a divorce. No reasons were given. Some courts don't require any. Both parties to the action claim to be on "excellent terms" and "think a great deal of each other."

Out here in the corn belt our judges are old fogies and demand some reason for a divorce from the parties other than a desire to try a new pasture. That's the trouble with our courts: they are too doggone particular; they don't give the folks any show. A judge asked us once why we picked out the roosters and didn't take any hens and we told him it was none of his durn business. Then he said "Thirty days."

We heard another crooner singing with a jazz orchestra on the radio last night, and between them and our hay fever they were running about 50-50.

If the N. R. A. has done nothing more than to abolish child labor and close the sweatshops, it has justified its adoption.

George Raft, Clive Brook and Helen Vinson gave a very acceptable performance in "Night Club." It's a crook story with a slight gangster flavor.

The chill of winter is in the air and the ducks are coming down from the north and here we are headed for Oklahoma and Texas to interview the exhibitors instead of the ducks and we wanted to send Mr. Ramsaye and Ernie a half dozen nice, fat mallards. Doggone the luck, anyhow. It's all the exhibitors' fault, and that's something more they've got to answer for.

The HERALD's Vagabond Colyumnist

Talented Chimp Electrocuted

Snooky, talented chimpanzee, who some years ago played in motion pictures, met a sudden and unexpected death early last week when he was electrocuted by the third rail of the New York "El," during an impromptu dance celebrating his escape from his cage. The property of Mrs. Billy Rogers, Snooky was 13 years old, and was valued at $10,000.

Seeking Stage Show Manager

The whereabouts of Limie Stilwell, manager of "The Hollywood Scandals," stage show, is being sought by Ned Greene, manager, Legion Theatre Company of Mayfield, Ky., and John A. Collins, manager of the Capitol theatre at Paragould, Ark. Stilwell booked the show into both theatres.

William Seitz Dead

William F. Seitz, 70, owner of the State theatre, Sandusky, O., died last week at his home there. He resumed operation of the house recently when it was turned back by Warner.

Wiley Joins Paramount

Wilbur Wiley, formerly of the Denver Post and more recently of the Hollywood Citizen-News, has joined the Paramount publicity department on the Coast, replacing Len Boyd.

Launches Poster Contest

Paramount is offering awards of $100, $75 and $50 for the three best posters submitted by outside artists for "Design for Living."

Principal to Release "Cuba"

Explorer Harold McCracken's "Cuba," a motion picture record of the island, completed just before the revolution, is being prepared for release by Sol Lesser, president of Principal Pictures.

ELEVENTH COMMANDMENT: Marion Marsh, Theodore Von Eltz—Well, boys, here's where I start again for the winter quarters to write reports that you can depend on, so here goes for the first picture. Fair show, nothing to rave about but it might go in the smaller houses. Marion Marsh plays a very interesting part in this picture. If you sell this picture in the right way it might go over. Running time, 65 minutes. Played September 20-21.—William Dabb, Lyric Theatre, Shenandoah, Pa. General patronage.

Columbia

BELOW THE SEA: Fay Wray, Ralph Bellamy—A program picture suitable for Saturday or family night. Played September 19-20.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

BELOW THE SEA: Ralph Bellamy—Very good Friday and Saturday show. Underwater scenes very good. Drew good business.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

CHILD OF MANHATTAN: Nancy Carroll, John Boles—An older picture that pleased with a stage show. Really interesting picture well done. The off-color reports I've seen are not quite warranted to my notion, though it is strictly an adult show. Excellent print and top-notch recording. Running time, seven reels. Played September 18-19.—Henry Reeve, Mission Theatre, Menard, Texas. Small town patronage.

CIRCUS QUEEN MURDER THE: Adolphe Menjou, Greta Nissen, Donald Cook—This I call a very good program picture. The story is interesting and well acted. Circus background good.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

DEADLINE: Buck Jones—One of the best of the Buck Jones. They just ate it alive on Saturday night.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LADY FOR A DAY: May Robson, Warren William—You cannot say too much for this picture. Clean as a hound's tooth yet plenty of action. A great story, excellently directed with a cast that fits every character. One of those pictures that is so real that the audience just lives it. If anybody makes any better pictures than this, we want to buy them. And it is a great box office picture. Spend some money on this and you will be well repaid at the box office. And your people will thank you for playing it, from the Grand Dame who thinks she knows it all to the rough neck in overalls.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RUSTY RIDES ALONE: Tim McCoy—A very good western. Lots of action. Story interesting. Gave good satisfaction to Saturday crowd.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

TREASON: Buck Jones, Shirley Grey—Here is a western that should go over any place at all times, because it is different from other westerns and Buck and Shirley play a very interesting role. Not only the kids should go for this but the adults. If Columbia makes their features like their westerns, well, we won't have to worry for another year. Running time, 54 minutes. Played September 22-23.—William Dabb, Lyric Theatre, Shenandoah, Pa. General patronage.

WHEN STRANGERS MARRY: Jack Holt, Lillian Bond—Very average entertainment. Running time, 68 minutes. Played September 13.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

WOMAN I STOLE, THE: Jack Holt—Drew exceptionally well and pleased.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

First National

BUREAU OF MISSING PERSONS: Pat O'Brien, Bette Davis—Well, here is Warner Brother's first picture for the season of 1934, and it is a knockout. Do not be afraid of this one, boys, because it is very good and should take in any house. I must give Warner Brothers credit for making show because there is something in their shows that appeal to the public. Lewis Stone plays as the captain of the Bureau of Missing Persons, and Pat O'Brien as the dick. Allen Jenkins and Glenda Farrell are a wow for the comedy parts. I would sooner see Bette Davis as a brunette than I would see her as a blonde. Warner Brothers, we are waiting for "Footlight Parade" and "Wild Boys of the Road." They can't come any too soon for me. Running time, 72 minutes. Played September 25-27.—William Dabb, Lyric Theatre, Shenandoah, Pa. General patronage.

ELMER THE GREAT: Joe E. Brown—Personally didn't think it as good as some of his previous works. Nevertheless, it seemed to please my customers, so I am pleased. Average business.—A. L. Lighter, Orpheum Theatre, Mellen, Wis. Small town patronage.

LITTLE GIANT, THE: Edward G. Robinson—What I consider a good show. This is the type that brings them out and sends them home satisfied. Pleased both young and old. Running time, 73 minutes. Played September 8-10.—Bob Schwall, State Theatre, Ipswich, S. D. Small town patronage.

Fox

ADORABLE: Janet Gaynor, Henry Garat—One of the best of the year. A great picture with all the elements that go to make it attractive. Good acting, dancing and singing. Drew the best attendance for a year. Played August 19.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

HOLD ME TIGHT: James Dunn, Sally Eilers—Poor picture. Did not go over well with our people. Slow action, and quite an ordinary attraction. Played September 16.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

SAILOR'S LUCK: James Dunn, Sally Eilers—This team seems to please our customers and they draw better than the average. Where the team is liked picture will get over fine. Running time, 77 minutes Played September 22-23.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

ZOO IN BUDAPEST: Loretta Young, Gene Raymond—In my opinion an artistic and dramatic triumph. Romance, thrills, suspense, but the title was all against it. Zoo suggesting an animal picture; Budapest, a foreign picture, with all I could do to overcome the handicap of the title. Sunday was barely average business, and Monday below average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MGM

BARBARIAN, THE: Ramon Novarro, Myrna Loy—Fair entertainment to fair business.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. Railroad and general patronage.

BEAUTY FOR SALE: Madge Evans, Otto Kruger, Una Merkel, Alice Brady—A picture the flappers will go wild over. Adults may frown on it, but will pass as something different for a change. Played September 21-22.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

DEVIL'S BROTHER, THE: Laurel and Hardy—Very good picture to fair business. Not nearly so good as their other two features.—Robt. K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. Railroad and general patronage.

DEVIL'S BROTHER, THE: Laurel and Hardy—A wow. I am not a Laurel and Hardy fan, but this is a grand and glorious comedy with plenty of good music furnished by Dennis King. More laughs than I have heard in my theatre for a year, and laughs is what we need. Everyone from Grandpa to the baby went away laughing. Running time, 82 minutes. Played September 20-21.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

DEVIL'S BROTHER, THE: Laurel and Hardy—A roaring 90 minute comedy. Your patrons will leave with a smile and "it's great." Played September 24-26.—F. E. Klein, Rivoli Theatre, Osceola, Neb. Small town patronage.

HELL BELOW: Walter Huston, Jimmy Durante, Madge Evans, Robert Montgomery—Excellent picture but a queer ending. Running time, 105 minutes. Played August 27-29.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

HELL BELOW: Robert Montgomery, Walter Huston, Madge Evans, Jimmy Durante—Wonderful in every way, but only fair draw. Don't know why, as it deserves a good business.—Robt. K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. Railroad and general patronage.

HOLD YOUR MAN: Jean Harlow, Clark Gable—Pretty fair. The cast gets 'em and Metro gave us a break here. I am getting sold on the idea that Harlow is going to be more than a blonde head and a good figure, viz., an actress. If so, she should be kept under better and more disciplined direction than shows in this.—H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

LOOKING FORWARD: Lionel Barrymore, Lewis Stone—No one cared for this one. No draw. Not the type of story to get money.—Robt. K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. Railroad and general patronage.

LOOKING FORWARD: Lionel Barrymore, Lewis Stone—Pleased all with this timely picture. Box office not so hot. Played September 13-14.—F. E. Klein, Rivoli Theatre, Osceola, Neb. Small town patronage.

MADE ON BROADWAY: Robert Montgomery, Sally Eilers—Very good picture to average business.—Robt. K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. Railroad and general patronage.

MADE ON BROADWAY: Robert Montgomery, Sally Eilers—Fair picture. Did not take in film rental.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MADE ON BROADWAY: Robert Montgomery—A dandy picture from Metro. Bob Montgomery is popular here and this picture is one of his best, while Madge Evans and Sally Eilers are fine in their parts. What the small town patrons want. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 16-17.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MIDNIGHT MARY: Loretta Young, Ricardo Cortez—Slightly below average program receipts. I personally didn't see this picture. Broadly speaking, this is not a hot town for midnight Marys no matter how hot the Marys may be.—H. J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

NUISANCE, THE: Lee Tracy, Madge Evans—Quite a bit of talk, but I believe everyone liked it. Box office on it was ok during the run. Running time, 80 minutes. Played September 10-12.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

NUISANCE, THE: Lee Tracy—Good picture and OK for Sunday.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PEG O' MY HEART: Marion Davies—This one ranks with "Smilin' Through" for entertainment and box office. At last Metro has come through with a real money maker. Should be classed with one of the ten best pictures of the year. Wonderful acting by all. Let's have more like it.—Robt. K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. Railroad and general patronage.

REUNION IN VIENNA: John Barrymore, Diana Wynyard—Business Sunday afternoon and night off 75 per cent, and 25 per cent of those who saw it walked out. Monday night couldn't run for lack of patronage. Draw your own conclusions.—Robt. K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. Railroad and general patronage.

REUNION IN VIENNA: John Barrymore, Diana Wynyard—Well, thank the Lord, that's over. Another of those super-sophisticated society shows that drags along over eleven reels and leaves the audience, what you have left of them, yawning and wondering how it came out. A wonderful cast with Barrymore, Diana Wynyard, May Robson, Frank Morgan, all giving a great performance that would no doubt go over big in a city but no good for the small town. Patrons do not want this kind of show. If the title had been "Reunion in Reno" or "Chicago" it might have gone over, but they don't want foreign shows. Running time, 100 minutes. Played September 23-24.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

REUNION IN VIENNA: John Barrymore, Diana Wynyard—Not recommended for small towns. Some of the highbrows said "fine picture" and high school students walked out. Running time, 100 minutes. Played September 24-26.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

REUNION IN VIENNA: John Barrymore, Diana Wynyard—A well acted drama with some good character portrayals by John Barrymore, Diana Wynyard and May Robson, but it was so long it began to pall before it was over. As a story a "wow," as a box office attraction it was a flop here. Running time, 99 minutes. Played September 13-14.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

STORM AT DAYBREAK: Nils Asther, Kay Francis—Fair. Didn't get film rental on this. Running time, 82 minutes. Played September 18-19.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

TUGBOAT ANNIE: Marie Dressler, Wallace Beery—If there ever was a 100 per cent picture for towns of this size, this is it. Drew good business (for these times), three days, and I have not found one person that was not satisfied. You have got to see it to appreciate how good it is. Both stars great. Beery is a funny drunk and the picture is clean. You can take the whole family and not be ashamed of it. We need more of them. Played September 24-26.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

TUGBOAT ANNIE: Marie Dressler, Wallace Beery—Great entertainment. A little rough for some but pleased generally.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WHEN LADIES MEET: Ann Harding, Alice Brady, Robert Montgomery, Myrna Loy—I thought this might be a little highbrow for my town, but the people seemed to take to it in fine shape. Personally I though it very good. Played August 20-22.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

Monogram

RETURN OF CASEY JONES: Charles Starrett, Ruth Hall—First railroad story we have had since "Danger Lights" some three years ago; and our Saturday crowd liked it. We could use a couple of railroad stories a year. Played September 23.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

Paramount

COLLEGE HUMOR: Jack Oakie, Bing Crosby—Drew good business and pleased.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

HELLO EVERYBODY: Kate Smith—Not much to story, and weak cast; drew about an average business; drew people who do not attend, but regular customers passed it up. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 29-30.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

HER BODYGUARD: Wynne Gibson, Edmund Lowe—Nice little picture with plenty of comedy. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 7-9.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

I LOVE THAT MAN: Nancy Carroll, Edmund Lowe—Not so much. Well done, but did not have action enough for Saturday.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

INTERNATIONAL HOUSE: W. C. Fields and All Star—This picture did not come up to expectations. People said "fair" and didn't brag at all. The picture seemed to lack the necessary punch it takes to put a show over. Drew good business.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

INTERNATIONAL HOUSE: All Star—Not so good though it seemed to please those who weren't too particular. Insane comedy conglomeration, or was it inane? Burns and Allen mighty good, but it lacked music and a good song or two. Not as big as it's been touted, and very short and chopped up. Running time, seven reels. Played September 24-26.—Henry Reeve, Mission Theatre, Menard, Texas. Small town patronage.

INTERNATIONAL HOUSE: All star—Most everyone seemed to enjoy this one. One of the best midweek crowds in weeks, which was mostly due to the "Community Baby Show" that we ran in addition to the regular feature picture. Slides of the local youngsters on the screen proved to be a good drawing card. Played September 27-28.—Marion Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

JENNIE GERHARDT: Sylvia Sidney—People like to be entertained with something to take their minds off their troubles. This picture doesn't do it by a long ways. The picture has been well produced and the acting is fine, but the story is too depressing for these times.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

MAMA LOVES PAPA: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—This was a bad disappointment to us. I thought it a mighty good little program picture and liked it better than the Summerville-Pitts efforts, but they didn't like it here; absolutely no business on it. Then we'll play one that I want to hide after seeing, and they'll tell me what a wow it was. Running time, seven reels. Played September 20-21.—Henry Reeve, Mission Theatre, Menard, Texas. Small town patronage.

MAMA LOVES PAPA: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—Very entertaining picture. Drew average business.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

MAN OF THE FOREST: Randolph Scott—Very good. Business good.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

MYSTERIOUS RIDER, THE: Kent Taylor—Another excellent Paramount Zane Grey western. Very good outdoor picture to very good business that left everybody happy. Running time, six reels. Played September 22-23.—Henry Reeve, Mission Theatre, Menard, Texas. Small town patronage.

MYSTERIOUS RIDER: Kent Taylor—Good Zane Grey drew extra well. Old but print in good condition.—Robt. K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. Railroad and general patronage.

SHE DONE HIM WRONG: Mae West—A widely advertised picture that drew better than an average business. Picture seemed to please all classes and that is what counts when the public is shopping for their entertainment. Running time, 64 minutes. Played September 15-16.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

SIGN OF THE CROSS: Fredric March, Elissa Landi, Charles Laughton, Claudette Colbert—Here is a picture that will bring in extra business but it will only please a few. Reproduction of sound was only fair. Too many noisy scenes. Played September 20-21.—Marion Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

SONG OF THE EAGLE: Richard Arlen, Charles Bickford, Mary Brian—Didn't go over here at all. Business off.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

STORY OF TEMPLE DRAKE, THE: Miriam Hopkins, Jack LaRue—From reports this was adapted from a very risque book. The picture could almost be shown to a Sunday schol class. It is true that a rape is indicated but it was shown so delicately and the villain is properly punished and the heroine shows heroic qualities. All in all, a worthwhile picture. Drawing power above average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SUNSET PASS: Randolph Scott and five other stars in a dandy western. Good draw. Played September 15-16.—F. E. Klein, Rivoli Theatre, Osceola, Neb. Small town patronage.

Principal

TARZAN THE FEARLESS: Buster Crabbe—This picture sold as a complete picture. It is merely a six reel long serial episode. Exhibitor in town nearby called long distance to warn that never in his years in this business had he had worse dissatisfaction, crowds booing the picture. I pulled off a midnight matinee, and will double head it. The brother exhibitor's business blew up second day. Saturday. I call it terrible, and have just seen the picture, to sell this as a feature. As a serial per se it will get money.—Herman J. Brown, Majestic Theatre, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

RKO

BED OF ROSES: Constance Bennett, Joel McCrea—Played it hot and did better than average business. Pleased the old fans but uninteresting to the kiddies. Our patrons do not care for Constance Bennett. Print in good condition. Running time, 67 minutes.—Bob Schwall, State Theatre, Ipswich, S. D. Small town patronage.

CHRISTOPHER STRONG: Katharine Hepburn—A high-class picture but is dragged out so that it becomes boresome. All talking and little action until the last reel, and out here they want action. Cast and acting good but too heavy for the majority of our patrons. Running time, 77 minutes. Played September 11-12.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

DIPLOMANIACS: Wheeler and Woolsey—These stars have made better shows than this one. Drew good business but only pleased about half.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

HALF-NAKED TRUTH, THE: Lee Tracy, Lupe Velez—Fast talking, wise cracking Lee Tracy goes over great in this story of carnival and theatre ballyhoo and publicity stunts. Good for a lot of laughs. Lupe Velez shows up good, even if her dance is a little bit hot. Running time, 75 minutes. Played September 11-12.—Wm. A. Crue, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

MELODY CRUISE: Phil Harris, Charles Ruggles—Personally thought this one far above the average, but somehow it failed to click at the box office. Business on Saturday and Sunday the poorest in weeks. Patrons that did attend seemed to enjoy the show. Played September 30-October 1.—Marion Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

MELODY CRUISE: Charles Ruggles—A very good comedy that pleased about 80 per cent—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

MELODY CRUISE: Phil Harris, Charles Ruggles—This was a big disappointment at the box office. Previous picture had a nice run and that might be somewhat responsible. However, there was little good comment on this. If Charlie Ruggles hadn't been in it the picture would have been terrible. Phil Harris had better stick to his Cocoanut Grove. Running time, 78 minutes. Played September 17-19.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

MELODY CRUISE: Phil Harris, Charles Ruggles—This one is just a little different than the usual run of pictures. Good show and excellently produced. If you like Charles Ruggles, you'll see plenty of him in this show. The skating scene is wonderful. This picture should please most everybody; my patrons liked it. Running time, 75 minutes. Played September 22-23-24.—Bob Schwall, State Theatre, Ipswich, S. D. Small town patronage.

MORNING GLORY: Katharine Hepburn—An excellent picture with Katharine Hepburn. Great cast and good story, fine photography make a good picture.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PROFESSIONAL SWEETHEART: Ginger Rogers, Norman Foster—So far we have only been able to find just one person that said that they really liked this show. Some said they wished they had their money back. It certainly was terrible. Just a lot of film wasted. Played September 23-24.—Marion Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

SAILOR BE GOOD: Jack Oakie—Nothing much to it. Prize fight at the end was good, but otherwise not much to it. Played September 2.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

United Artists

CYNARA: Ronald Colman, Kay Francis—This is a fine picture. Great acting. Story is the kind some like, but it did not draw here and the satisfaction was about 50-50. There are too many people in towns of this size that won't come to see this type of stories. There has been too many of them.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

HALLELUJAH, I'M A BUM: Al Jolson—This is a mighty good picture, good story, fine songs by the greatest singer of them all. Lots of good comedy. Will make good in any theatre.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

Universal

BE MINE TONIGHT: Jan Kiepura, Magda Schneider—A very pleasing musical picture, nicely directed. A lot of high-class operatic music, good production values and interesting story. The trailer gave samples of the picture, but our patrons evidently did not care for the samples as many stayed away. Drawing power below average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

BE MINE TONIGHT: Jan Kiepura, Magda Schneider—From the small town's standpoint not a success. Probably 10 people in Addison who would appreciate it. Settings magnificent; understandability on account of foreign actors terrible. Comment, two for and balance against. No business.—Estes & Estes, Merry Land Theatre, Addison, Mich. General patronage.

BIG CAGE, THE: Clyde Beatty, Anita Page—Wonderful animal show. Kids went wild over it and grownups followed suit. Not much of a story, but none is needed. Business slightly above average.—A. L. Lighter, Orpheum Theatre, Mellen, Wis. Small town patronage.

FIDDLIN' BUCKAROO: Ken Maynard, Gloria Shea—Good western picture. Above average in interest and production. Maynard always well liked here and this is the first of his we had shown for a long time. They haven't forgotten him, and I was glad to see him in as good a picture as this one. Running time, seven reels. Played September 15-16.—Henry Reeve, Mission Theatre, Menard, Texas. Small town patronage.

HIDDEN GOLD: Tom Mix—The rural boys still think Mix their western hero. This picture drew capacity business and sent them all home happy. The best Mix I have played so far.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

KISS BEFORE THE MIRROR: Nancy Carroll, Paul Lukas—Killed on the start by poor title and poorer paper. Those who saw it pronounced it one of the best pictures they ever saw. Intensely dramatic. Not very elevating but all in all a splendid picture. In the red on this one.—Estes & Estes, Merry Land Theatre, Addison, Mich. General patronage.

LUCKY DOG: Charles "Chic" Sale—This picture has been panned and to those who do not care for dogs it did not amount to "sick 'em," but to lovers of these animals who understand their love and devotion, it was a very interesting picture. We belong to the latter class and got a lot out of it. Sound extra good. Business poor.—Estes & Estes, Merry Land Theatre, Addison, Mich. General patronage.

OUT ALL NIGHT: Slim Summerville, Zasu Pitts—One of the best and funniest pictures we have had this year. Pleased our patrons, and is good for any town. Played September 9.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

REBEL, THE: Luis Trenker, Vilma Banky—Lots of action and mervelous scenery in this, but a flop at the box office.—A. L. Lighter, Orpheum Theatre, Mellen, Wis. Small town patronage.

SECRET OF THE BLUE ROOM: Paul Lukas, Gloria Stuart—Very good high class mystery story, well directed and played. A natural for midnight showing. Mystery well sustained. Running time, seven reels. Played September 17-18.—Henry Reeve, Mission Theatre, Menard, Texas. Small town patronage.

Warner

HARD TO HANDLE: James Cagney—Here is the kind of picture that clicks in this town and did a nice business. Pleased all.—Robt. K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. Railroad and general patronage.

HAUNTED GOLD: John Wayne—A six reel western that seemed to please the kiddies. Blue Washington and "Duke" steal the show. Running time, 58 minutes. Played September 18-19.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PICTURE SNATCHER: James Cagney—A good action picture. Gave good satisfaction to them that like this type of pictures. Played September 21-22.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

TELEGRAPH TRAIL, THE: John Wayne—Used their trailer on this one and drew in good business in spite of rain both nights. This is one of the best Waynes I have played and everyone spoke highly of it.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

OUT OF THE ETHER: Krazy Kat cartoon—Out of the ordinary cartoon. Play this on your best dates. Excellent singing.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SNAPSHOT: No. 5—A very interesting Hollywood review. Showed intimate views of Hollywood animals, the western stars and their horses.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Educational

ANIMAL FAIR, THE: Hodge-Podge—An excellent one-reel animal subject with offstage talk. Showed animals in the zoo and very interesting. Great for children and educational.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ARTIST'S MUDDLES: Andy Clyde—A good two-reel comedy, lots of laughs.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

CAPERS IN CLAY: Hodge-Podge—Very clever travelogue reel.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

KNIGHT DUTY: Harry Langdon—Harry Langdon is in a class by himself for slapstick comedy. You hear 'em say it is ancient history, but we say, Oh boy, they like it.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

OH! SUSANNA: Terry-Toon—An excellent cartoon. Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PIE-COVERED WAGON: Baby Burlesks—A good cartoon for any program.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

PIRATES OF THE DEEP: Bray's Naturgraphs—Very interesting undersea reel. Our people like these. —Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Empire Films, Ltd.

ENGLAND AWAKE: A splendid educational picture. Should appeal to all, especially schools, colleges, etc., for its historical value. Would advise plugging this angle. Goes fine with an English picture. Running time, 34 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

Fox

TECHNO-CRAZY: Monty Collins, Billy Bevan—A good two-reel comedy with plenty of laughs.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MGM

BARGAIN OF THE CENTURY: Zasu Pitts, Thelma Todd—Very good.—Robt. K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. Railroad and general patronage.

FORGOTTEN BABIES: Our Gang—Same old thing you see every time you see a gang comedy.—Robt. K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. Railroad and general patronage.

FIJI AND SAMOA: FitzPatrick Traveltalk—My patrons don't care for travel reels.—Robt. K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark.. Railroad and general patronage.

NOW WE'LL TELL ONE: Charley Chase—A Charley Chase comedy that went over big. Chase is liked here. I can't see why, but he gets the laughs. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PALEFACE: Flip the Frog—Fair.—Robt. K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. Railroad and general patronage.

TAXI FOR TWO: Taxi Boys—Got some laughs, but I don't see why Metro ever made this series. The poorest line of shorts I ever ran. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TOY PARADE, THE: Oddity—I booked this on family night, especially for the kiddies, and did they like it? They all stayed for the second show. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BOO-BOO THEME SONGS: Funny Boners—Just as good a cartoon as "Old Man of the Mountains" is a bad one. Get it for Halloween. It fits in just as Minnie the Moocher did last year. Wish we had known about it for that date. Three songs that are OK and ghost action in the cartoon. Running time, one reel.—Henry Reeves, Mission Theatre, Menard, Texas. Small town patronage.

EASY ON THE EYES: Very good comedy of the slapstick variety. Running time, two reels.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD ON PARADE: No. 2—A little better than average Hollywood review—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MEET THE CHAMP: Eugene Pallette, Walter Catlett—It never got a laugh. These boys are plenty good, but this did not register. Running time, two reels.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

OLD MAN OF THE MOUNTAINS: Betty Boop—A good cartoon. Music by Cab Calloway and his orchestra.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

WHEN YUBA PLAYS THE RUMBA ON THE TUBA: Mills Bros.—An excellent screen song. And how these boys can sing.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO

AUDIO REVIEW: Nothing to it except the singing of the Hill Billie quartette.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DRUGGIST'S DILEMMA, THE: Clark & McCullough—Their usual slapstick that seems to go over well here. Running time, 17 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

INDIAN WHOOPEE: Fable—Just fair. Lots of action but not funny.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

NUT FACTORY: Fable—Just a cartoon.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SHE OUTDONE HIM: Headliner Series—Good short after running "She Done Him Wrong." Running time, 17 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

VAGABOND, THE: Charlie Chaplin—Not so hot and the picture jumps all over the screen at times. Only one or two of the Chaplins were good pleasing. Running time, 21 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

United Artists

BIRDS IN THE SPRING: Silly Symphony—Received as many if not more favorable comments than the feature. Everybody raved over it. Always a welcome number on our [illegible]. Running time, 9 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

PUPPY LOVE: Mickey Mouse—An excellent Mickey Mouse. A credit to any program.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

ART JARRETT: Radio Star Reels—All of these radio shorts I have run so far have been satisfactory. Running time, 20 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

HOLDUP, THE: Morton Downey—A great two-reel subject. Fine singing and lots of action.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

Warner Vitaphone

ALMA MARTYR, THE: Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians—A splendid one reel. Melody Master extra good entertainment.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

BOSKO THE DRAWBACK: Looney Tune—Fair cartoon.—Robt K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. Railroad and general patronage.

LITTLE WHITE LIES: Pepper Pot—This is a fair comedy of the Pepper Pot Series. However, it is nothing to talk about. The photography is excellent, the settings supposed to be taken in the water. It will go over but not too well. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

LOVE THY NEIGHBOR: Pepper Pot—Not much to it.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MAIN STREETS: E. M. Newman World Adventures—A very interesting one-reeler showing just that the name implies, some of the main streets of the world. Very educational. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

NAME IS FAMILIAR, THE: Melody Master Series—A very good Warner band act. Not as hot as some, but pleased.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

NOTHING BUT THE TOOTH: Jack Haley—Not much to this one. They don't care for Haley here. Running time, 20 minutes.—B. C. Talley, Carolina Theatre, Lumberton, N. C. Town and country patronage.

ORGAN, GRINDER, THE: Merry Melody—A very good cartoon.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PARADES OF YESTERDAY: Pepper Pot—Just too bad. The fellow that made it surely liked John Bunny, as he showed him five times, and told who he was each time.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

POOR LITTLE RICH BOY: Phil Baker—Not so hot. It got a few laughs. Running time, 19 minutes. —P. G. Held, New Strand theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SHUFFLE OFF TO BUFFALO: Merry Melody—An excellent cartoon that will please any audience. One of the best.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

SMASH YOUR BAGGAGE: Orchestra, Melody Master Series—Good one reeler.—Robt. K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. Railroad and general patronage.

WORLD'S CHAMP: Jack Dempsey—A mighty good two-reel subject.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

YOU'RE KILLING ME: Pepper Pot—Good.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

Serials

Universal

GORDON OF GHOST CITY: Buck Jones—I've played four chapters so far and can honestly say that it is doing business and keeping it. I run a serial as an extra feature in my show, not cutting out the other shorts. It's much the same as all serials, of course, but it is going over here. Buck Jones means a lot to it. Running time, two reels each episode.—Henry Reeve, Mission Theatre, Menard, Texas. Small town patronage.

Franklin Plans Awards for Best Film Advertisements

Plans for five annual awards for the best motion picture advertising appearing in newspapers were announced last week by Harold B. Franklin, as executive of RKO Theatres. A committee of motion picture trade paper editors will serve as judges. The competition is to be open to all advertisers in the industry in the United States and Canada.

Newslaughs, New Shorts, Featuring Irvin S. Cobb

Newlaughs, Inc., new producing company, with offices in the RKO Building, New York, has in work a series of one-reel subjects, featuring Irvin S. Cobb, noted humorist. The first has been released. Herman B. Freedman heads the organization, with George Byrnes as vice-president and general manager.

Fritz Friend Dead

Fritz Friend, formerly with Warner Brothers and Principal, died in Detroit Tuesday after a long illness. The Film Board of Trade in that city is seeking word of his relatives. Mr. Friend worked for many years in Omaha.

Detroit Agreement To Increase Scale

Practically all theatres in Detroit will be required to raise admission prices on October 15 under the terms of the new zoning agreement, accepted by a majority of the exhibitors of the city. The agreement also provides for the elimination of double bills, and will bring admissions in some cases five to 10 cents higher than at present in subsequent situations.

First runs have agreed to a minimum of 50 cents at night where stage shows obtain, if subsequents raise their prices, and are demanding six months' protection over double bill houses. Few subsequent runs have raised their prices as yet, while several have increased admissions on the basis of better conditions resulting from the NRA. Numerous exhibitors contend it will be impossible to revert to single bills and at the same time raise the scale.

In general exhibitors say they will not raise admissions until forced to under the agreement.

MGM Opens Intensive Drive on "Night Flight"

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer plans a nation-wide promotional campaign on the all-star picture, "Night Flight," which was nationally released on October 6, with simultaneous showings in key cities over the country. On October 4 the campaign was inaugurated with a NBC coast-to-coast broadcast at 9 p. m. on the Ipana hour, with practically all major cities in the hookup of 43 stations. Helen Hayes, one of the film's stars, offered a dramatic scene from the picture.

Monogram Program Now One-Quarter Completed

Monogram Pictures has completed 25 per cent of its 1933-34 feature program, according to W. Ray Johnston, president. Among the releases for September, October and November are "The Avenger," "Sensation Hunters," "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi," "Broken Dreams," "Sixteen Fathoms Under." For the second quarter are planned "Woman's Man," "King Kelly of the U. S. A.," and "Beggars in Ermine."

Universal Ends Outside Deals With Producers

All producing deals with outside units have been called off by Universal, with the exception of those with B. F. Zeidman and Stanley Bergerman. Affected by the decision are Sidney Algiers, A. M. Wiethenthal, Keith Weeks, Harry Garson and Joe Rock.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

"FOR GAFFING OUT LOUD"

As diligently as we have perused the proposed industry code, we find no mention of any clause that alleviates the sweatshop conditions under which so many managers still labor. But we have discovered the hitherto unsuspected but nevertheless interesting fact that those film folk who follow the trade, profession or science of gaffing, may look forward to a code assured wage scale of $1.16 2/3 per hour, and $68.50 for each 36-hour week.

But, of course, these figures apply only to plain domestic gaffing, for the code unequivocally states that while on "distant locations," gaffers' weekly remuneration rises to $81.75. And with no desire to cast the slightest reflection upon this wholly necessary film trade, p. or s., please remember the above wage is for ordinary, run of the mill gaffing, so to speak, no doubt enjoyed by even a first year gaffer.

That the code makers are so humanely explicit on the above, not only convinces us of the bright future of this trade, p. or s., but also quiets our misgivings concerning the welfare of the now happily code provided for marbleizers, grainers, and fur finishers, among other creative workers.

But what does a gaffer do, you ask? Blest if we know. He might be the apprentice to the helper every projectionist nearly won. Then again, he could be the guy who gaffs the manager—but no, that's a supervisor. Anyhow, a gaffer gets from $68.50, and that's that. Disheartened, code neglected $36, 85-hour, seven days per week managers, however, may comfort themselves with the ambition that they, too, can aspire to delightful gaffing, with its enchanting prospect of "distant locations," where, perhaps, one meets strange peoples, eats exotic foods, and receives $81.75 per week, plus overtime, NRA.

HAIL, EXPLOITATION

The night of Oct. 4 saw Broadway jammed with milling thousands in a traffic-defying mass who came to participate in the New York premiere of United Artists' first 20th Century release, "The Bowery," and Warner Brothers' "Footlight Parade."

Autos crawled at a snail's pace and pedestrians made even less progress as hundreds of New York's "finest" sweated futilely to keep 'em moving. Monster searchlights made the street lighter than day. Confetti filled the air and giant banners vied with flashing electric signs in proclaiming the marvels of both screens. Regiments of shorted girls pedalled bannered bicycles, and in the Strand lobby costumed chorines passed out pictures of the even less clad picture lassies, while Chuck Connors and Steve Brodie, basking in a flood of baby spots, held court atop the Rivoli marquee before gaping throngs below.

'Twas a time that Broadway has not seen in years. The theatres were jammed to the eaves, with waiting hundreds in line. A gala occasion, indeed, that spoke hope, joy, and a promise of better times to come. And exploitation did it; yes, sir, sound showmanship bringing crowds not only to see, but eager to spend.

On a thousand Broadways showmen are unloosening the nation's hitherto tightly knotted purse strings with crackerjack campaigns that are keeping the golden flow moving through the box office into the steadily swelling streams of commerce. Unheralded and unsung, the showmen of America are doing their courageous part in the van of those valiants fighting to lead the nation forward to greater days.

PHILADELPHIA

Fulfilling a long-made promise, we took ourselves off to the City of Brotherly Love last week, spending a delightful day renewing old acquaintances, and meeting up with a host of active Round Tablers. The short time we spent there did not allow us to do everything we desired, but what we did see was an eye-opener for sure.

Those Philly showmen are thoroughly conversant with all letters of the exploitation alphabet, as proven at every house we visited, where some good stunt was working to bring in the cash customers. And the boys were not passing up the profit possibilities in children's matinees, either, for they told us that in some instances audiences of from two to three thousand youngsters were not out of the ordinary. Some fun, eh!

Whom we met and what we saw are told in detail, more or less, on another page. It is a real pleasure to get out in the field and, when time allows, we shall seize every possible opportunity to sally forth and meet the boys on the firing line. In the meantime, "Okay, Philly," and many thanks for a pleasant party.

Reports have reached us that Washington has "suggested" to exhibitors, a day off be given to all managers everywhere. Lacking confirmation, we wired Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt in Washington, requesting further information. Up to press time, no reply has been received.

Sock Opening For "Footlight Parade"

With a squad of police to keep traffic moving and a storm of confetti that covered the theatre block front, Charlie Einfeld's high powered exploitation crew wound up a campaign for the opening of "Footlight Parade" at the Strand Theatre, New York City, that packed the house and jammed the sidewalks with waiting lines.

A host of stunts were put over and among those that no doubt will be duplicated or adapted in other spots are the following:

Bicycle Street Bally

Groups of girls, dressed in rehearsal shorts, peddled bannered bicycles up and down Broadway, and costumed chorus girls, including a number dressed in policemen's uniforms, distributed the cardboard novelty heralds in the lobby. These girls were brought from the Brooklyn Vitaphone studios in a bannered bus, and in keeping with the portable dressing room sequences in the picture, changed into their costumes while traveling to the theatre.

An especially colorful four-page tabloid herald, which is available for all dates, was distributed at the Polo Grounds during the World Series games, and posting included thousands of individual one and a half sheets of each of the stars in a full-length pose.

Powerful searchlights from across the street lit up the front, the features of which were animated marionettes of the stars and fifty-foot streamer banners, three feet in width, each with the name of a star, running from the three sides of the marquee to the roof of the theatre.

Other lobby flashes included telegrams from the stars and other celebrities, and an endorsement from Grover Whalen, local NRA chairman, this last also used as a display in many Broadway windows, and as a half sheet snipe all over the city.

Colorful star and girl silk screen poster and attractive cutouts of various sizes were also painted in the lobby, and the newspaper campaign included smash ads that ran as large as two and three columns full. Rarely, has the Strand front and lobby seen such rainbowlike decoratons.

Beside the screen entertainment, Ruby Keeler, the star, was on hand to take a bow, and Busby Berkeley, responsible for the amazing "By a Waterfall" and "Shanghai Lil" numbers, was also introduced to the audience.

The above ideas were the "spotlighters" in a campaign that completely covered every possible angle and medium of publicity and advertising, and to Ed Selzer, Sid Davidson, Bert Perkins, Arthur Jeffrey and the Strand's ad staff, a flock of Winchellian orchids for their splendid work.

Clever Gags Sell "Iceberg" Opening

For the opening of "S. O. S. Iceberg" at the Criterion Theatre, New York, Joe Weil, Universal exploitation chief, turned loose a flock of stuff that certainly sold the thrill angles of the picture. On the opening night, he had a squad of newsboys distributing a standard size, four-page paper, filled with scare headlines and punch art, that had every one on Broadway scrambling for a copy of the sensational sheet.

Some of Joe's other gags were a two-colored "radio flash," regular telegram size, with copy in wire type; a four-page three-colored herald, with thrill copy and illustrations, and a form letter describing the story and background of the picture, this last sent out to a select mailing list, including explorers and educators among others.

A clever idea was incorporated on the back page of the four-page herald, in which a mail reservation blank was printed, with copy suggesting that this be used in the purchase of tickets, as all seats were reserved on the Broadway date.

The above gags are no doubt included in the press book on this production, and managers playing the picture can therefore obtain them for use in local campaigns.

Smart Exploitation on Gilman's Campaigns

A different time gag on "Broadway to Hollywood" was used as part of the lobby display by Manager S. A. Gilman of Loew's Parkway, Baltimore (Md.), who tied up with his local Postal Telegraph office for five practical clocks which were put up on the inside wall of the lobby (see photo).

From left to right, the clocks showed Eastern Standard, Central Standard, Loew's Parkway, Mountain and Pacific Time. In addition, a sign under the Eastern Standard time was lettered "Broadway," and under the clock showing Pacific time was lettered "Hollywood," thus tieing in the title of the picture to the display.

On "Tugboat Annie," Gilman promoted a miniature tugboat encased in glass, set it up in the lobby and surrounded it with stills, posters, etc. He also promoted two lifebuoys, planting a photo of Dressler in one and Beery in the other.

A complete beauty parlor was erected in the lobby on "Beauty for Sale," with all the necessary equipment, and although we have not been informed of how much further the idea is to be carried, perhaps Gilman is arranging for beauty treatments for his patrons.

Jack L. Foxe, assistant manager, reports these above stunts and informs us that Manager Gilman is now working on others.

"The Bowery" Moves To Bway—And How

Hitting New York with the speed and dispatch of the train that bears the same name, the United Artists' first 20th Century release, "The Bowery," premiered at the Rivoli Theatre on the crest of a city-wide campaign that broke all Rivoli opening records for the last three years. The hardest hitting exploitation helped to accomplish this result, and Hal Horne's exploitation staff under Monroe Greenthal is commended for turning up an armload of sock stunts that rang the well known bell loud and often.

One of the stand-outs was the floating of theatre banners attached to huge balloons, over the Polo Grounds world series games (see photo), different banners set afloat at intervals, carrying the names of the stars, title and theatre. A striking street bally was a group of men and women costumed as the old-time Bowery characters, who toured the city in a special bannered bus, "barking" the various points of interest, the picture and theatre. The "Bowery-ites" were planted on the marquee top during the opening with baby spots playing on each character.

Tying in with the crack 20th Century flyer, large displays (see photo) were placed in the Grand Central Station with copy carrying congratulations from the New York Central to 20th Century productions, the posters including mention of the title, theatre and stars.

Augmented newspaper space, heralds, and liberal posting of varied sized paper, tieup window cards and cooperative displays were put over, the last including a prominent Fifth Avenue travel window that sold the feature as well as Mickey Mouse's birthday cartoon, included in the program. An ace lobby brought plenty of chuckles, with the art illustrating the snappy comedy lines, mostly taken from copy of the regular press book ads, which no doubt will be used for many fronts.

First-rate exploitation is all this, especially the balloon and railroad gags which can be put over in other spots. Where large gas bags are not available or too expensive, a cluster of small balloons filled with hydrogen should sustain the weight of a banner which can be held in one spot with stout cord. Managers in spots tapped by the New York Central or its branches, can adapt the 20th Century tiein to local needs, also the street bally, where showmen can dig up the costumes.

S. S. Holland, Mgr. Warner Theatre, Elkhart, Ind.

Don't suppose there's anything new not already done on Gold Diggers campaigns unless this one gag consisting of dividing Elkhart into twenty sections, each section consisting approximately four hundred, then taking twenty YMCA select boys residing in each section to make a personal direct canvas of each home, selling the picture and play date, then leaving a Herald for further perusal. This covered every home in town Stop Live window display, best location in town, with girl actually phoning all homes and offices in city selling attraction eight days advance. Also each act on five-act vodvil program. Sunday plugged picture while pit orchestra played hit song as overture Stop Record Breaker!

"Sedge" Coppock, at the paramount, Stapleton, S. I., tells us they broke all previous records at his house, the seventh time that has happened in two years, when they played "Tugboat Annie." Picture played for three days to 15 per cent of the population within a radius of 57 square miles. Coppock had a boat with signs plugging "Annie" running alongside the ferryboats and plying its way in and out the harbor.

A Swell Day Spent In Visiting Philly

Well, we finally had an opportunity, last Saturday, to meet up in person with many of those Philadelphia members who have been shooting in the sock campaigns originating in that sector of theatre land, and from early in the morning to late at night, sure helped to make the day exciting as well as pleasant.

Our first call was upon William Goldman, Warner general manager, for whom we had put over many a campaign in the old days, and we snatched a few moments of his busy schedule to recall good times. Then Jules Seltzer was waiting to take us in hand, and we repaired to the publicity offices, where we met up with quiet spoken Harry Goldberg, Warner ad chief, and Larry Graver, genial Boyd Theatre manager.

Jules and Harry sure made us right at home, giving us an office to phone some of the local members, as time was too short to get around to many of the theatres. Over the wire we established pleasant contact with these manager Round Table Warnerites: Martin Goldberg, Colonial; Bill Reilly, Allegheny; Lloyd Seiber, State; Eugene Stutenroth, Holme; A. S. Goldsmith, Imperial, and Jose Yovin, Alhambra. We also used the phone to become acquainted with George Fishman, Roosevelt, and Milton Rogasner, Iris, and all these managers, Warners and independents, accepted our invitation to serve upon a committee to discuss ways and means of arranging a Philadelphia Round Table "Get-Together" similar to the successful party we put on here in New York a few months ago.

Making the Rounds

Then having a few hours before meeting up with our old pal, District Manager Charlie Kurtzman, we called up and said hello to our good friend, Monty Salmon, then made the rounds downtown, and had a swell visit with hustling Irving Blumberg, at the Stanton, where we stopped for some java, served free to all patrons in Irv's comfortable mezzanine. We met Maurice H. Verbin, of the nearby Europa, and we also popped in on Earle Bailey, at the Stanley, in addition to catching a peek at the lobby of the Boyd, where we noticed that Larry Graver advertises afternoon tea in the lounge. Those Philly-ites sure go for that service.

A quick trip to the Circle Theatre, and dinner with Kurtzman, after which we made a number of his houses with him, meeting up with Jack Levy, at the Kent; Howard Armstrong, Wishhart; Karl Schaeffer, Richmond; Bill Reilly, Allegheny; Al Blumberg, Midway, and Jay King, at the Arrowgate, then a hasty dash downtown to catch a late train back home.

Of course, we did all this on the fly, so to speak, and only wish we could have had more time to meet up with all the members. But we know that they appreciate the little time we had. And we expect to cover more ground on our next trip, which we hope won't be too long in the future.

We witnessed a lot of excellent exploitation, detailed reports of which will be run in the Club columns, and we were further impressed by the healthy spirit in evidence at all theatres. All in all, a highly enjoyable day, and our deep thanks to all the boys for helping to make it so.—MIKE.

EDUCATOR TURNS SHOWMAN

College Education Department Head Gives Observations on Running Theatre for Students

by PROF. E. V. HOLLIS

Manager, College Theatre, Morehead, Ky.

Providing talking picture entertainment for college students is a specialized job. The fact that you have a like-minded and like-aged group makes the task seem easier than trying to satisfy the wants of a general patronage group. But the available product which one can book that is suited to the college group is so scarce that it really makes the problem harder than catering to general patronage.

E. V. Hollis

Here at Morehead State Teachers College our theatre is operated primarily for a group of one thousand college students and the faculty who instruct them. There is not a more critical group in the country when it comes to choosing its entertainment. Really, in addition to being very definite in their wants, such a group will show as much diversity as a general patronage group.

A large sector of the freshmen declared "State Fair" "right down their alley," and walked out on "Cavalcade," while many of the more discerning students reversed the process. The musically inclined pleaded for more "Be Mine Tonight's", while some of the more Puritan thinking members were critical of such lavish productions as "The Kid from Spain" or "Maedchen in Uniform." I even have two colleagues who want us to run Westerns and other action type pictures that are taboo with most of the specialized group whom we try to serve.

Shorts Highly Regarded

In the field of short subjects, showing to college people is even more trying. Here shorts are not merely fillers for the program; they are often more highly regarded than the feature. The sharp contrasts this variety of materials provide will give some one thing especially palatable to each taste.

Comedies rank high with students, but the typical slapstick is not wanted except in its most artistic forms. The more subtle humor of performances seems to fill the bill, but where can you find enough similar product? Musical shorts are dear to the heart of our group and (Allah be praised!) we have been able to select enough for their wants.

Would you expect a college group to demand cartoons? They possibly best release one from reality, and provide the relaxation the student is seeking and, hence, are very popular. Walt Disney's "Silly Symphonies" stand out from the rest, and we used to think cartoons were on the program primarily for the children!

Other short subjects that college students like much more largely than a general audience is select travelogues, such as the "Magic Carpet" series, and such spectacles of nature as "Krakatoa." I should mention the discriminating attention the student gives to the newsreel. In a general audience in the smaller towns a theatre can run two and three week old news and "get by" with it. Such an attempt here would be fatal. The student reads the news and you don't have to show him on Thanksgiving Roosevelt still campaigning for him to think you have a "goofy" newsreel.

The trials and tribulations of successfully buying the product that I have found suited to the needs of our college audience would make several editorials if they were recited. Outside of the problems that came from my ignorance and inexperience as an exhibitor, I judge the rest of my "grief" is about that typical of all small independent showmen.

Patronage No Problem

After the right program is secured the next problem of the showman is to get the customer into the theatre. This usually major problem is, with us, a very minor one. Our audience is ready-made; they have been given as much voice as is possible in what is to be on the program. They indeed feel like it is their show. We, therefore, do not use the usual means of exploitation. Two or three one-sheets is all of the usual type of advertising we need to bring into the theatre 80 per cent of our potential audience.

Now don't envy us to the extent of thinking that we have a non-theatrical setup that enjoys a monopoly. We are organized on a theatrical basis in toto and have the usual "other theatre" opposition in the town. It is just a case of a college professor who takes as his hobby managing a theatre rather than playing golf, and he works hard (as most of us do) at his avocation and thus as an amateur gives the professional a run for his money.

The MOTION PICTURE HERALD has been of untold benefit in learning and keeping up to date in my hobby.

Announcement Book Makes Fine Display

Capitalizing on the selling angles of the high grade art work, Joe Salmon, the hustling manager of the Riverside Theatre, New York City, is receiving compliments on his slick lobby display made up from the Paramount announcement book. It completely covers the front of what was formerly an inside box office which Joe considered an "eye sore," and after experimenting with one thing or another, finally hit upon the attractive announcement idea pictured here.

The background is made of plush velvet tightly stretched on copper board. The five inserts from the Paramount book are mounted so that they can be removed and replaced with others. The inserts are made of beaver board, and the frames are of wood, painted silver. Rainbow colors are used in the art work, and the lettering on the top is tinselled.

To insure attention from the women, Salmon placed chromium mirrors on either side of the display, and reports that they are doing more than their share in evoking admiration from the patrons. The slant at the bottom of the display is due to the grade of the lobby floor.

Salmon's Elaborate Display

Although Joe is not the first manager to use the announcement books for lobby selling, his display is out of the ordinary, and can be recommended to others interested in unusual slants to publicise the new releases.

McManus Gets Good Breaks in K. C. Papers

A fine example of "milking" local newspapers for every bit of possible picture publicity is illustrated in the recent campaign engineered by John McManus, skipper of Loew's Midland, Kansas City (Mo.) Though most of the stories and art plugged the feature picture, "Penthouse," John obtained further good breaks on his shorts; for instance, a two-column cut in one Sunday paper of the Misses Todd and Kelly, the new Hal Roach comedy team, and a woman's page story on the Pete Smith colored one-reeler, "How to Stuff a Duck."

Besides the usual theatre publicity, McManus benefited from front-page stories on Jean Harlow's latest marriage, K. C. being her home town, the publicity also mentioning her coming picture "Bombshell," which is dated at the Midland. John also landed on the sport page with a story on Nat Pendleton, the well known wrestler who plays in "Penthouse" and is very popular in that section of the country.

As has been detailed in these columns, McManus takes full advantage of his local radio broadcasting facilities and makes frequent broadcasts on various picture subjects of interest to his local theatre-goers, and one of his latest talks on the theatre as a community center will be publicized in the Round Table in an early issue.

Sonny Steps Out Before He Steps Off

Sonny Shepherd, who at this writing has, or is just about to become a married man, filled in the summer months by subbing for the various vacationing managers in Miami (Fla.), prior to returning to his post at the Mayfair Theatre there, and reports a few of the things he stepped out to do at the Capitol on " Charlie Chan's Greatest Case" while batting for Jack Fink.

Sonny had several hundred Chan sayings from the press sheets, processed on 5x16 sheets and his ushers pasted these on store windows at night. As no theatre copy was included, these acted as good teaser stuff, and there were very few squawks from the merchants, as Shepherd stands in well.

Some of the Chan epigrams were included in Hal Kopplin's advance ads, thus tieing in the teasers with the picture, and in addition, Hal had a local laundryman write "damn good show" in Chinese, which was planted in the newspaper copy.

A six-foot cut out head of Warner Oland as Chan was the centerpiece of an atmospheric lobby, and Sonny used the peep hole gag in a vacant main street window with an arrow pointing to copy reading: "Take a peek at mystery," with posters and stills inside the window plugging the picture. To attract crowds, a number of boys were planted in front of the display to show sufficient interest, and they, of course, attracted others.

The Chan sayings are highly recommended in putting over these Chinese detective stories. They can be used in many ways, and Shepherd's idea is effective, providing, of course, the manager stands in well with his local merchants.

A short one-act playlet used as an advance buildup for the picture, had a boy and a girl in dim lit phone booths on opposite sides of the stage, the lad throwing a scare into the gal by impersonating Chan and telling a bit of the story by asking questions relating to characters in the pictures. For the finale, the boy discloses his identity as the lights come up, with the girl accepting a date to see the picture, after which the screen trailer was shown.

Effective stuff, and managers who would like to try this novel trailer presentation might get in touch with Shepherd for more detailed information.

SCHOOL DAYS ARE BACK AGAIN!

And after the first few weeks of it the youngsters are all set for whatever your theatre has to offer in the way of special shows and kiddie attractions.

Among other things: have you tried to work out an arrangement whereby the school passes on your Saturday shows as being desirable for children? Do they announce this fact at assembly or post it somewhere around the school building? Is it mentioned in the school paper (if one is published)?

It is at this time of the year that the most successful kiddie clubs and matinee gags are promoted. If started off on the right foot, the momentum may carry it well into the next year. But whatever you plan should be done now, not in December.

Start one of those smashing serials off now. It will get the kids into the habit of attending regularly every Saturday. And don't forget to run that serial once during the night performance. You'd be surpised to learn how many adults are keen for serials.

Ace Utica Campaign On "Missing Persons"

A campaign that for completeness and effectiveness ran the New York Strand opening a close second was recently put over on "Bureau of Missing Persons" by Manager Garry Lassman, Avon Theatre, Utica (N. Y.). Two traffic stoppers in the lobby were a crate of carrier pigeons (see photo) and the chained filing cabinet gag, both first used in the New York campaign and recently detailed in the Round Table. Also included in his front was a 40 by 60 with streamers from 1925 newspapers that carried pictures and stories of local missing persons.

Carrier Pigeon Bally

Garry sent out a truck with public address system through which police broadcasts were simulated, describing a supposed missing person, and requesting that anyone with information report to the "bureau of missing persons" at the theatre. Tying in with this was a special police preview and window displays on the book by Captain Ayers, an autographed copy of which was presented to his sister, a local resident.

The two column type scare head press book ads stirred up plenty of comment and Lassman also obtained extra publicity with interviews from his police chief and other civic officials, in addition to which a classified tie up was good for further returns.

All in all, splendid exploitation on a real exploitation picture and Garry is to be complimented for utilizing every practical angle in piling up a nice gross.

LaFalce Creates New Layouts In Selling Francis Draw

Evidently, Kay Francis tops Robinson's draw in Washington, to judge from the handling of the newspaper layouts by Frank LaFalce, Warner division manager, and capitalizing on this, Frank used a slightly different angle than the regular press book ads. Francis was not only starred above the title, but the copy was personalized with lines such as, "I can't be true to one man" and "I'm not a one-man woman."

There was no attempt to play down Robinson, but the other angle was stressed to take advantage of the Francis draw in the Capitol city. LaFalce is also plugging the new season's "certified pledged" hits, as he calls them, in all advertising copy, a smart move in institutionalized selling of his coming pictures.

SOME M-G-M EXPLOITATION FLASHES

MISSOURI WARNERITES OFFERING EFFECTIVE IDEAS FOR EXPLOITATION

Box Office Builders That Have Brought in Pleasing Grosses and Can Be Put Over in Small Towns as Well as Big Cities

The following ideas, though not necessarily original, have the benefit of a tested background and are proven practical campaign aids. They cover a lot of territory; stage, lobby, merchant and civic slants that should be adaptable in almost any situation.

"Big 4" Campaign

Pick out any big four pictures and sell them in a group. Start a week to two weeks in advance. Sidewalks stenciled all over town with just a big number "4." One-sheet teasers sniped all over town with just number "4" on them. Ditto newspapers. Trailer: "It's coming—4." Tie up with all merchants to carry a big "4" in their windows. Tie up with transit lines—bus or street car for half-sheet cards on front and rear.

Orphan Shows

From the point of view of good will, publicity and a good turn well done, you can't go after this too strong. Invite local orphanages by tying up with a newspaper and letting them sponsor the free showing. Get some Mickey Mouse cartoons and other kiddie appeal material and show the youngsters a good time in your theatre. Arrange with some transportation company to furnish you busses free for the publicity and good will gained. Banner the busses.

Baby Contest

Never fails if handled properly. Tie up with newspaper for sponsorship. Enlist cooperation of Mayor, local health officers, baby welfare committees, etc. Gag can be worked either as a healthiest baby stunt or most popular baby. Former preferable. Tie up with dealers in baby accessories for prizes for healthiest babies. Also prizes for mothers of healthiest babies, etc.

Makeup and Cosmetic Tieups

Set up a booth in your lobby after making tieup with local drug stores specializing in cosmetics (or beauty parlor). Have expert on hand to give advice on makeup; actually make women patrons up to show how it improves their appearance and distribute samples. Tieup especially effective for matinees. If a local manufacturer of cosmetics can be found, the tieup is ideal, for he will unquestionably go for it hammer and tongs.

Chain Stores

Chain stores offer excellent distribution points for heralds, institutional material, etc. Working the store in on your lobby display in return for windows and distribution of heralds in each package that goes out is one way. Chain drug stores, grocery stores, department stores are always alive to tieup possibilities.

With the grocery stores you may be able to arrange to stand part of the cost of the grocery circular put into each bag of groceries in return for space on the circular. You can probably promote this by having numbers printed on the circulars and offering prizes for ten or twenty of the numbers printed if presented at your box office. Angle for store is that customers will take circulars home if they think they have some further value—i.e., a possible pass.

Civic Pride Week

This is a tieup affecting civic authorities which for its success depends upon newspaper cooperation. Tie up with lawn mower, sprinkler, paint, yard equipment companies, hardware stores, etc. Announce through papers that a committee appointed by Mayor will inspect yards and premises of houses in town every night during a certain week and names of the best kept will be handed in to paper. Best kept yards and premises to win for owner suitable prizes. Give out a number of prizes on the night set for the giveaway. Make sure the newspaper announces that in order to be eligible, contestants must be in the theatre night of the drawing. Civic pride idea is capable of indefinite extension into other city interests—cleanest sidewalks, most attractive store fronts, etc.

"What Can You Do?" Contest

Tie in with your newspaper, selling the idea of getting local talent to perform in the theatre. Get your local jeweler to give prizes in wrist watches, novelty jewelry for women, and a silver loving cup for the best performer. Through your screen, newspaper, program, lobby, invite everybody to do something on your stage on specified nights of the week—your weakest nights. Any kind of performance—monologues, dialogues, dancing of every variety, acrobats, musicians, singers. You should be able to work this stunt up to a point where it becomes an outstanding feature on your program. Audiences decide on the best performance by their applause. Work this out well in advance and make sure you have enough talent for the first two "What Can You Do" evenings by doing a little personal missionary work—if necessary among your own staff.

Family Stunts

Invite the oldest living couple in your town to the theatre, the youngest couple, individuals who have never seen a talking movie, and then arrange for an interview with the paper. Send invitations to the parents of new born babies. Invite the parents of the largest family in town along with their children and grandchildren. Brides and grooms on the eve of their marriage. Much of the information for the above stunts can be gained from the local board of health and the License Bureau or from the birth and marriage columns of the local papers. Another institutional item you should put into effect immediately is to get a list of the dates of birth of as many people in town as you can and send them a pass with a personal note explaining that the theatre wishes them a happy birthday—etc.

The ideas presented on this page have been taken from the initial issue of "St. Louis Showman," serving the Warner theatres in that city under the supervision of Leto Hill, zone manager. Al Zimbalist, the transplanted Jerseyite, now in St. Louis as divisional ad chief, is helping to put out this snappy house organ, and from his fluent pen come these helpful aids.

Various Stage Contests, Civic and Store Tieups Suggested for Current and Future Use to Managers Open for Angles

Anniversaries and Special Events

Activity at a theatre always focuses interest on it. Have you had a theatre anniversary of late? If you don't know what the actual opening date of the theatre was November is as good a time as any to run an anniversary week. It gives you a splendid excuse for rounding up the merchants for cooperative advertising, for decorating your theatre and selling the public on the idea that for your anniversary week you have obtained some of the year's greatest pictures. Promote some special novelty—some little giveaway that you can hand each patron during your anniversary week. Make sure you pick a week of outstanding pictures for your celebration.

Benefits

Always a sure source of income and a builder of future patrons, benefits are invaluable to our theatres. Visit organization heads anxious to raise money. Forestall annual drives for funds by knowing of them in advance and getting into the heads of the drive with your sales talk about the advantage of a theatre benefit to the organization. Remember—it's a thousand times easier to ask an individual to buy a theatre ticket than it is to ask for a flat cash contribution.

Turtle Gag

A great attention getter is a number of small turtles in a tank in a prominent window. Have the back of each turtle lettered with one of the letters in the title of the picture. It is usually well to have two sets of turtles with the letters on their backs. Have a sign in the window of the store stating that if the turtles ever get into line so that they spell out the title of the picture—everyone observing it may rush into the store and ask for a pass. Don't use this stunt on titles with less than five letters or more than eight.

Hodges' "Choo Choo" Perfect Lobby Stopper

Quite a few of the boys are using animated displays to sell the travel idea on "Broadway to Hollywood," and now Jack Hodges, who does that good work for the Gulf Theatres, Tampa (Fla.), sends along a shot of the railroad system he planted in his lobby to call attention to the picture.

You will note in the shot below that Jack has covered both sides of the continent, with the Tampa railroad station in the center.

Miniature Railroad in Lobby

The train kept moving from one end of the country to the other, and the rest of the equipment was all in keeping, such as the signal lights and crossing gates. In addition, Jack dug up a dirigible, flying field with planes, and boats, and reports that this is the first display he has ever seen that really stopped everyone coming and going.

On his "Gold Diggers" campaign Hodges broke out a snappy street float surmounted with a load of good looking gals, in costumes similar to those worn in the picture. In fact this similarity almost led Jack to the jail house, but not quite, and the resultant publicity, of course, did not exactly hurt the picture at the box office.

"Apple Annie" Stunt A Panic in Bridgeport

Morris Rosenthal, one of the earliest and most enthusiastic Round Tablers, is now at the helm of Poli's Majestic Theatre, Bridgeport, (Conn.) and well rested from his vacation in the Canadian wilds, turns on the steam with a sock campaign on "Lady For a Day," in which he duplicated the success of the New York "Apple Annie" stunt, recently put over by George Browne and his crew.

Morris dug up a widowed mother of 13 children and with the help of his local papers, gave the impoverished woman a millionaire 24-hour day. Nothing was neglected from the time she was picked up at her home and in a high powered limousine whisked to the leading hotel where she was awaited by beauty experts and dressmakers from the class stores.

Then adequately attired, she was received by the Mayor, spoke over the radio, went shopping and wound up the day by seeing the picture at the Majestic and being guest of honor at a night club. In addition to acting as fairy godfather to the woman, Morris crashed the Bridgeport papers with all kinds of stories and cuts, with the title and theatre and Rosenthal given prominent mention.

He put this over with the same power as was generated on the New York showing and is entitled to an extra bow for getting such swell returns as the result of his own efforts. Although the stunt is more or less a natural in spots where the papers will go for it, nevertheless, the success of the gag depends upon the skill with which it is handled locally, and leave it to this old campaigner to thoroughly cover every possible publicity and exploitation angle.

Gagged Gal Bally Clicks Big in Philly

A girl, gagged and bound to a lobby theatre post, the stunt originally used at the Pittsburgh Stanley engagement, went over as effectively on the "Missing Persons" date at the Staunton Theatre, Philadelphia (Pa.). Newly appointed Manager Irving Blumberg, and Bert Perkins of Charlie Einfeld's exploitation staff, cooperated in putting this over together with other effective slants.

Many of the atmospheric effects and props used in the New York Strand lobby display were imported for the local date. A tieup with the police department netted strong air plugging on two police hours over different stations, and a complete finger print outfit was also used as part of the bally, this last promoted from the head of the local detective division.

Police type tack and panel cards, thousands of tabloids and five special department store book windows were just a few of the effective ideas utilized by Blumberg and Perkins to whip this one across.

Personal Appearances Feature Star's Birthday

As her fiftieth stage anniversary occurred within a few days of the San Francisco opening of "One Man's Journey," Manager Dick Moss and Ad Chief Ken McGaffey, RKO Hill Street theatre, built their campaign around this event by inviting May Robson with other members of the cast to attend the opening night, making this a gala occasion with all the properties of a regular premiere.

Capitalizing on the fact that the picture concerns the life of a doctor, letters were sent to all local physicians, also to hospitals and medical schools, requesting that these notices be posted on bulletin boards.

Tieups were made with leading business organizations with special offers to their employees, the response to this being very encouraging, with the distribution in one instance of a thousand tickets to employees. Other gags that clicked were a graphology expert bally in the lobby in which patrons were invited to have their hand writing analyzed free of charge and a radio tieup was also put on, with prizes given to listeners-in forwarding written opinions of Lionel Barrymore, star of the picture.

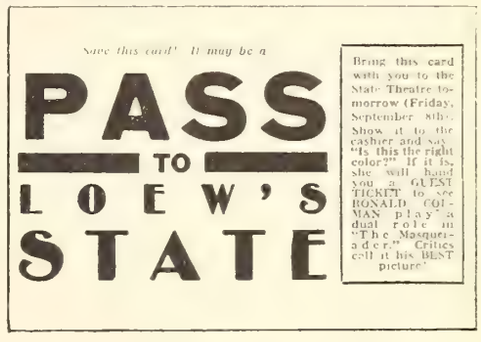
Dick and Ken can be depended upon for click campaigns to drum up those extra admissions in the city on the Golden Gate.

PERSONAL ENDORSEMENT!

J. Real Neth, operator of Neth's Grand, Columbus, Ohio, thought so much of "Be Mine Tonight" that he took newspaper space under his own signature to endorse this Universal feature. His copy was very forceful, enthusiastic and compelling, doing a nice job of selling a picture that does not have the support of known stars.

We Recommend These Cleveland Stunts

These two cuts were described last week in H. M. Addison's story (Loew's Cleveland Divisional Manager). The upper photo shows skating girls distributing heralds for "Broadway to Hollywood," and the lower cut shows the card on "The Masquerader." This was printed in different colors, the white ones good for passes, as explained in story in Sept. 30 issue. The stunt is inexpensive, a cinch to put over, and can be worked on most any picture. Copy on cut explains the idea fully.



Save this card! It may be a

Merchants Cooperate To Advertise Theatre

Since the recently reopening, the Uptown Theatre, Milwaukee (Wis.), Louis Orlove is putting over some very good stuff in cooperation with his neighboring merchants in convincing them that the success of the theatre must also benefit the surrounding section in increased retail sales. With this in mind. Orlove contacted all merchants, convincing them that a theatre card in their windows would be helpful in carrying out the idea.

As a further inducement, Louis gave passes for the window privilege, but that wasn't all. On the back of each pass the name of the merchant to whom it was given was written, and after they were turned in at the box office a letter of appreciation was mailed also asking if the merchant would care to cooperate further by distributing theatre programs in each package in exchange for passes.

Orlove states that quite a number of the merchants expressed their willingness to come in on the idea and that they are even going out of their way to plug the theatre to customers.

Louis is doing a smart thing by contacting the merchants personally and selling them on the cooperation idea as a merchandising help for the stores as well as the theatre. It beats the routine method of distributing window cards and programs, as it convinces the storekeepers that by advertising the theatre they themselves must be benefited.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features which are finished or are in work, but to which release dates have not been assigned, are listed in "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the distributors. Where they vary, the change is probably due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1933, unless otherwise specified.

THOSE INTERESTING

in the pictures you show have called for new ingenuity on the part of the producer. What is more, the photographing of the backgrounds has definitely demanded a special new type of raw film. Eastman Background Negative—recently announced and now widely used—is the answer. Possessing unique characteristics, it dovetails perfectly with this important technical advance. It greatly enhances the beauty, effectiveness, and value of projection background "shots." Eastman Kodak Company. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Vol. 113, No. 4 October 21, 1933

OH, DOCTOR!

OUT in Milwaukee the Central Association of Obstetricians and Gynecologists in convention assembled congratulated Miss Mae West for popularizing plump figures and curves, declaring her style "a boon to motherhood." We didn't know that that was what Miss West was bent on booning, and we are just positive that when Mr. Sam Katz, then Paramounting, elected her to the pictures his mind, too, was on other things, including the box office. Meanwhile the mothers we have talked to about Miss West do not seem to realize even yet that they have been booned.

ERPI AND THE BIRDIE

ONE small yellow and brown St. Andreas roller has just raised merry hell with a big corporation in our industry, and until the problem posed is solved we just can't be sure that we can "sing like the birdies sing." It seems that the engineers of one of the special research laboratories for Electrical Research Products, Inc., called on the Bronx Zoo for a bird full of high frequencies, for testing purposes, and drew a freak canary that takes off from double high C and goes aloft from there, running right up and off the recorder-reproducer curve. Personally we do not care, but when a canary pecks a sound engineer it's news. Our own solution would be to shoot the bird, not the sound.

CONTRACTS NOT SALES

AN article in the news pages of last week's Motion Picture Herald recited estimates which tended to give us a mental picture of happy general sales managers up and down Broadway, feet on desk and cigar a-light, happy over a season's work about done, with sales well on the road to completion for the bulk of the season's output.

We do not want to cast a shadow on such a lovely picture.

But, may we not, in our customary cheery manner, remark that when something more than half of the first run revenue comes from percentage bookings the sales are not really made until the quarters have been spent at the box-office wicket.

What in fact has happened with reference to this large portion of the season's business is that the producer-distributors have chosen their partners for the real selling which is yet to come as the product comes to the screen.

Less and less is the selling of the motion picture a seasonal activity. What remains of "season" is very considerably a relic of program production and distribution, which derived of a consumer attitude which "went to the movies" instead of "going to a show."

Motion Picture Herald's exhibitor mail, continually seeking information about product, largely product which is by conventional definition "already sold," is evidence aplenty that selling is as continuous an operation as production itself. Also, especially among the first runs, there is increasing demand for detailed information for exploitation and selling purposes. Press books, very generally, are not available as early as many exhibitors seem to want them.

To help meet this situation Motion Picture Herald instituted a department of preliminary survey of the more important productions entitled "In the Cutting Room." This department is meeting with decided approval and acceptance among exhibitors, encouraging the Herald to amplify and intensify this attention. "In the Cutting Room" endeavors to deal with the product prior to release but sufficiently late in the production process to let the inventory take real measure of the content. "In the Cutting Room" ventures no evaluations prior to audience presentations, but it does record what has been done with the story and its people. And in this we are engaged in an endeavor to assist the process which sells the product to the ultimate consumer at the box office. The exhibitor wants to know, always.

THE CAVE BUILDERS

TWO engineers were at luncheon at an eagle's nest of a club high up over midtown New York. In the midst of the great panorama spread out before them was the stupendous business of the biggest building operation in the nation's metropolitan history.

"And to think," remarked one of the engineers, drawing diagrams on the menu, "that that whole project was scientifically obsolete before it got off the drawing board. It recognizes, for instance, nothing of air conditioning for offices, nothing of the methods of sound insulation against street noises, and every time a telephone is put in they'll have to cut a hole in the walls."

"Yes—building procedure is all old fogy," his companion remarked. "Same old process of making caves by wrapping rocks around a hole."

"But the way the building laws are and in view of the nature of the influences of the labor unions you couldn't make a building by really modern methods anyway," rejoined the first speaker. "They see to it that a building is made of things that employ riveters and hod carriers. Why when General Electric wanted to demonstrate welded frame construction—stronger and better, and silent, as compared with riveting—Schenectady had to be induced to pass a special ordinance to permit the erection of a building without rivets. Of course, buildings should be made in factories and just buttoned up on the site."

SHOWMAN'S GRIN

Surging upward, assuming the shape of a brighter dawn on the horizon, paradoxically taking the form of a splotch of black ink, is the confidence of first run, suburban exhibitors in the wheat, hog raising area of which Kansas City is the hub. Optimism of definite character has replaced the thick, sticky gloom of the past two years. To NRA, U. S. aid to farmers, hog raisers, public works funds, is much credit given. Normal bank functioning, automobile purchase increase, building activity, retail improvement, all are effective wedges in prying the showman's long close pressed lips apart, resulting in something at least faintly resembling a grin, though not yet of the expansive variety. . . .

BLUE LAWS

Sharp, intelligent was the blow recently struck by Columbia's vice president, Jack Cohn, aimed at the mostly antiquated, bewhiskered "blue laws" which are legion throughout this land of liberty. Serious has the problem always been for the motion picture theatre. Producer Cohn records wide endorsement of his stand, which sees two purposes served: "accommodation of a public eager for harmless recreation, and extra employment for the men and women required to serve it." The liberalization should extend to "everything within reason to create demand and put people to work." The problem, however, is not yet solved. . . .

FILMED EXECUTIONS

Almost startling, quite certain to raise a storm of penological controversy, is the new use to which the motion picture would be put, were famed Chicago Judge Thomas A. Green to see his last week's suggestion for crime deterrence put into practice. Elaborating the recent statement of H. L. Mencken that habitual criminals should be hanged, Judge Green agrees, but adds: "At the same time . . . efforts should be made to prevent first offenders from becoming repeaters. An important step . . . would be the filming of actual executions for their benefit." Part of intelligent but firm education would be motion pictures depicting the fate of criminal persistence. Iron-nerved cameramen wanted. . . .

DUAL EXCEPTIONS

Perhaps taking a hint from preceding developments elsewhere on the issue, Cleveland's Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association this week commenced a restriction on the perennial bogey, double billing, which was in effect a compromise. One showing per week, exceptions in two instances, downtown subsequents to continue dual programs, suburban subsequents to use the double on Saturday matinee, the single day per week shall not be Saturday or Sunday. So one more double feature ban takes effect—with exceptions. . . .

COMPLAINT ANSWERED

Angered to a high pitch of rage, apparently over a long period, has been Sol E. Gordon, board chairman of the Jefferson Amusement Company, Inc., Beaumont, Texas, at the alleged tactics of Rubin Frels, Victoria, Texas, exhibitor, and competitor of Jefferson's unit in that town, aided and abetted, according to Mr. Gordon, by Colonel H. A. Cole, Texas Allied president. Accordingly, to the high-piled desk of Deputy Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt has gone a voluminous brief, challenging the complaint of inability to obtain pictures, pressure causing his house to close, brought hysterically forward by Exhibitor Frels to Deputy Rosenblatt, herewith rhetorically answered by Sol Gordon and associates. Said in preface Mr. Gordon: ". . . we will prove conclusively that Frels' complaint is wholly and entirely without merit." The brief occupies 49 pages.

"BLAH"

To what lengths political charge and counter charge will go may only be seen as each day's news brings election day nearer. Last week Sidney S. Levine succeeded James F. Geraghty as New York Commissioner of Licenses when Mr. Geraghty had the bad grace to announce support of Mayor O'Brien's opponent, Vincent McKee. Last week, also, one Sally Rand "fanned" about the stage of New York's Paramount. This week Mr. Levine ordered the Irving Place and Republic, burlesque houses, to robe their "strippers"—or else. This week also Mr. Levine charged that the Geraghty eye-blinking of "obscene shows" was "solely to embarrass Mayor O'Brien . . . part of the McKee-Flynn plan to put Mayor O'Brien in a bad light." Mr. Geraghty said, "Blah." Reductio ad absurdum! . . .

MILLION-DOLLAR CHORUS

For a mere $1,200,000 has Jesse L. Lasky, Fox producer, insured 60 chorus girls who will cavort, "dangerously," it is agreed, in the forthcoming "I Am Suzanne." Against a simulated St. Moritz background, on a gigantic slide, resembling a bob-sled course, will the girls, all of them, dutifully slide. For the "element of danger" Director Rowland V. Lee sees therein, has Producer Lasky insured his chorus. Grand would be the insurance business if doting parents insured their offspring for every youthful sleigh-ride. . . .

COMMONSENSIBLE

Wise, commonsensible is the policy of John A. Schwalm in the management of his Rialto theatre in Hamilton, Ohio. Many an employee of local industrial plants finds himself without the wherewithal to attend the Rialto ere the next payday comes 'round. To these "strapped" prospective patrons Manager Schwalm extends credit for admissions within reason upon the patron's promise to pay. "They invariably call and settle up," is Mr. Schwalm's proof of policy. Worth any admission loss is the goodwill he is building for himself, his theatre. . . .

INFRA-RED

Brilliantly clear were said to have been the pictures resulting last week when, before a British Kinematograph Society meeting, pictures were taken in darkness with the new infra-red process, later screened. London cables said: "Revolutionary demonstration," "claimed to open unlimited possibilities for filming." The end is not yet. . . .

Eagle Feathers

by TERRY RAMSAYE

¶ If you do not mind our saying so, this NRA motion picture code matter, which started out to be so big and important and constructive, begins to give the dispassionate observer a decided pain in the neck.

¶ You can share with us a grin. Turning through the ruck of two hectic months of editorial matters accumulated on a desk considerably neglected through absences in Washington, today we came upon a memorandum from Mr. Martin Quigley, written a few days before Mr. Sol A. Rosenblatt called that first meeting to order over in the Bar Association Building in New York. Mr. Quigley urged upon his various editors that they should constructively endeavor, while faithfully reporting code affairs, to avoid indications of, or encouragement toward, important controversy. And then the fight started.

¶ As the motion picture industry's warmest friend and severest critic, may we not record that as we sit at present in the middle of the week and the middle of the code clutter, it seems that the industry and its representatives, even the most radical of them, have conducted themselves with considerably more consistency and sanity than the representatives of the NRA. The motion picture industry's several component groups and divisions went into the code making with rather clear definitions of what they wanted and what they deemed required. The government, as represented, on the other hand, by the rulings and discussions of its young men, has been variously high hat, dictatorial and vacillating.

¶ Mr. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, General Hugh S. Johnson and Mr. Sol A. Rosenblatt have talked not a little about what have variously seemed to them conspicuous aspects of the industry, such as "salaries," "the right to buy," etc., etc.

¶ Now, after two months, as these lines are written, nothing pertaining to any of these issues is even approximately settled. In fact, it is not even settled that there is a legal right of the NRA to try to settle them.

¶ It is more than apparent, no matter what the big national emergency may be, no matter if the depression is or has been, as Mr. Bernard Baruch has been quoted as saying, "worse than war," that no legislative act can significantly effect anything toward the solution of issues that are inherent, not only inherent but really essential, function of industry.

¶ The issues are a part, a growing, living, going part, of the activity which is business. Regulation is one thing, an externally applied revolution is another—or would be if it could be applied.

¶ Substantially all that has occurred to date is the diversion and diffusion into thin air of some millions of dollars' worth of executive and creative force in the motion picture industry, with a consequent interruption and delaying of the normal processes of recovery which are making themselves manifest, not in Washington, but out in the channels of business and life where business and living are done.

THIRD CODE DRAFT ISSUED, BUT FINAL WINDUP IS STILL A GUESS

January 1 Is Deadline of NRA for All Codes, However; Latest Version Different Chiefly in Phraseology

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The week brought another revised motion picture code, together with the same predictions of previous weeks that this one will be the last. In any event, the industry now can definitely count on returning not later than January 1 to its regular business of merchandising motion pictures. On that date the National Recovery Administration has set a deadline for all codes for all industry, "special problems" or no. Not even the film people may stay at Washington on code drafting beyond that date.

With the release in Washington Tuesday night of a third revision of the film code, expectations on Capitol Hill were that the much-controverted document which is to be the constitution of the motion picture business is nearing the end of its tortuous trip to the White House.

There will be no more "complete" revisions of the code, announced Solomon A. Rosenblatt, NRA deputy. In fact, he added, much of the new material in the third revision is for purposes of clarification and the number of important changes is small.

Regardless, not a person at Washington—anywhere from Union Station to the White House—would hazard a guess as to when the code finally will be finished, ready for Presidential signature, or when it would become effective. The only tangible information came from a young editor, Mr. "Red" Kann, of Motion Picture Daily, who, arriving in New York from reporting the code activities at Washington, handed over a copy of the third revision and said: "This is the code!"

Possibilities that the code will be in the hands of the President within a comparatively short time are seen in the fact that the several boards of the NRA which must pass on the final draft before it can be submitted to General Hugh Johnson, NRA Administrator, are already actively engaged in a study of the document.

The groups whose approval must be given before the code leaves for the White House include the legal division, consumers' advisory board, industrial advisory board and labor advisory board.

It was understood that the industrial and labor boards, which have kept in close touch with the code drafting, will require but little time for their reviewing. The consumers' board, also, is not expected to raise any serious objections. The greatest difficulty probably will be encountered in the legal division, where law experts will have to study all provisions to determine both their legality under the recovery act and their ability to withstand suit should court action be initiated.

While changes may yet be made in the code, it is generally believed that the document which finally will be sent to General Johnson for submission to the President, will closely follow the third revision.

The third revision continued to omit clauses which would regulate "the right to buy," double features, score charges, foreign films and some other points which had been at issue all through the industry's code negotiations. Duals, however, may be regulated independently in exhibition contracts of the various distributors.

The labor provisions apparently will stand.

Deputy Rosenblatt let it be known that nothing in the NRA will prevent a protesting individual from making the code the subject of legal action. Violations probably will be dealt with by the Federal Trade Commission, with violators handled by the Department of Justice.

Mr. Rosenblatt was seeking an added clause making the final form a contract between motion picture signatories and the President.

Some Legal Points

Of interest to exhibitors was the report, supposedly coming from authoritative sources, that the NRA had given its assurance that where existing scales for projectionists work hardship by reason of unfair classification, they may be reclassified and salaries readjusted, according to the merits of each case, notwithstanding the arbitrary date of August 23, mentioned in the code's scale for operators. Meanwhile, the IATSE was seeking a clear-cut decision on how thousands of existing contracts with exhibitors stand.

Another new code angle which involves exhibitors has to do with the support of the code authority and the clearance and zoning and grievance boards. Added to the estimated $9,000,000 increase in industry overhead because of the code's labor provisions will be the cost of maintaining the various administrative bodies of the code. No decision has been made as to how this cost will be apportioned among the three branches of the industry, but it was said to be a foregone conclusion that each theatre owner will be compelled to contribute.

The third revision of Mr. Rosenblatt's code did not mention the names of the code authority, which will be composed of 10, not 12, as previously indicated, in addition to three Government representatives, who will not vote.

Mr. Rosenblatt continued to decline to make known the code authority's personnel, but it appeared likely that the following would be members; Sidney R. Kent, Fox; Nicholas M. Schenck, MGM; Harry M. Warner, Warners; George Schaeffer, Paramount; R. H. Cochrane, Universal; Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA; Nathan Yamins, Allied; W. Ray Johnston, Monogram.

Revisions in Third Draft

The third revision differed from the previous two drafts principally in changed phraseology, for purposes of clarification. Changes were made to meet protests against provisions formerly incorporated. One stipulation was that extras shall be paid for interviews beyond two hours.

The agency clause (formerly Article 9) was "softened" considerably. Their problems will be placed in the hands of a Hollywood commission instead of being regulated by the code authority. On the agency committee will be ten members, five of whom are to be producers or producers' representatives, with one each, representing agents, actors, writers, directors and technicians, who shall be selected by the administrator (General Johnson) from nominations submitted by the several groups.

Also, instead of licensing agents, which was objected to, the code will provide for their registration.

An entirely new provision, known as Part 4-A, will permit the administration to go beyond the defined intent of the various clauses of trade practices, and order that a set of fair practices be drawn in order to establish harmony in Hollywood, if he finds such action necessary.

Agency Clause "Softened"; Producer Given Only Three Days To Meet Competitive Offer For Player Under Contract

Probably the first important revision of Article 10, governing creative workers, is a modification which gives the producer to whom talent is under contract only three days to meet a competitive offer, instead of a "reasonable opportunity," which might mean three to six months, as stipulated in the second draft. The elimination provisions for exhibitors were clarified and an entirely new provision was written into the code, providing that all members appointed to serve on clearance and zoning boards and local grievance boards shall be "persons of good repute and of good standing in industry, and shall upon acceptance of appointment subscribe and file with the administrator an oath to fairly and impartially determine whatever issue is presented." Another new provision says that no board shall have in its membership more than one representative of any distributor or exhibitor. This is expected to give "better balance."

Under miscellaneous provisions in the third code appears this new clause: "Part 4—The provisions of this code shall be separable."

This clause is what is known as a "saving clause," current in much legislation, and is designed to protect the law—or, in this case, the code—in the event that one section or clause may be adjudged unconstitutional at some future date.

Salary Clauses Unnerve Hollywood

The President's announcement that he was interested in learning whether "unconscionable" salaries were paid to Hollywood production folk and to motion picture executives, immediately precipitated agitation on the West Coast against any effort to incorporate salary-limitations in the code. There followed in Hollywood threats of strike, revolution, walkouts and whatnot, as actors and actresses, represented by the newly organized Screen Actors' Guild, and speaking through Eddie Cantor, president, voiced this opinion: "If proposed Articles 9 and 10 are included in the motion picture code, not an actor of importance in Hollywood will work in a studio which signs the code. These provisions are un-American. The days of slavery are over."

Opposition of Hollywood to the code has been directed against the first and second revisions, but on Wednesday Eddie Cantor, acting for the Screen Actors' Guild, issued a statement in which he said that the actors and writers were highly incensed over the same provisions in the third revision, and that an appeal had been made to Senator Robert Wagner, at Washington.

The press associations flashed word from California that "the film industry was nervous with fear that a Government inquiry into salaries might throw the spotlight on golden secrets hidden during the depression."

This referred, specifically, to a study of the salary question which was undertaken by Deputy Rosenblatt, following the President's announcement. Mr. Rosenblatt said that he had been shown a list of 466 individuals who drew 51 per cent of the producers' payroll.

Producers were asked by Mr. Rosenblatt for data on the salary question, but it was made

WHAT THE EXHIBITORS OF AMERICA ARE PAYING FOR LABOR IN THE THEATRE

With labor winning a hands down victory at the Washington conferences on the industry code, exhibitors are presented with one of two courses. They can either go back to Washington and reopen negotiations with labor leaders and Sol A. Rosenblatt, deputy administrator, or they can agree to the dictates of labor and Mr. Rosenblatt. If they abide by Mr. Rosenblatt's decision, which provides that the August 23 date sets the prevailing theatre wage scales for once and for all, they will have to pay considerably higher scales than existed between July 1 and the August date, when drastic reductions went into effect, with the voluntary agreement of the organized employees, in recognition of the anticipated seasonal decline of attendance and consequently heavier burdens upon the box office intake.

CONTRACTS HELD UP BY FACTIONAL DISPUTES

Annual contracts, which expired between the end of August and October 1, have been held up by failure of the factions to come to an agreement. Those few deals closed by national and regional circuits were negotiated for the most part without increases. Where new contracts have been closed with locals, the deals represent virtual renewals of last year's wage scales, with individual exceptions where reductions made during the banking crisis of the past year have been restored in accordance with stipulations that they should be terminated at the time new contracts were negotiated. Many situations where reductions were made without that stipulation have renewed contracts without restoration of the cuts.

The most important labor contracts for virtually all circuits were to have been closed in September with the IATSE and the American Federation of Musicians locals, but these were being postponed pending settlement of the code problems. However, the IATSE issued a statement to its affiliated locals the end of September which recommended that they proceed with negotiations of new contracts without waiting for adoption of the code. In part the statement read:

"Despite the prevailing belief, as evidenced from the correspondence reaching the New York office, there seems to be a general impression that this code can be waved as a 'magic wand' to bring non-union and adamant managements into the fold, some locals being under the mistaken impression that by the adoption of the code they will encounter no difficulty in securing new agreements. Such a thought is both foolish and unwise and is a serious drawback to their interests, inasmuch as they may enter negotiations unprepared to meet the arguments advanced by the management, and as a result, come out second best."

The IATSE did make some definite concessions from demands which had been troubling exhibitors, especially in small situations, among them being the withdrawal of their original insistence on one man for each projection machine. Also, small-town exhibitors and all communities where the IATSE does not now exist may continue on a minimum basis of 40 cents an hour. Further, labor's latest proposal definitely sets up fair and equitable grievance boards to settle all labor disputes, and in the administrator's own words "there will hereafter be none of this open warfare." This means that all labor disputes in future will be mediated in a manner not heretofore existing, according to Fred Meyer of the Wisconsin and Upper Michigan Motion Picture Theatre Owners.

In view of these developments, that exhibitors in every territory may know of prevailing wage scales in other sections, MOTION PICTURE HERALD presents facts and figures on the situation throughout the country. Scales are presented from each of some 22 key situations, but it is to be noted that the figures are subject to constant change as new agreements are reached locally. In the following listings the stated wage is on a weekly basis unless otherwise specified.

BIRMINGHAM SCALES SHOW WIDE RANGE

At Birmingham, probably no two theatres in the district actually are paying the same scale, and conditions have been so chaotic that operators are understood to have been willing to work for whatever the various theatres could pay, almost regardless of set scales. Practically no theatres in the Birmingham sector operate without some form of union labor, although a few use men from an independent group out of Atlanta; their scales fall far below those of the Birmingham unions, and the unions have failed to recognize them.

UNION (Local M. P. O. 236), (Stage Workers 78)

Stage hands	$51.50 per week
Operators	$40 to $60 per week
Ushers
Doormen	$10 per week
Cashiers
Musicians	$40 per week
Orchestra Leaders	$44, or 10 per cent more than musicians, per week

INDEPENDENT

Operators	$21 per week
Stage hands	$14.50 per week
Ushers
Doormen	36¼ cents per hour
Cashiers
Musicians	$15 to $25 per week

CHICAGO SITUATION SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

The Chicago union theatre situation is reported to have improved materially within the past few months. Present scales follow:

UNION (Operators' IATSE 110)
(Stage hands—Chicago Theatrical Protective Association)

Operators	$75 to $125 per week
Stage hands	$1.68 per hour
Janitors	$25 to $50 per week
Engineers	67½ cents to 77½ cents per hour
Electricians (maintenance)	$1.45 per hour
Musicians	$1.65 per hour

NON-UNION

Ushers	17½ cents per hour
Doormen	17½ cents per hour
Cashiers	26 cents per hour
Watchmen	25 cents per hour

CINCINNATI OPERATORS GET CONTRACT PAY

In Cincinnati, union theatre employees are now paid in accordance with the scales specified in existing contracts. Practically all neighborhood and suburban theatres employ union operators, and those smaller houses using non-union men are decidedly in the minority. In the few cases where non-union men are employed, the wages paid are said to be the result of individual bargaining between managers and operators. A rival union came into the Cincinnati picture about a year ago and provided operators for the neighborhoods and suburbans at considerably less than the scale of Local 327. However, the local contended that the rival organization was not a bona fide union because of lack of affiliation with the American Federation of Labor. That union is now non-existent. Musicians and stagehands are employed only in downtown first runs. Non-union scales are said to have shown an appreciable advance since the inauguration of the National

NEW YORK SCALES

The scales for both union and non-union labor in New York represent a special and complicated problem due in part to the existence of several independent labor organizations. The New York labor status will be analyzed in a forthcoming issue.

CIRCUITS NECESSARY TO PRODUCERS: ZUKOR

Paramount Head Says Circuit Ownership Saved World Film Industry in 1932; Denies Theatres Caused Bankruptcy

Theatres are a necessary adjunct of large production organizations, at least "as the industry is now constituted," is the firm conviction of Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount-Publix and head of its operating subsidiaries. The executive, breaking a three-year silence as far as public utterance is concerned, through the storm and stress, that beset his company during the depression, this week went to bat for producer ownership of circuits.

Mr. Zukor maintained that the obligation of large producers to protect their huge theatre investments, to deliver a consistent supply of good product, saved the motion picture industry of the world from complete collapse in 1932. Had the producers been free of their theatre obligations, he insisted, they would also have been free of the necessity of delivering the best pictures of which they were capable, operating their studios only at such capacity as would have been necessary to keep their plants open.

Denying that the difficulties which led to the Paramount receivership were directly attributable to the tremendous, draining obligation of maintaining a huge theatre circuit, Mr. Zukor told Motion Picture Daily the company's troubles were rather the result of a combination of general economic and corporate circumstances, either of which, faced alone, the company could have withstood. Neither of the two sets of circumstances, depression in the larger sense, nor centralized theatre management, proved producer ownership of theatres in error as a corporate policy, he insisted.

Sees Local Management Sound

"I believe the localized management operation of theatres to be sound," Mr. Zukor declared. "The partnership theatre deals which we are now in the process of making will receive their first test this season. I am confident that the results which will be shown will be all that we expect."

Returning to his contention that producer-owned circuits are not only advisable, but necessary, Mr. Zukor declared, "A company with a big production investment requires the assurance its theatres give to go ahead with its production plans."

"The reorganization work left to be done is largely routine," he said, "but how long it will take to complete cannot be said at this time." This was in reply to a query on the probable date of the receivership termination.

Mr. Zukor, recently returned from the Coast, paid tribute to Emanuel Cohen, vice president in charge of production. "Our pictures have been coming along fine. A great deal of credit is due Emanuel Cohen and the organization he has developed."

While Mr. Zukor, as operating executive, thus expounded his beliefs with reference to policy, and continues actively engaged in the direction of the various subsidiaries which grew out of receivership, the Paramount-Publix trustees in bankruptcy prepared to contest many millions in creditors' claims. The company's referee in bankruptcy, Henry K. Davis, continued to hold regular creditors' meetings, some of them stormy, and the Publix theatre holdings of the corporation continued working out a salvation of partnership deals and local operation.

Trustees To Contest Some Claims

The total claims filed against Paramount-Publix by creditors aggregate approximately $246,000,000, of which about $178,000,000 is said to be in "discredited future rent claims," while many more millions represent claims filed in duplicate, last week declared H. J. Friendly, of counsel for the trustees, Charles D. Hilles, Eugene W. Leake and Charles E. Richardson. With completion of the tabulation of all claims legally entered during the six months' period permitted, which ended September 14, it is ascertained that the trustees will contest all but about $30,000,000 of the claims filed. Uncontested will be bond issue and approved claims of general creditors for merchandise, services and the like. Approximately $71,000,000 of the total is represented by duplicate claims, among them large portions of the various Paramount Broadway bond issues, filed by individuals and bondholders protective committees.

Samuel Zirn, attorney for bondholders, was granted leave last week by the United States circuit court of appeals to appeal a motion for the removal of Mr. Davis, on the grounds of bias, which was denied by the court. The review will be taken on November 6.

Conclude Detroit Deal

At another in the series of meetings of creditors of Publix Enterprises, scheduled for October 23, before Referee Davis, are to be taken up the formation of a new organization to take over Tennessee Enterprises, Inc., the proposed sale of Augusta Enterprises, Inc., to Arthur Lucas and William K. Jenkins, formation of a new company to take over the lease of the Palace, South Bend, Ind., and the proposed transfer of the assets of Publix-South Bend to J. J. Kiser as trustee.

Last week Paramount trustees concluded a ten-months' management deal with George W. Trendle of Detroit for operation of the company's theatre properties in that city. Thereby was settled the rivalry between John Balaban of Chicago and Mr. Trendle over acquisition of Publix Detroit houses. Paramount, which had been threatened with alignment of Publix operating partners in opposition to S. A. Lynch, theatre reorganization head of Paramount, withdrew the houses from the market and concluded the arrangement with Mr. Trendle. The operator will function on a salary basis, taking a percentage of profits. Referee Davis last week approved the arrangement.

TRENDLE CALLS FOR BASIC SHOWMANSHIP

George W. Trendle, who with John H. Kunsky built up the Detroit theatre properties which a few years ago became units of the Publix circuit, has now taken up the managerial reins where he dropped them.

Almost immediately upon resuming management Friday, Mr. Trendle announced radical changes in presentation and showmanship policies, a few of which are:

No smoking.

Rigid censorship of stage and screen attractions.

All new shows starting on Friday.

Elimination of tinseled theatre fronts and a return to the old principle of putting the show on the inside, not the outside.

McDonough Takes Franklin's Posts

J. R. McDonough late on Wednesday assumed the RKO corporate posts which had been left vacant the week before by the resignation of Harold B. Franklin. The board of directors elected Mr. McDonough to the positions formerly held by Mr. Franklin, including the presidency of Keith-Albee-Orpheum, B. F. Keith, Radio City Theatres and affiliated theatre companies, also to vice-chairman of Radio Pictures. Merlin Hall Aylesworth, president of RKO, made the announcement.

A spokesman for the company intimated that Mr. McDonough will concern himself primarily with executive management of the theatre companies, and that an appointment will be made shortly providing Mr. McDonough with an assistant who will have charge of physical operations. It was said the appointment will be made within the organization.

Mr. McDonough entered the RKO situation last July, from the Radio Corporation. At that time it was said that he would participate in the RKO management, although he was not assigned a title.

Meanwhile, Mr. Franklin was preparing to move his personal belongings from the corporation's headquarters. He said Wednesday that his plans will not be ready for public discussion until next month.

United Artists Names Two to Foreign Posts

Williard G. Triest, of the New York foreign department staff of United Artists, has been named district manager on the continent of Europe, under the general direction of J. A. Koerpel in Paris. Mr. Triest will make his headquarters in Stockholm, with supervision over the Scandinavian countries, the Baltic States and Germany.

In addition to this appointment, Arthur W. Kelly, vice president in charge of foreign distribution, has named Lester Sussman manager of the new United Artists office in San Juan, Porto Rico.

THE CAMERA REPORTS

GEORGE ARLISS returns to the Coast after a summer in England, to star in "The House of Rothschild," 20th Century production for United Artists release.

CARNIVAL DANCER is Clara Bow in Fox's "Hoopla." Though far from the raucous honkytonk seems this setting with youthful Richard Cromwell, yet it's in the grove adjoining the Midway.

FIVE MILLIONTH ticket at Radio City Music Hall is taken, appropriately enough, by Irene Dunne, RKO Radio star, at last Saturday's showings. Miss Dunne is credited with outstanding performance in the leading role of "Ann Vickers," then playing.

MISS UNIVERSE, in 1930, and pride of the Louisiana American Legion, Dorothy Dell, is signed by Paramount, her first being Bing Crosby's "Cruise to Nowhere."

INCOMPLETE! But Mickey Rooney, demonstrating the pass to Coach Howard Jones of U.S.C., who appears with him in "Mickey's Touchdown," first for Columbia, blames the receiver.

Says DeCasseres of "Men in White"; Four Other New Plays Analyzed as Screen Material

by BENJAMIN DE CASSERES

MEN IN WHITE

"Men in White," by Sidney Kingsley, is the first serious, grownup show on Broadway of the season. It landed feet first. S.R.O.

There is a fine, straight piece of picture work in this play of a drama in a hospital. But there are certain abortion matters that will have to be handled delicately—even changed. This is no great obstacle. There remains a show that some intelligent director, I hope, is going to plant in the four-star column.

Dr. Ferguson (played by Alexander Kirkland) involves himself with a nurse while he is engaged to be married to the daughter of a millionaire savior, financially, of St. George's Hospital.

The nurse has had, secretly, a bungled abortion. Another operation in the hospital is necessary. Ferguson is going to do it himself. His fiancée, who asks to be present, finds out what has happened. Here is a tremendous situation, played beautifully, restrainedly and with all the human nuances.

The girl dies. Ferguson must choose between his rich sweetheart and medicine. He chooses medicine; but the girl is a future possibility. This in the third act, is superbly worked out.

There are five character studies in this play. Bromberg's Doctor Hochberg is simply great. The drama is moving, tender, grim. It beats "Arrowsmith" any way you look at it.

Picture value, 90 per cent.

SAILOR, BEWARE!

"Sailor, Beware!" is a whirlwind, a super-wow, a knock-'em-stiff. It's another "A Cock-Eyed World"—only more Rabelaisian, more vivid, more picture bang-whizzy. S.R.O. for a year—I'll bet; and people laughing so loudly and continuously that it holds up the show again and again.

"Sailor, Beware!", by Kenyon Nicholson and Charles Robinson, is all U.S.N. It spoofs the navy and the gob It-chasers, who think, dream, talk and live the It. Bawdy and Rabelaisian? All of that—but healthily so, naturally so, humanly so. A whip-saw dialogue that will need some manicuring and delicate massaging for the screen, but of which the gusto and It-ness can be preserved almost intact.

Well, here's the grand yarn in an It-shell.

The U.S.S. Dakota has put into Panama. It's been a long ungirly cruise, mates; and in compartment 108 there's only one topic—the skoits of Panama. Let's go! We're It-daffy!

Now Dynamite Jones is the Don Juan, the Casanova, the Big Bull of the Dakota. He has a legendary reputation: no girl has ever withstood him. (For Spencer or Lee Tracy?)

But at the Idle Hour Café there dawdleth a one hundred per cent virge called "Stonewall" Jackson. She's the Gibraltar of Chastity among all these push-overs of the café.

And up looms Dynamite Jones, U.S.N., who can reduce all female Gibraltars and "Stonewalls" as easily as a shark can swallow a catfish—so he says.

So here's the wild fun: the whole battleship, also practically the whole city of Panama, is betting pro and con on whether Dynamite will make "Stonewall" before the battleship sails—in twenty-four hours. One fellow even has his father's watch on Dynamite. The girls at the café are betting that "Stonewall" cannot be made by Dynamite.

But "Stonewall" capitulates before the boat sails. Dynamite is really in love. So is she. But the sex-sport—like a world series or an election—is uproarious.

In spite of all censorships, this satiric farce must be picturized; and it will be shown to S.R.O. in every picture-house in the English-speaking world—or I'll eat my bronze Buddha.

Picture value, 100 per cent.

AMOURETTE

Leo Bulgakov, who did such a fine job in directing "One Sunday Afternoon," did not repeat in "Amourette," an insipid and conventional dose of boob-porridge done over from an old vaudeville sketch by Clare Kummer.

The year is 1840. The place is Tuckerton, Mass. Discovered: Amsey Tucker in bed. Amsey is a hypocritical scion of the godly, inbitten crew that butted into Plymouth Rock in 1620.

Amsey has a daughter, Amourette. She has run away to the Sodom of the time, Duxbury, Mass. Now, the Rev. Hiram Hollowell was on the stage with her. Tongues begin to wag in New England fashion and Amsey is all het up morally.

The town of Tuckerton practically emigrates to Duxbury to investigate. It is even whispered that Amourette is going to blessed-event. But the Holy Tuckertonians will see that she is did right by—by gosh!

Nothing to't, boys. Amourette is still a virge. It was another fellow from Buffalo she was in love with—a parson, also; pulchritudinous and mentally flatulent.

That's the play; but the picture might shape up into a delightful vehicle for Janet Gaynor.

Picture value (with Gaynor), 90 per cent.

KULTUR

What price propaganda? And how far can the screen venture? Ticklish subject.

The first of the Hitler satires arrived on Broadway. Clumsy and flat; but it might have been an uproarious farce if it had been treated differently.

Professor Koerner, a surgeon in "the Fatherland," is socially ostracized and expelled from his university because he aids members of "an outcast race." Even his family give him the skids.

A son-in-law is bilking the professor to carry on an affair with a Jewess. And then some Aryan tree-peeper discovers an ancestor of Koerner's who had a load of Mosaic corpuscles in his blood. Ach!

Now, the Blessed Aryan Chancellor is hurt in an accident. Koerner, the great surgeon, the despised, is the only one who can save the Precious Thing. Blood transfusion is necessary.

And the grand chance that the playwright missed lies just there. The blood that goes into him is Jewish! This fact should have been the beginning and kernel of the play. And then we'd have had a farcical "Abie's Irish Rose"—maybe.

But it ain't!

Picture value, 10 per cent.

HOLD YOUR HORSES

"The Winter Garden," long a first-run picture house, went "straight," with Joe Cook, Harriet Hoctor, Rex Weber and a raft of a cast in a not very original musical play of the late nineties called "Hold Your Horses." The hokum wheezed asthmatically.

As pictures are going musical, there may be some producer who will take a chance on this pot-pourri. If Joe Cook cannot be called back to pictures it would fit the fantastic Ed Fields down to the ground.

The principal part is Broadway Joe, a cabby who has a cab that carries all the crazy inventions that only Joe Cook can concoct, including a cooking stove.

The first New York subway is about to be built, and a gang of crooked contractors pick Joe for Mayor. He's elected with his cab and all.

There are conspiracies to kill him and other nertzy stuff, which will be funny on the screen, but were boresome to ultra stiffness on the stage.

Lillian Russell, John L. Sullivan, Anna Held, Diamond Jim Brady and the Floradora Sextette are all in "Hold Your Horses."

Picture value, 40 per cent.

Milwaukee Women in Drive To Bar Children from Films

A campaign to bar children from unwholesome motion pictures has been started by the Milwaukee Woman's Club with the appointment of a committee to determine the possibility of state legislation. It was stated that if they are unsuccessful in their efforts to prevent the production of terror pictures, the club will work for a law prohibiting children under 14 from attending film theatres.

IOWA LEADERS AWAITING CODE

A change in the present wage scales in Iowa towns awaits the final action of the Washington code conferences. New contracts probably will provide for two men in a booth in every theatre in the state, according to George Hartnett, secretary of the Des Moines IATSE Local 286. While the figures given are indicative only of present wage scales in Des Moines proper, a few data on the situation in outlying sectors prove interesting by comparison. In Mason City, three operators work a 56-hour week and receive from $70 to $90 each. The theatres close at suppertime and the three men alternate, so that the hours vary. In Muscatine, three operators work the same week and receive $70 to $80 each. In Cedar Rapids, two theatres employ four operators on a 42-hour week and pay them $85, while three theatres employ four men on a 56-hour week, paying $175 for the four. In Waterloo, four men work five hours each, and in Class "A" houses they divide $215 weekly; Class "B," $175, and Class "C," $110. Ottumwa stands by one-man operation on a 23-hour week, with from $60 to $80 as the weekly stipend; Burlington, one man, 23 hours, and $53 to $78 a week; Fort Dodge, one man, $41 to $85 for three hours and 20 minutes per day. Clinton theatres employ two men, paying them from $52.50 to $89 for the two per week. Dubuque employs two men at all times on an eight-hour day and in Class "A" houses they get $45 each, with Class "B" paying them $27, with no matinees. In Sioux City, there are two men at all times; four men working five hours each; two men, six hours each, and three men, six and one-half hours each. Class "A" houses pay one operator $233, one $216 and one $208. Class "B" houses pay one man $125 and two men $100 each. Class "C," two houses $85 and two houses $70. In Marshalltown two men work eight hours a day for from $38 to $50. The Des Moines figures follow:

UNION (Local 286, IATSE)

Operators .....$20 to $60 per week (four men required)
Maintenance and Electricians (IATSE) .....$60 per week
Musicians (when used)...$2.50 per performance)

NON-UNION

Ushers .....$14 per week
Cashiers .....$14 per week

BLANKET CODE USED AT HOUSTON

In Houston, Texas, the blanket code of the NRA is in effect in all theatres employing non-union workers, and is adhered to by union labor, with the exception of musicians, who are used in only one theatre. Operators work in two shifts with but one man in a booth at a time. One stage hand is employed full time in each theatre, and more are employed when occasional shows necessitate this.

UNION (Local 279, IATSE)

Operators .....$62.50 per week
Stagehands (Local 51, IATSE).....$50 per week
Musicians (MPA 65).....$35 to $65 per week

NON-UNION

Porters .....
Ticket takers .....
Ushers.....$12.50 to $20 (48-hour week)
Maids .....
Clerks, etc. .....$20 to $35 per week
Executives .....$75 to $125 per week

NEW CONTRACTS AT KANSAS CITY

Under new contracts negotiated by three Kansas City downtown first runs with Local 170, IATSE, operators' salaries have been increased from $69.60 to $82.50 per week. This is now the basic scale at such houses as Loew's Midland, the RKO Mainstreet and the Publix Newman. Four operators, two to a shift, are employed at each house. Technically, the new scale is not considered a boost over the prior scale, as the old wage represents a cut from $120 top provided in basic scale contracts effective Sept. 1, 1930, for two years. On concessions by the union, these contracts later were extended. Cuts brought the top down to $96.05, then to $87. Following the bank closures last April, the union granted a further cut, agreeing to $69.60 until August 1 of this year.

The union sought to restore salaries to the $87 level for next year, but after several weeks of negotiation finally compromised on $82.50, which is retroactive to Sept. 1, 1933. The custom of entering into two-year contracts has been discarded in favor of one-year agreements.

New contract negotiations with stage employees and electricians are still in progress. The union, last April, took a 20 per cent cut, from approximately $84 to $67.15. The union now demands a 25 per cent increase, restoring salaries to the old level, while, it is understood, the circuits are insisting on continuance of the low figure.

Suburban theatre men are said to be preparing for new contract demands by the IATSE operators' local. The union granted one-man-in-a-booth operations several months ago. Current contracts expire November 30.

Union labor scales in the Kansas and Missouri territories depend on various factors, it is understood, the size of the town, strength of union, in addition to the usual considerations of seating capacity and admissions. Only larger towns employ union help, such as Topeka, Wichita, Joplin, Springfield and Hutchinson. Current wages for operators in these sectors average about $50 or $55 per week. Most towns employ but one man in a booth, but in St. Joseph two-man operation still holds, with the scale commensurate with that in Kansas City, except at first runs, where the top is approximately $70 per week per man.

Wages for non-union labor in towns outside of Kansas City depend on general prevailing wages. Specific NRA blanket code minimums are in force for 40 hours weekly. Theatres operating less than 40 hours weekly pay help from $5 per week up. Theatres in some smaller towns are known to hire high school boys who desire to learn the projectionist's trade, for a few dollars a week. These, however, cannot be classed as operators, experienced men in the smaller towns receiving from $17 to $25 per week.

In Kansas City, the suburban contract scale, as of December 1, 1932, is for two men in a booth, but under the agreement of April, 1933, only one man is employed, at wages 33 1/3 per cent higher than the contract scale for one man. Existing salaries in suburbans are based on seating capacity, admission prices, run and hours of work. The scale for 35½ hours per week is $38.70 to $60. Actual figures on the entire Kansas City situation follow:

UNION

Operators (Local 170, IATSE) .....$82.50 (first run) per week
Operators (suburban)..$38.70 to $71.23 per week
Operators (Independent M. P. O.; rump union) .....$35 per week

Local 61, International Carpenters & Joiners $9 per day (8-hour day)
Engineers (stationary IUOE, Local 6) $50 per week (first runs)

WORK SPLIT UP AT MILWAUKEE

Wages paid in Milwaukee theatres for labor are reported as varied and erratic, depending as they do upon the final outcome of the code. The Motion Picture Operators' Union, Local 164, IATSE, is operating under the NRA on a 40-hour weekly basis. In many cases where operators were working more than 40 hours, the work has now been divided at no additional expense to the exhibitor, thereby providing for additional operators.

SAN FRANCISCO MEN UNDER VOLUNTARY CUT

In San Francisco, stage hands of all grades benefit by a high overtime rate which entitles them to $2 per hour for extra work between 1 a. m. and 8 a. m., and for overtime between 8 a. m. and 1 a. m. they get $1.50 for each overtime hour. Ten hours within the 14 hours are allowed on opening and closing days of shows; eight hours in 12 on all other days within the 48 hours. Any time in excess of 48 hours per week is paid at the mentioned rates. Stagehands of IATSE Local 16 work not more than six days a week.

Operators' overtime is paid at the rate of time and one-third in excess of regular six-hour shifts in Class "A" houses. Class "A" house operators received $84.60 per week before the recent cut which brought them down to the scale which follows. Class "B" theatre operators are paid overtime at the rate for Class "A" men, as are Class "C" and Class "D" operators. Before the cuts Class "B" men received $72 weekly; Class "C" men $81 for the regular man, and Class "D" $81 for the regular man. The operators are now said to be negotiating for recovery of the scales paid before the voluntary cut and settlement is expected within a few weeks.

Members of the San Francisco Musicians Union, Local 6, are not permitted to work seven days per week and each is required to take one day off, paying a substitute one-seventh of his salary. In addition to this deduction from his salary, which reduces the musician salary quoted in the following, he must also pay out four per cent of their salaries—two to the local union and two to the national federation.

Salaries paid non-union workers in San Francisco theatres vary with each circuit or manager. The lists indicate the minimum salaries paid the non-organized theatrical employees. There is a minimum wage law in California for women employees. The entire listing follows:

UNION

SAYS ROSENBLATT OF MINIMUM PAY

Said Sol A. Rosenblatt, deputy administrator for amusements of the NRA, in an address before the American Federation of Labor Convention last week:

"There is no longer time for talk and twaddle. . . . The Good Book cautions us against permitting men to earn wages only to put them in a bag of holes . . . unless the minimum wages provide an adequate living wage for labor, we are bound to have strikes. This means in simple words that unless we not only pay labor a wage worthy of its hire, but an adequate wage, we are merely adding to industrial unrest and thereby to economic waste. . . . I say and submit to you that not only shall we fix a minimum wage which is adequate and which is a living wage, but we must also see to it that in fixing such minimum wage the standards which have been built up over a long period of years are not impaired or destroyed."

ALL TAMPA HOUSES HAVE IATSE CONTRACTS

In Tampa, St. Petersburg and some other cities on the west coast of Florida, operators and stage hands are organized under the IATSE. All Tampa theatres have contracts with this union for operators. Two men are employed each day in all theatres operating from 1 p. m. to 11 p. m., one man operating the first five hours, and the second man from 6 to 11 p. m. In de luxe houses, of which there are two in Tampa, two men are employed for each shift. In all other houses only one man to a shift is required. Stage hands' working arrangements are the same, but no theatres in Tampa are presenting stage shows at this time. The Tampa scale follows:

UNION

Operators (IATSE)....$50 per week (5-hour day)
Stagehands (IATSE): Same scale when employed, but none working at this time.

NON-UNION

All other classifications receiving minimum $14 at least, as provided in the NRA blanket code.

OPRATORS' RAISE AT WILMINGTON

The operators' Local 473 in Wilmington this week announced a wage increase in the new contract, due to abrogation of several concessions made in the previous one while the new scale was not divulged.

At Loew's Parkway, first-run, the chief operator was receiving $60 a week and his assistant $40. Stagehands of Local 284 received $40 in first-runs and $35 in second-runs.

Capitol Theatre Has 14th Birthday

The Capitol theatre on Broadway will be fourteen years old next Tuesday. It opened on October 24, 1919.

Major Edward Bowes, managing director of the theatre, in association with Messmore Kendall and others, built the Capitol in 1918. As managing director he has guided the policy since the day of its opening. Major Bowes is a vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures,, and also serves as liason between the Capitol theatre and the radio public.

Built immediately after the war, the Capitol was the first de luxe cinema house of its kind, and features Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures. Elaborate stage shows, consisting of stars of the screen, stage and radio worlds are presented weekly, under the personal supervision of Louis K. Sidney, production chief of the theatre.

The DuPont family was represented on the board of directors of Moredall Realty Corporation, owners of the theatre in 1918, when the Capitol was built.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

ACROSS the muddy waters of the Mississippi River and into the East comes a story from John C. Moffitt, critical critic of Kansas City's Star, about Louis B. Mayer, son-in-law David Selznick, "Night Flight" and maturity in picture making.

It seems that when young Selznick thought his "Night Flight" was completed he showed it to his father-in-law with a certain understandable pride.

"It's a thrilling picture," said Mr. Mayer, "but what the devil are they flying for?"

"What?" asked David.

"What are they flying for? You have terrific heroics, death and sacrifice and not a thing that will justify all this suspense and danger in the minds of audiences. Never ask an audience to sympathize with characters that are acting like fools, David."

So they went to work on the picture again and injected the story of the infantile paralysis epidemic and the vital serum that is being rushed across the Andes. That gave all the heroics dignity.

Two headlines in the nation's press last week gave prominence to the Hollywood salary situation and its relation to the industry's code. Which reminds us of the Alabama Negro who had been lodged in jail, chained, tied and placed in a straight jacket. One day he was visited by a friend, another plantation worker, who, after seeing the prisoner's predicament, said, "Why, they can't put you in jail."

"Everyone applauded him, including the guest of honor. . . . Mr. Rao was the hit of the evening."

IN place of Eddie Cantor, the current champion for maintaining high Hollywood salaries, we nominate George Arliss, actor.

Mr. Arliss returned to these shores last week, fresh from a vacation along the countryside of his native England. Hardly had the U. S. Customs inspectors affixed clearance stamps to the Arliss baggage, when the scribes of Park Row and Times Square stormed United Artists' office on Seventh avenue, to learn whether this mature 65-year-old mind didn't have something to say about the prevalent and highly publicized controversy over regulating Hollywood salaries.

Being an actor, they had expected that Mr. Arliss would uphold the scale, at least. But he went twice as far, saying: "Salaries of stars in Hollywood are not high enough! They'll have to go up." Hollywood will love him for that.

Mr. Arliss—who has spent 46 of his 65 years in theatricals—appeared to be strongly established on the gold standard, what with a gold monocle, heavy gold watch chain spread across his vest and fastened to a gold timepiece, a gold cigaret case, deep gold-tipped cigarets, a few wide gold bands on his wrinkled fingers, heavy gold key chain, gold tie pin.

And now that RKO's "Greater Show Season" has ended, the circuit's managers have another job on their hands—the "Autumn Festival." The management believes it's going to be a better job, even Phil Reisman feeling sure that almost everything is in the managers' favor. Phil told his field men that he's "as sure as the Scotsman who was never more sure than when he was in doubt." That makes it certain.

THE STRONGEST EDITORIAL VOICE of a daily newspaper is usually heard by some few hundreds of thousands, but millions see and listen to motion picture newsreels. Statesmen and rulers the world over know only too well the value of the newsreel, particularly the importance of continuing the goodwill of the editors of these celluloid disseminators of headline happenings. That's why rare photographs of Franklin Roosevelt, Mussolini, Herbert Hoover, the late Calvin Coolidge, Al Smith, Ramsey MacDonald, kings, queens and jokers—all autographed with warm greetings—cover the expansive walls of Truman Talley's Fox Movietone headquarters in the heart of "Hell's Kitchen" on Tenth Avenue in New York.

Mr. Talley's men in the field, too, appear to have the happy faculty of cementing friendly relations with the people who really count in the capitals of the world. We learned a lot about that on a wintry afternoon last March while at the inauguration in Washington, as we observed young and likeable Arthur DeTitta, Fox News man on Capitol Hill, hustling about the White House. And didn't Metro's Fox-Hearst Newsreel studio "train" roll merrily down Pennsylvania Avenue on March 4, the only commercial "float" in the inaugural parade?

Coincidentally, while some people are aware of the fact that Mr. Roosevelt is probably the keenest motion picture and newsreel enthusiast that ever sat in the state chair at the White House, there are but few who know that the President for years has been writing his biography—in celluloid.

Mr. Roosevelt has a duplicate of every foot of film which has picturized his activities since he entered public life, many years ago, and Mr. Talley's newsreel organization now supplies the President with all scenes in which he appears. If Fox News doesn't film all the events in which Mr. Roosevelt appears, Talley secures the missing ones from the other newsreels, patching the scenes together in continuity. Mr. DeTitta then presents the film, mounted on a reel all ready for screening, at the front door of the White House.

Omigosh! Paramount says that Ernst Lubitsch is the most glamorous of directors! They explain that other directors, visiting a Lubitsch production, observe his quiet modus operandi—"no fuss, few words and a smooth flow of accomplishment that ripples along like the rhythmic beat of simple verse."

"The answer," they said, "lies in watching him for more than the average visitor's span of time. Then can be perceived an unending effusion of vitality that bangs like an X-ray from his owlish eyes."

But Mr. Lubitsch's unending effusion of vitality is not half so important. "The secret, too," adds Paramount, "is in the way he whacks away at his chewing gum."

WIDE RANGE, HIGH FIDELITY HIGHLIGHT SMPE SESSION; RE-ELECT GOLDSMITH

Acceptance by Exhibitors and Public Appreciation of New Facilities Noted at Chicago Convention; Election Close

by HARRY HOLQUIST

The wide acceptance and appreciation of wide range and high fidelity reproducing and recording equipment was the highlight of subjects before the Fall convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers at the three-day meeting at the Edgewater Beach Hotel in Chicago this week. In the words of A. N. Goldsmith, who was re-elected president of the Society, the acceptance by exhibitors and the public appreciation developed in the past year marks another epoch in the achievements of the engineering and allied fields in the motion picture.

Wide range and high fidelity were pictured by Dr. Goldsmith as more than mechanical improvements. "The more subtle emotions, and the greater freedom of expression and action possible by this recent development is a contribution of utmost importance to the theatre and showmanship at large," Dr. Goldsmith told the convention.

Close Vote for President

At the opening day's session the convention was mildly rocked by the unusual turn of events in the election. For the office of president Dr. Goldsmith was elected by one vote over L. A. Jones of Eastman Kodak Company. The ballot count gave the incumbent 69 votes and Mr. Jones 68. Other officers elected were O. M. Glunt, assistant director of apparatus development, Bell Telephone Laboratories, New York, vice president; J. H. Kurlander, commercial engineer, Westinghouse Lamp Company, Bloomfield, N. J., secretary; T. E. Shea, special products engineer, Bell Telephone Laboratories, New York, treasurer; H. Griffin, general sales manager, International Projector Corporation, New York, governor (re-elected); W. B. Rayton, director of scientific bureau, Bausch & Lomb Optical Company, Rochester, N. Y., governor.

Discusses School Film Use

Business is definitely on the upgrade, C. F. Strodel, who represented Barney Balaban, told engineers at the opening luncheon. Mr. Strodel said that officials of the circuit faced the Century of Progress Exposition with considerable trepidation but that their fears proved groundless. In August of this year the 35 Balaban & Katz houses played to one million more admissions than the same month a year ago. The Fair enabled B & K to reopen four houses. The stimulant given business in the past few months will continue, Mr. Strodel predicted.

Use of commercial films in educational institutions was the subject of a talk by Donald P. Bean of the University of Chicago. Mr. Bean took issue with attempts of exhibitors to keep commercial films out of theatres as indicated in the Washington code discussions. He viewed as narrow any efforts to keep from schools films which have historical or other angles of value in education.

In the report of Secretary J. H. Kurlander it was revealed that the society membership now total 652. A plan for a new setup in operation was introduced for consideration by the members.

Numerous Papers Are of High Caliber; Greater Freedom of Expression for Players Is Seen in Use of Wide Range

by F. H. RICHARDSON

Papers read and delivered at the early sessions of the convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, held in Chicago at the Edgewater Beach hotel, gave every indication that the meeting was setting a high mark in the caliber of discussions.

One by F. L. Hopper of Hollywood, of Electrical Research Products, Inc., pointed out that "Wide Range" improvements permit of greater freedom of expression and action by players and a much greater degree of naturalness and fidelity in recording.

S. K. Wolf, consulting engineer of Erpi, New York, declared that extension of frequency and volume ranges in recording and reproducing sound has made theatre people more conscious of the high importance of perfection in theatre acoustics. Another Erpi member, F. C. Willis, of New York, dealt with the extension of range of reproduced frequencies over that previously considered acceptable.

Next J. O. Baker, of RCA Victor, Camden, came in with a paper dealing ably with 16 mm. sound-on-film. "It is possible," he said, "to successfully record as high as 9,000 cycles on 16 mm. stock."

G. W. Baker and M. A. Smith, of the United States Gypsum Co., Chicago, in a paper on practical application of acoustics in theatres, treated of the relation of projectionists, the projection room monitor and sound equipment with theatre acoustics.

Automatic Printer Discussed

Automatic change-over devices were discussed by Alf Pritchard, Coronado, Cal.

Recent developments in the Bell & Howell fully automatic printer were discussed by A. S. Howell and R. Fawn Mitchell, Chicago. The use of the talking picture as an additional educational tool at the University of Chicago, which already has five 35 mm. picture-sound projection installations in its various buildings, was described by Harvey B. Lemon, professor of physics. It seems the university is pretty thoroughly "sold" on the sound picture as an aid in education.

In a paper "The Non-Rotating Direct Current High Intensity Arc," A. C. Downes discussed the possibilities in utilizing this type of light source for projection.

Economies in projection lamps were traced by E. W. Beggs, of Westinghouse Lamp Company, Bloomfield, N. J., in most enlightening and interesting fashion, while H. E. Decmp, Western Electric Company, Chicago, told of the many interesting manufacturing problems confronted by equipment makers.

"Further Investigations of Ground Noise in Photographic Sound Records," by Otto Sandvik, Eastman Kodak Company, was really an investigation of the growth of ground noise during successive stages of the processes involved.

Pettijohn Manages Candidate Alicoate

Dr. Charles Clyde Pettijohn of 28 West Forty-fourth Street, New York, this week announced the candidacy of Mr. John Wilde Alicoate, publisher of Film Daily, 1650 Broadway, for membership on the Board of Aldermen of the village of Harrison, New York.

Dr. Pettijohn is Mr. Alicoate's campaign manager, which is in itself a guaranty of a great constructive movement in behalf of the common people.

Both the candidate and the campaign manager have previously been alleged to live in fashionable Rye on the Westchester shore, but politics make strange geography.

The campaign, according to Dr. Pettijohn, will be entirely speechless, in line with his long standing Democratic position that the less said the better, about anything. The appeal to the voters will consist of opening a dark motion picture theatre in Harrison for seven nights of shows, made up of motion pictures from Broadway and such divertisements as may be devised by the Colored Boys Alicoate for Alderman Club, no doubt organized recently on a dark night.

Mr. Alicoate's prospects of election when Harrison goes to the polls on November 7, are rendered bright by the forecasts of his manager. It will be remembered that Dr. Pettijohn served his political novitiate under the late Thomas Taggart of Indianapolis and French Lick, of Pluto water fame.

Newsreel Jars The Newspaper

An unusual pictorial record of the manner in which attempts by a sheriff's deputies to break up a picket line gave rapid rise to a disastrous riot in which one man was killed and several injured, was last week recorded by camera and microphone for Pathe News at Ambridge, Pa., when striking mill workers and authorities clashed. On the scene for Pathe were Thomas Baltzell at the camera and Al Kalbfleisch handling the sound recording.

Dodging flying bullets and missiles, none of which found their mark, according to RKO's announcement of the newsreel achievement, the two screen reporters stood their ground to "get the picture." Editorial attention was drawn to the dramatic intensity and significance of the pictures, and, says the company announcement, Arthur Brisbane, Hearst executive, declared in his column, "Today," "President Roosevelt was to see the subject and that he would not soon forget it, and would want others in his administration to see it."

"Dramatic power and national significance" is credited to the subject by the New York Herald Tribune, according to RKO, which releases the Pathe reel. The Washington Post comment, as indicated by RKO, was to the effect that the newsreel shot makes startlingly clear what conditions are in places that seem remote but might be anywhere, and calls it a "thrilling and blood-chilling" scene.

TRAVELERS . . .

Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, president of the SMPE, led a delegation of motion picture engineers from New York to convention in Chicago.

Herschel Stuart, Publix operator in Detroit, was in New York.

Marcel Mekelburg, of Century exchange, Boston, was in New York.

Norman Moray, Vitaphone sales executive, was due back in New York from Cleveland.

Marion Nixon returned from Europe.

Valentine Mandelstamm, scenarist, arrived in New York from Europe.

Karl Krug, United Artist home office publicist, returned to New York from Pittsburgh.

Herman Zohbel, treasurer of Radio Pictures, and William Clark, assistant treasurer, arrived in Hollywood from New York.

Henry Ginsberg, Hal Roach manager, returned to Culver City from New York.

William Sistrom, Radio producer, was due at Fort Myer, Virginia, from Hollywood, for exteriors for "Rodney."

Warner Reports Studios' Payroll Raise $505,500

A total payroll increase of $505,500.75 in Coast studios as of September 1 compared with June 1 of this year, is reported from Hollywood by Jack L. Warner, chairman of the NRA there. The administration's re-employment plan is credited with the increase.

More extras were employed during September than in any similar period since the advent of the talking picture, the figures breaking a record standing seven and one-half years. September placements totaled 39,762. Studios were declared by Mr. Warner to be using the required number of persons in all scenes calling for extra talent.

North Dakota Bans Sunday Showings by Close Margin

North Dakota citizens refused to allow Sunday film performances by a margin of 812 votes in the special election last month, complete unofficial returns show. Sunday performances are now banned by state law.

S. Z. Poli Regains Fox-New England

Backed by the New York banking firm of Halsey-Stuart, S. Z. Poli returned to his old stand as one of New England's outstanding theatre operators, this week, when he purchased the assets of Fox-New England, former Poli properties.

Following the public auction of Fox-New England Theatres assets in Hartford, Conn., and Springfield, Mass., this Friday, a new corporation shortly will take over operation of the former Poli houses. Mr. Poli and Halsey, Stuart & Co. will be in control.

John A. McNaughton and W. B. F. Rogers, New York attorneys, were acting for Halsey-Stuart on Monday when they purchased for $650,000 a block of first mortgage bonds with a face value of $3,326,000 at a sale held by Special Master Thomas J. Spellacy, acting under instructions of the United States district court at Hartford. These bonds had been pledged as security for an issue of debentures. Their transfer is a part of the reorganization plan.

At the auction of all the Fox-New England assets this Friday, bids will be presented by Lou Sagal, now in control for Mr. Poli, and David Henderson, acting for Halsey, Stuart, as reorganization managers.

Eastern Theatres Corporation is the name of the underwriting syndicate which handled the repurchase of the bonds, which had been on deposit with the Guaranty Trust Company as collateral.

The new name for the Poli circuit will be Poli-New England, Inc. Mr. Sagal said Tuesday night that he hoped to have the new company in operation between November 1 and November 15.

MPTO Unit for Detroit Planned

A new organization of exhibitors in the Detroit territory, to become an affiliate of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, is the aim of meetings this week. The movement has its origin in complaints against Mid-States Theatres, buying combine in which H. M. Richey and J. C. Ritter of Allied States are reported officers.

Adrien Rosen, Detroit attorney, said he had authority to act for 80 Detroit theatres. He is identified with counsel in suits opposing Mid-States buying activities. Mr. Rosen charged that 20 houses not affiliated with Mid-States are having difficulty in obtaining product.

Kansas City Action Asks Midland Investment Receiver

A suit in equity was filed in circuit court, Kansas City, on Tuesday, seeking an accounting of profits and a temporary receiver for Midland Investment Co., which owns Loew's Midland and the adjacent Midland office building. The plaintiffs are Herbert M. Woolf, M. B. Shanberg and F. H. Reid, owners of a half interest in the company. Loew's, Inc., owns the remaining interest. The initial hearing has been set for next week. Loew's has engaged former Senator James A. Reed as attorney, indicating strong resistance to receivership is planned.

"CODE OFFENDS NRA REQUIREMENTS"

Independent motion picture producers, distributors and exhibitors who had previously voiced opposition to the revised code prepared by Solomon A. Rosenblatt, NRA deputy, finally presented to the National Recovery Administration, last Friday, their analysis of and suggestions concerning the revised code.

Signed by counsel for the independents' committee, Abram F. Myers, Jacob Schechter, Mitchell Klupt and Milton C. Weisman, the memorandum covers both the first and second code revisions, and concludes with the observation that both codes offered by the deputy administrator "offend each these (NRA) requirements":

A brief literal summarization of the independents' document, in its own language, analyzing Mr. Rosenblatt's code follows:

PART I

1. CODE AUTHORITY, CLEARANCE AND ZONING BOARDS, GRIEVANCE BOARDS

Functioning in the manner provided in the first revision of the code, the Code Authority and clearance and zoning and local grievance boards:

(a) Would vest complete control of the industry in the Hays organization; (b) Would divest independents of protection against predatory practices of major producers as they now enjoy under anti-trust laws; (c) Would violate Constitutional rights of independents by taxing them for support of boards created in interest of majors and by compelling them to furnish evidence to be used against them in criminal cases; (d) Would create a super-combination; (e) Would not settle issues which now divide the industry, but would aggravate them.

The analysis then explains what is said to be the unfairness of a producer-controlled Code Authority, and the other proposed boards, charging "domination," instead of "arbitration." Other charges:

Producer control assured in Code Authority.

Code Authority may delegate power to committees having no independent representatives.

Trade associations (local exhibitor associations) ignored.

The power to regulate clearance and zoning is the power to put independent theatres out of business.

Clearance and zoning boards will be dominated by major producers.

Boards are directed to maintain and increase clearance, not lessen it.

Procedure favors first-runs and appeals are unduly burdensome.

Grievance boards are impotent to give effective relief.

Grievance boards, like clearance boards, will be dominated by producers.

PART II

1. SUBSTITUTIONS

(First revision, C-3, p. VC-1; second revision, DV3, p. S 8-9; Exhibitors' Proposal 15; Distributors' Proposal XX).

Prohibits distributor from making specified substitutions, but does not provide that, in violation of the article, exhibitor be not required to accept or pay for substituted picture.

(Note: The analysis then proposes a new clause for substitutions, as follows):

No distributor shall substitute . . . as the motion picture of a named star, or group, or combination of stars, or named director, or as based upon a well-known book or play, one of any other star or group or combination of stars, director, book or play, nor shall a distributor substitute any other feature . . . for one which, in the contract therefor, is designated "no substitute."

2. NON-THEATRICAL COMPETITION

(First revision, C-4, p. VC-2; Second revision, D, Part 3, p. S-9; Exhibitors' Proposal, 18; Distributors' Proposal XXI).

The proposals should protect the regularly established theatre operator from competition of those who do not conduct theatres as a business. The (code) article permits licensing of non-theatrical accounts, until Local Grievance board decides licensing is unfair.

Distributor should in advance satisfy local grievance board that such sale would not interfere with regular theatres.

3. FORCING SHORTS WITH FEATURES

(First revision, C-5, p. VC-2; Second revision, D Part 5, p. S-10; Exhibitors' Proposal 24; Distributors' Proposal XXII).

Provision sanctions practice. It seemingly regulates the proportion which may be forced, but actually it does not do so.

Unfair method of competition against those producers having shorts to sell.

Nothing short of complete extermination of the practice will be adequate.

4. ALLOCATION OF FILM RENTALS

(First revision, C-8, p. VC-3; Second revision, D Part 8, p. S-11; Exhibitors' Proposal 4; Distributors' Proposal XLII).

Gives no relief to exhibitors.

5. DESIGNATION OF PLAYDATES

(First revision, C-9; p. VC-3; Second revision, D Part 9, S-11; Exhibitors' Proposal, 17; Distributors' Proposal XLV).

Objections:

(a) Recognizes the right of the distributor to run the business of the exhibitor by requiring him to exhibit pictures on particular days of the week; (b) Leaves the right to relief to the discretion of the producer-controlled boards; (c) Improperly limits the ground upon which an exhibitor may procure a change in playdays; (d) If relief is granted on a particular picture, the exhibitor has forced upon him still another picture which may be open to the same objection as the first.

(Note: The analysis then discusses socalled "onerous terms" under which percentage playing is said to be practiced).

6. DATING RESTRICTIONS

(First revision, C-10, p. VC-4; Second revision, D Part 10, p. S-13; Exhibitors' Proposal 5; Distributors' Proposal XLIII).

Since it is recognized that arbitration should be optional, the inclusion of a distributors' addendum to exhibitors' original proposal is merely an attempt to coerce the exhibitor to agree to arbitrate.

7. SPECIAL PRODUCTIONS

(First revision, C-11, p. VC-5; Second revision, D Part 11, p. S-13; Exhibitors' Proposal Art. 25).

Exhibitors are opposed to the practice of distributors of failing to deliver those pictures which distributors have reason to believe are successful attractions, and reselling them at greatly increased prices.

Revised code leaves open to distributor the opportunity to remove desirable pictures and assures to producer-controlled theatres any of these "specials."

8. DESCRIPTION OF PLAYDATES

(First revision C-12, p. VC-5.)

This article, to be effective, must provide that, "An exhibitor shall not be required to accept or pay for any picture released or offered by a distributor which materially differs from the general style, character or class of story set forth in the exhibition contract."

Entire article was omitted from the second revision.

9. OVERBUYING

(First revision, D-2, p. VD-1).

This was deleted from second revision, and should be restored.

10. PRICE EVASION—PREMIUMS

(First revision, D-3, VD-1; Second revision, E part 3, p. S-17; Exhibitors' Proposal 22; Distributors' Proposal XIX and XXXI).

Exhibitors dispute alleged right of distributors to establish by contract exhibitors' minimum prices of admission.

If any exhibitor is to have the right to continue the giving of premiums for 90 days, as provided in Section 4, his competitors should have the same right.

11. TRANSFER TO AVOID UNCOMPLETED CONTRACT

(First revision, D-4, VD-3; Second revision E Part 4, p. S-18; Exhibitors' Proposal 13; Distributors' Proposal XXIX).

With the first part we are in accord, but controversies should be determined by arbitration.

12. CONFLICTING ADVERTISING

(First revision, D-5, p. VD-3; Second revision E Part 5, p. S-9; Exhibitors' Proposal 21; Distributors' Proposal XXX).

Onerous for subsequent runs; right reasonably to advertise is first taken away from subsequent run exhibitor, and the burden is then placed upon him of satisfying producer-distributor controlled board that the restriction works an unfair hardship on him.

13. ELIMINATIONS

Makes no contribution toward solution of the evils of block booking.

The privilege granted is trifling and is hedged about with innumerable conditions.

14. ARBITRATION

Arbitration altered to the advantage of major producers by adding, that in case of failure of the arbitrators to agree upon selection of an umpire, "the Code Authority shall, upon request make such selection." Umpire should be designated by a judge of the U. S. District Court, or other neighboring court, or other disinterested public official.

15. DENIAL OF JURISDICTION TO GRIEVANCE BOARDS

(Second revision, Sec. 5, p. S-33).

There was included in the second revision, the . . . new article which did not appear in the first revision. A most brazen provision!

16. MISCELLANEOUS

Among other subjects requiring clarification:

(a) Definitions: These require some modifications, as well as additions.

(b) Practice of preventing a responsible producer from renting studio facilities.

(c) Interference with an outside or associate producer.

(d) Employment by producers under Article V, Part 5, of the second revision of the code.

(e) Details and interpretations concerning labor provisions.

(f) As to Section 1 of VC-1, the word "overt" should be omitted, and other measures of protection be afforded independent exhibitors with respect to the provisions of that article.

(g) Premiums covered by Section 2, page VD-2.

PART III

Important Provisions Omitted From the Revised Code

ERDAY

$10,000 FINE FOR PAY VIOLATIONS

known that the information they submit will be held strictly confidential and will not be revealed to other producers or to the public.

Last Thursday afternoon Mr. Rosenblatt announced that sums in excess of the fair value of personal services cannot be paid employees in the industry. The article, inserted in the third code revision, will apply also to executives.

This action followed a difference of opinion, both in NRA circles and in the industry, as to the legality of fixing maximum salaries in the code, which previously had been discussed at Washington. General Hugh Johnson said: "I do not see how you could do it under the law," and so a solution of the problem was reached by making the offer of excessive salaries an unfair trade practice.

Clause Would Fine Producers $10,000

The code authority is given the power to fine producers $10,000 for the payment of salaries "unreasonably in excess of the fair value of personal services which results in unfair and destructive competition" for the purpose of inducing any person into the employ of a producer. All such assessments shall be paid to the code authority for use by it in the administration of its functions.

However, the new clause carries a significant phrase, which makes it clear that nothing "shall in any manner impair the validity or the enforceability of such agreement or employment." Obviously, then, while the producer may be chastised, by means of a $10,000 fine, for countenancing "excessive" salaries, he may continue with the agreement with the star and with the salary which was the cause of the fine. Which means that maximum salaries will not be fixed by the code. Nor was it made clear just what means will be taken to determine "excessive salaries."

General Johnson said that the salaries in Hollywood have reached the point where they are "grotesque."

Academy Belittles Strike Talk

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts in Hollywood, which already has lost dozens of its members who have struck out independently to fight the code's salary provisions, indicated this week through an official statement that strike talk was an "extreme measure" and would result in Governmental disapproval and unfavorable publicity.

Resentment of actors and writers over Articles 9 and 10 of the code, which would control activities of agents and studio creative talent, continued bitter. The authors and writers attacked the "blacklisting" clauses. The Academy said it would continue its fight against both articles.

The Screen Actors' Guild carried its fight to Washington, sending a four-page wire to President Roosevelt protesting the code and its salary provisions. They assailed the producers and said that they would resist any attempts of the "financial buccaneers" to "saddle" their sins on the creative talent.

Some Hollywood Salaries

Meanwhile, motion picture legislative experts who usually carry the burden of fighting the annual flood of theatre taxation in the states and the nation, obviously were none too happy over the publicity which was given Hollywood salaries in connection with the intervention of the White House. Particularly were they concerned over the publication of actual earnings. Some of these figures, which were said to be "generally accepted," but not necessarily authentic, follow, as they appeared in daily newspapers last week:

John Barrymore, $75,000 per picture.
Wallace Beery, $5,000 per week.

Speaking of Stars' Pay . . .

Speaking of player salaries—and who at Washington isn't, in these autumn code days—H. I. Phillips had the following to say this week in "The Sun Dial," his column in the New York Sun, under the heading, "Eddie Cantor Makes a Salary Speech":

("The days of slavery are over," declared Eddie Cantor, prominent picture star, in denouncing the reported White House move to keep Hollywood salaries within reasonable bounds.—News item.)

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Cantor, creaking in every limb from his income from pictures, radio, literature and theatre, "the days of slavery in the United States are definitely over. Any attempt to restore them will find me in the front rank of those willing to fight for the principles of Abraham Lincoln."

Mr. Cantor paused to take two more sacks of pay checks off the mail wagon and continued with feeling: "Was the Civil War fought for nothing? Did Lincoln die in vain? Has the country forgotten Sumter, Bull Run, Gettysburg, Shiloh, Five Forks, Little Round Top, Petersburg, Appomatox? . . ."

"Leaving on track five at 3:10," put in Charlie Chaplin ($2,500,000 a year), always clowning.

"Did America suffer the war of the States in vain? Did the red blood of the millions of dollars . . . millions of soldiers run like crimson rivers for four terrible years for nothing?"

At the mention of something for nothing Wallace Beery ($5,000 a week) and Greta Garbo ($40,000 a month), swooned.

"Shall Sheridan's Ride become a mockery, Sherman's March to the Sea an idle jest and Grant's campaign in the Wilderness a futile gesture?" demanded Mr. Cantor ($3,000 a week on the air, $200,000 a year in pictures).

"No," came the answer in a mighty roar from the throats of Harold Lloyd ($50,000 per annum), Jackie Cooper ($1,300 a week).

"Again I tell you that the era of slavery is dead and done for," shouted Mr. Cantor. "A nation cannot endure half slave and half free."

(This allusion to something free drove Baby LeRoy—$3,500 a week—into a crying fit which brought seven nursemaids on the run at once.)

"Ten thousand times 'no,'" declared Eddie.

"How much is ten thousand times no in our money?" asked Jmmy Cagney ($7,500 a week), trying to figure something on his cuff. "And do I take out agent's commission?"

Mr. Cantor braced himself for a mighty conclusion from Lincoln's Gettysburg speech.

"Four grand and seven," he began.

But he got no further. It was too petty a sum, so Mae West shot him.

Constance Bennett, $100,000 per picture, 3 annually.
Frank Borzage, $60,000 per picture.
James Cagney, $3,500 per week.
Eddie Cantor, approximately $275,000 per picture.
Charles Chaplin grossed $3,000,000 on "City Lights."
Ruth Chatterton, $7,000 per week.
Maurice Chevalier, $150,000 per picture, 2 annually.
Emanuel Cohen, $7,000 per week.
Jackie Cooper, $1,300 per week.
Joan Crawford, $4,000 per week.
Bing Crosby, $270,000 for 3 pictures.
Marie Dressler, $3,500 per week.
Ruth Etting, $25,000 for one week's work.
Kay Francis, $5,000 per week.
Clark Gable, $2,500 per week.
Greta Garbo, $150,000 per picture, 2 annually.
Janet Gaynor, $100,000 per picture, 3 annually.
Ann Harding, $90,000 per picture.
Jean Harlow, $2,500 per week.
Leslie Howard, $60,000 per picture.
Walter Huston, $35,000 per picture.
Ruby Keeler, $2,000 per week.
Baby LeRoy, $2,500 for one part.
Harold Lloyd "is disappointed if he does not clear $1,000,000 a picture."
Myrna Loy, $750 per week.
Ernst Lubitsch, $60,000 per picture.
Jeannette MacDonald, $4,000 per week.
Rouben Mamoulian, $60,000 per picture.

And Still More

Louis B. Mayer, $10,000 per week "and a cut on the profits; reported to make $750,000 a year."
Paul Muni, $50,000 per picture.
Jack Pearl, $80,000 per picture.
Mary Pickford, "reported to clear between $500,000 and $2,000,000 on each production."
William Powell, $4,000 per week.
George Raft, $2,000 per week.
Edward G. Robinson, $40,000 per picture.
Will Rogers, $125,000 per picture, 3 annually.
David Selznick, $5,000 per week.
Norma Shearer, $5,000 per week.
Irving Thalberg, $6,000 per week.
Lee Tracy, $2,000 per week.
Joseph von Sternberg, $60,000 per picture.
Mae West "stands to make $500,000" on "I'm No Angel."
Wheeler and Woolsey, $100,000 per picture.
Ed Wynn, $150,000 per picture.
Loretta Young, $1,731 per week.

The New York Herald-Tribune gave recognition to the fact that some of the "generally accepted" Hollywood salaries have been affected by subsequent reductions and, in this connection, published the following:

	Before Cut	After
Marion Davies	$6,000	$3,900
Marie Dressler	6,000	3,900
William Powell	6,000	4,000
Ruth Chatterton	6,000	4,000
Joan Crawford	3,000	1,950
John Barrymore	2,500	1,625
Lionel Barrymore	2,500	1,625
Wallace Beery	2,500	1,625
Kay Francis	2,500	1,975
Edward G. Robinson	2,500	1,975
Jackie Cooper	2,000	1,300
John Gilbert	2,000	1,300
Ramon Novarro	2,000	1,300
Robert Montgomery	1,500	1,000
James Cagney	1,250	1,000
Jean Harlow	1,500	975
Loretta Young	1,000	800

"These figures," said the Herald, "are at variance in some cases with estimates made at Washington."

cision of Allied to hold a mass meeting in Chicago on October 24 to discuss codes; and the apparently unsuccessful coup of Allied to storm the White House with telegrams of protestation against code clauses, were the highlights of the week in the independent reactions to the NRA code.

In a brief more voluminous even than the code itself, a group of four attorneys—Abram F. Myers, Jacob Schechter, Mitchell Klupt and Milton Weisman—representing independent distributors, producers and exhibitors, submitted to the NRA their objections to and suggestions for the revised code written by Solomon Rosenblatt, NRA deputy. The report deals with the first and second code revisions, having been written before the third.

Throughout the independents' report appear virtually all of the Allied theories, with very little in the memorandum having to do with independent producers and distributors.

While the basic protest of the independents hinges upon the creation, by the code, of a so-called "super-combination" which would dominate the industry, the report finds the code to be full of disadvantageous provisions, asserting that "every proposal directly aimed at recognized vices, and every statement of principle intended to guide the (local) boards to just and remedial determinations" has been omitted.

On page 29 appears a summary of the independents' document which analyzes the first and second code revisions, together with the independents' suggestions for additional clauses not covered in the code.

Rosenblatt To Hear Independents

While various independent factions were heard in Washington to say they would not sign the code unless their demands were incorporated in the final code, NRA officials appeared unconcerned, because the affixing of the President's signature to the code automatically will bind the entire industry.

However, Mr. Rosenblatt tentatively had set Thursday as the date for a hearing for the independents, but it appeared almost certain on Wednesday that the outcome in no way will radically change the third revision. Speaking for the independents, W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, said that the group "would stand on the principles of the (48-page) code analysis and did not look for any hasty or arbitrary action on the part of the Administration."

Allied and the White House Protest

While the MPTOA evidently intends to continue with its original idea of presenting the final draft to members for ratification, at individual state association meetings, Allied States decided to dig into the whole question of the code, at a specially called meeting of all members, on October 24 at Chicago. Their leaders let it be known that the conference will result in new demands being submitted to the NRA. The sessions will be at the Congress hotel.

Disclosure, last week, that Allied had sponsored a "march" upon Washington in opposition to Mr. Rosenblatt's code, in the form of "100,000" telegraphic protests to the White House, elicited from P. J. Wood, of the MPTO of Ohio, a wire to Mr. Rosenblatt, in which he said, "This plan is not approved by the group for which I speak, nor are we a party to it. We have explicit confidence that the President and his Administration will not formulate a code that will force independent theatres out of business and cause additional unemployment."

MEXICO AND SPAIN BAR CRITICISM IN PICTURES

Reciprocal Agreement Provides Each Country's Censors Reject Films Slighting the Other; Repeating Offense Bans Product

by JAMES LOCKHART
Mexico City Correspondent

Mexico and Spain have gotten together for a reciprocal ban on all motion pictures which their censors consider to be snubbing, slighting, ridiculing or otherwise insulting in any way either the Mexican republic or her motherland. The agreement, which was signed in Madrid between the Mexican ambassador and representatives of the Spanish government, as explained by the Mexican Ministry of Foreign Relations, amounts to this: Mexico henceforth prohibits the exhibition in any cinema in her domains of any film which its central board of censorship decides contains scenes, actions or dialogue which offend Spain, her people or customs, and that Spain will do the same for Mexico. This agreement went into effect on September 16, presumably as a compliment to Mexico. That date is the anniversary of Mexico's independence from Spanish government domination. The Ministry's statement said, in part:

"The governments of Mexico and Spain have agreed to consider as offensive and unsuitable to be admitted to commerce, circulation and exhibition in both countries, spoken or silent motion pictures, produced in any country by any producer, which attack, calumniate, defame, ridicule, offend or distort, directly or indirectly, the customs and manners, institutions, habits, characteristics, peculiarities or deeds of Mexico or Spain. Neither government shall permit the total or partial preparation in its territory of any of the beforementioned motion pictures."

The agreement, according to the Ministry's announcement, contains the following significant clause:

"It is further agreed that when a foreign motion picture producing enterprise or individual which or who has produced a picture that has been found objectionable by either Mexico or Spain, repeats the offense, then shall both governments prohibit entering, circulating or being exhibited in their territories all other pictures produced by the offender."

Nations To Work Together

The agreement requires the two governments to advise each other promptly of pictures banned for any of the reasons cited so that both may prohibit exhibitions of the production. However, it is provided that with the consent of both governments an objectionable picture may be made suitable for entry, exhibition, etc., if it is possible to eliminate the offending parts, and that both countries may exercise joint prohibition action against any picture which in their judgment slights any of the Spanish American countries. Mexico or Spain may withdraw from this covenant by giving the other government a year's notice of such anticipated action, the agreement provides.

Czechoslovakia To Supervise Its Domestic Film Industry

Washington Correspondent

The Ministry of Commerce of Czechoslovakia intends to form a special commission which would supervise domestic film producers who either desire to produce films or receive contingent permits according to a report of the American consulate general from Prague to the U. S. Department of Commerce. It was further stated that film circles are of the opinion that such control would consist of the following duties to be fulfilled by the producer before production of a film is started: answering of a special questionnaire, presentation of a detailed and definite scenario, calculation and method of financing. The questionnaire probably will contain information on studios used, sound apparatus employed, number of working days, also number of working days abroad, employment conditions and salaries of foreign actors, number of prints, and so on.

General Electric Sales in Decline

Gross sales of General Electric, which manufactures considerable equipment used in the motion picture business, for the first nine months of 1933 were $97,426,146, comparing with $113,049,475 for the 1932 period, a decrease of 14 per cent, Gerard Swope, president, announced yesterday. Sales billed for the third quarter were $35,652,732, against $32,838,986 last year, a gain of 8.57 per cent.

Profit available for dividends on the common stock for the nine months was $6,886,600, compared with $9,726,395. This is equal to 24 cents a share and 34 cents a share, respectively, on 28,845,927 common shares. Third-quarter net profit to common stock was 8 cents a share, against 7 cents last year, and totaled $2,220,520, against $2,073,208. The dividends of 10 cents a share on the common stock and 15 cents a share on the special stock for the third quarter of 1933 will be distributed to about 187,000 stockholders, in contrast to 179,000 a year ago.

Orders received for the nine months were $104,785,001, comparing with $94,374,114 for the 1932 period, a gain of 11 per cent, and for the third quarter were $43,733,499 against $25,665,402, an advance of 70 per cent. Net income from sales for the nine months amounted to $3,933,407, against $4,204,805 last year, and other income, less interest paid and sundry charges, was 4,884,484 against 7,452,864, leaving a net profit of $8,817,891, against $11,657,668.

PROTESTS ON FILM CODE

to guide the boards to just and remedial determinations, have been omitted from the revisions of the code. . . .

2. EXISTING EXHIBITION CONTRACTS

The substance of Article 34 of the code submitted by the exhibitors that the provisions of the code shall apply to existing exhibition contracts, should be included.

3. UNFAIR AND UNREASONABLE DISCRIMINATION

If unreasonable discriminations are not to be banned, the intent of the code is properly open to question.

4. DOUBLE FEATURES

The omission in the code of any reference to double features is tantamount to vesting the power in the major producer-distributors of regulating the matter to suit themselves in the contract.

Unless there is included in the code a clause leaving the matter entirely up to each exhibitor, the market for the sale of any of the product of the independent producers will be stifled.

5. UNIFORM CONTRACT

Only by the use of a uniform standard contract which, by the code, will be required of all distributors and exhibitors, can unfair and preferential arrangements be avoided.

6. THE RIGHT TO BUY IN FREE AND OPEN COMPETITION

If the plan is to be adopted for the giving of appropriate relief by action of a board, the code must, by express language, give to the appropriate board:

(a) The power to give such relief;

(b) Must provide that its mandate in such respect shall be binding upon distributors; and

(c) Must set forth clearly the principles and rules to control the actions of the board.

The principles in this regard, in substance, are:

(a) That an exhibitor of creditable standing shall have the right to buy in free and open competition any run of pictures that he desires;

(b) That a distributor shall not deny to him such right, and

(c) That a theatre in one situation shall not have power over its competitors by reason of its buying power in other situations.

7. BLOCK BOOKING

Provision for the right to eliminate and reject a given percentage of pictures without payment therefor, is at best an inadequate palliative.

8. BLIND BUYING

This provision, omitted from the second revision, will accomplish nothing, unless it provides also that an exhibitor shall not be required to accept or to pay for a picture offered for release which is not in accordance with such synopsis or description.

9. FOREIGN FILMS

Foreign pictures should be sold on merit. There should be no discrimination. Provision should be made barring the forcing of foreign pictures.

10. PICTURES VIOLATING THE PRODUCTION CODE

Immoral, offensive and salacious pictures are an abomination to the industry and an evil and dangerous influence on the community.

They are forced upon the exhibitor, and he has the choice of paying for them and not using them, or of offending his patrons and unwillingly incurring their ill-will.

If there is a sincere desire to discourage violations of the proper moral standards of production, the substance of exhibitors' Article 19 will be adopted, to wit, that no exhibitor shall exhibit, or be required to exhibit, or pay for any motion picture which is declared to be a violation of the standards, etc., and by leaving the determination of whether a picture is violative of these dictates to a balanced code authority.

11. SCORE CHARGES

Basically there is no justification for these most flagrant uneconomic exactions that producers are visiting upon the exhibitors.

12. SECRET REBATES

This clause was omitted from the second revision, by order, we were informed, of the legal division (of the NRA). This provision is based upon a sound principle and should not have been deleted.

Byrd Has 150 Films For Antarctic Trip

Admiral Richard E. Byrd and his intrepid fellow explorers, who last week set out for the desolate wastes of the Antarctic are taking along 150 pictures donated by member companies of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Among the companies that have contributed prints of motion picture films to Admiral Byrd's expedition are Columbia Pictures, Educational Film Exchanges, First National Pictures, Fox Film, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount Pictures, RKO, United Artists, Universal and Warner Brothers.

For sound reproduction, portable "suitcase" equipment, of the type originally designed by Western Electric for use in school and field work, has been provided by Electrical Research Products, Inc., especially for operation under Antarctic conditions, and which will provide talking picture entertainment for members of the expedition. The equipment, packed so as to be easily carried if necessary, includes two projector heads, motor generators and a supply of spare parts sufficient for three years' replacements to insure uninterrupted operation. A special grade of oil will be carried for lubrication under unusual sub-zero conditions.

Among the pictures being taken are:

Warner Bros.: "Forty Second Street," "I am a Fugitive," "Crowd Roars."

Fox Film: "Cavalcade," "State Fair," "Adorable."

United Artists: "Street Scene," "Cynara," "Palmy Days."

Universal: "Big Cage," "Once in a Lifetime," "Air Mail."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer: "Tarzan," "Red Dust," "Prosperity."

RKO: "Melody Cruise," "Hold 'Em Jail," "Topaze."

Columbia: "Bitter Tea of General Yen," "Child of Manhattan," "The Woman I Stole."

Paramount: "Shanghai Express," "She Done Him Wrong," "Farewell to Arms."

Mickey Mouse is represented by "Mickey's Nightmare," "Touchdown Mickey," "The Klondike Kid" and others.

N. Y. Censor Board Net Is $161,697

Censors of New York state have had a prosperous year. In fact, a net profit of $161,697 was returned, $487.16 more than in 1931-32, and $1,518,093 has been the net revenue to the state since Aug. 1, 1921.

So too in eliminations from pictures was annual period from July 1, 1932, to June 30, 1933, a busy one. There were 3,035 eliminations from 328 productions, but 1,434 were approved without any eliminations. On the other hand, ten pictures were rejected completely. Two of these were approved with eliminations after revision.

Summary of the Year

Following is the commission's summary of examinations made, eliminations and work done in the fiscal year:

Number of films from which eliminations were made		328
Number of films approved without eliminations		1,434
Number of permits granted without examination		45
Number of original licenses issued		1,762
Films synchronized and with dialogue
Approved	1,368
Eliminations	317	1,685
Films silent and synchronized (with silent subtitles)
Approved	66
Eliminations	11	77
Total Originals		1,762
Number of licenses for duplicates issued		25,659
Number of license subseals issued to replace those worn out or destroyed.		3,319
Number of pictures condemned in toto		10*
Total number of eliminations made		3,035
The eliminations are classed as follows:
Scenes eliminated	1,793
Titles eliminated	1,242
	3,035
Number of reels examined		8,916

The following is a statement of the grounds upon which the eliminations were made.

Indecent	569
Inhuman	360
Tending to incite to crime	917
Immoral or tending to corrupt morals	1,124
Sacrilegious	7
Obscene	58
	3,035

The films from which eliminations were made may be classified as follows:

Comedies	42
Comedy dramas	21
Serials	5
Educational	3
Cartoons	0
Scenic	11
Novelty	3
Miscellaneous	22
	328

Thirty-one formal requests for re-examination by the director were made by applicants, and one appeal to the Board of Regents.

*NOTE: Ten pictures were rejected in toto, of which two were revised and approved.

GERMAN PRODUCT MAKES STEADY GAINS; 140 FEATURES THIS YEAR

Percentage of Home Production in Total Pictures Shown Reflects Increase; 19 Fewer Films from U.S. This Season

by J. K. RUTENBERG
Berlin Correspondent

Steady progress is being made in production by German companies, with 140 features planned for the new season, seven more than in the year 1932-33. The percentage of home made pictures to total product shown has increased steadily the last three years, from 46 per cent in 1930-31 to 57.7 per cent the following season and 64.8 per cent in 1932-33.

In the year from July 1, 1932, to June 30, 1933, there were 205 features admitted to censorship, 133 of national production, 43 from the United States and the remainder from other European countries, chiefly France and Austria.

Statistics for the preceding year reveal the following figures:

Germany	139	pictures
United States	62	"
Other countries	36	"
Total	237	pictures

The decrease in the number of feature films censored in Germany therefore is found rather in the foreign film, the United States alone bringing 19 fewer pictures this season into Germany.

So far as the German industry is concerned the season will be influenced decisively by three important developments:

Loosening of the import restrictions;

Increased German production;

Establishment of American production in this country.

The supplementary stipulations of the new law extending the validity of the German quota (kontingent) to July 1, 1936, contain a number of new measures which have been published recently, the most interesting of which will be the loosening of the restrictions of importations from countries which have entered reciprocity agreements with the German film industry or are willing to do so.

Germany frequently and justly has been reproached for having introduced a system of import limitations based on fixed figures, while demanding unlimited importation of German films into other countries.

The limited import number of 105 sound features remains unchanged until 1936, but Dr. Goebbels, minister for public enlightenment and propaganda, is authorized to issue an unlimited number of additional import permits (Kinotingent-Scheine) for foreign films, if binding exchange agreements have been closed between the countries of origin and Germany.

France offers a practical example. It is now possible to eliminate all limitations on importtation of artistically valuable films of cultural merit. The number would not be deducted from the twenty additional import licenses which, under the quota regulations, are at the disposal of the socalled emergency fund.

The uncertain condition that a valuable film could be excluded because all import permits already have been consumed, will have ceased to exist, as soon as the foreign film industries arrange reciprocal agreements with film distributors in Germany.

This, it is stated, pertains especially to the United States. Germany has granted free import to every good film produced by a befriended country and has authorized Dr. Goebbels to obtain for Germany every valuable picture produced abroad. It is now up to the other countries, it is officially declared by the Government, to make use of the privileges under the new quota regulations.

New German Product

Although it is impossible at the moment to give complete information as to Germany's 1933-34 production, it is more than probable that no less than 140 feature films will be made by 60 producing companies. A third of this number already had been realized by September 1.

More than a hundred of these appear in the schedules of the distributing companies. The newly reorganized Deutsches Lichtspiel-Syndikat, maintained by exhibitors and cooperating with the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association of Germany, is heading the list with 25 features. Ufa follows with 21 to 27 films, and Europa is next with 17 and Aafa with nine. Other film exchanges, such as Fox, Cando, Albo, Bayerische, Terra and Siegel-Monopol, have not yet made known their program.

The number of shorts, educational films and cartoons also is expected to be considerably increased.

The first uncertainty under the new government has been displaced by concrete production plans, and the number of films already completed seems to justify this optimism.

U. S. Production in Germany

There is a pronounced tendency among foreign producers to start film production in Germany. For months and even years it was said that four leading American film producers would come to Germany, but post-synchronization of several American films was all that was done. Difficulties in production of a well dubbed picture and the growing tendency to prefer national product seem to have been the main causes.

The willingness of the new German government to cooperate with everybody who is ready to arrange reciprocal film exchange agreements, and the extension of the quota regulations over a period of three years, seem to have encouraged several American companies. Universal made the start and Fox followed. One or two other American companies already have looked for suitable locations. It would be nonsense to call Germany the center of European production for the United States, but the production plans of the American film companies in Europe are now divided among England, France and Germany.

Influence of New Chamber

All branches of the industry are equally affected by the new German Film Chamber.

Up to April 1, 1933, the handling of the interests of the German industry has been divided into various, and sometimes competitive, organizations and trade unions. This rivalry made impossible the abolition of the double feature program and regulation of admission prices, and the industry in the last two years therefore was subject to heavy financial losses.

Fearing the entire industry would collapse and add another 150,000 to the unemployed, the government created a Film Chamber with practically unlimited influence. The Chamber has taken over the function of the Spio, former head organization. Current contracts, especially the international agreements, are automatically transferred to the new body.

Minister Authorized to Issue Unlimited Number of Additional Import Permits, Depending Upon Reciprocal Agreements

Membership is obligatory upon everybody connected with film production, distribution or exhibition. The trade unions of the raw film producers, the patent holding companies (Tobis and Klangfilm) and the Society of Composers and Authors form a part of the Chamber which has been fitted with far-reaching authority.

Dr. Goebbels has appointed as members of the board of the Chamber Dr. Scheuermann, president of the board of the Film Credit Bank; Dr. Beelitz of the Reichskreditgesellschaft; Dr. Plugge, hitherto manager of the head organization of the German film industry, and Arnold Raether as representative of the ministry.

On the executive board are Mr. Corell (Ufa) and Dr. Pasch as representatives of the producers; Mr. Pfitzner and Mr. Otto, studio branch and raw film manufacturers; Mr. Geyer, laboratories; Mr. Meydam, distribution; Adolf Engl, president of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association of Germany; Mr. Auen, actors' branch, and Mr. Küchenmeister as representative of the patent holding firms. Representation of the import and export branch covers the international agreements.

Of special importance for our American readers are the following paragraphs of the foundation decree:

Membership in the Chamber only involves permission to produce, distribute or show films within the boundaries of the German State;

The Chamber is authorized to stipulate new provisions for the opening, management and closing of companies and enterprises in the industry;

Public exhibition of a film is forbidden if the producer is unable to prove the membership of all his collaborators in the Chamber. The producer, in case of doubt, is he who disposes of the negative.

On August 11, the chamber began to work and published the following provisions:

All exhibitors must be members through their respective trade associations in order to get films.

Double featuring was abolished, effective September 15. Where existing contracts made this impossible, a gentleman's agreement was required in those instances.

The admission price of a sound film theatre in Germany must not be less than 40 pfennigs (10 cents at par). Vaudeville and stage performances may be continued in cinemas with an extra admission between 10 and 30 pfennigs per seat.

Dr. Fanck Starts Unit

Dr. Arnold Fanck, heading Screen Arts Productions, has started work on a picture featuring Jimmy Savo and Eddie Lambert, with Jim Hogan directing.

THE LOST PATROL
Radio

This picture, which as a silent was held in the same esteem by British theatre-goers as "The Covered Wagon" was by the American public, is based on a novel by Phillip MacDonald. The present screen play is by Garrett Fort, and John Ford is directing.

It's a without-women picture. The cast is composed entirely of men. Victor McLaglen is starred and the supporting cast includes Boris Karloff, Wallace Ford, Allen Hale, Reginald Denny, Billy Bevan, Sammy Stein (the wrestler), Brandon Hurst, Douglas Walton; J. M. Kerrigan, recently in "Paddy," Paul Hanson and Neville Clarke. All are fairly well known picture names.

Detailing one of the off-the-record chapters of the World War, the locale is the Mesopotomia Desert. The story portrays the colorful, dramatic experiences of a British Cavalry troop sent out on a secret mission. A punchy element of mystery is created as the man who holds the secret to the troop's destination is killed. Romance and love interest that makes for feminine appeal is introduced as the survivors talk about their wives and sweethearts. But always the drama predominates as, one by one, the soldiers are picked off mysteriously by the never-seen nomadic tribesmen. The principal production asset is found in the suspense that builds the story.

Thrill naturally highlights, and this, supplemented by the atmosphere of daring adventure against imagination-defying circumstances, endows the story with an emotion-stirring atmosphere that continuously strengthens the element of forbidding mystery. There is little analogy between this story and one of a similarly constructed vein, "Men Without Women," that was quite popular several years ago. A sinister novelty that gives the drama a sympathy-stirring tinge appears to be the angle that should interest audiences in the picture.

WHITE WOMAN
Paramount

A melodramatic jungle picture, based on a stage play by Norman Reilly Raine, author of "Tugboat Annie" and the Saturday Evening Post stories and Frank Butler, co-author of "College Humor." Direction is by Stuart Walker, who did "Tonight Is Ours" and "Evenings For Sale." The scenarists are Samuel Hoffenstein, who collaborated on "College Humor," and Gladys Lehman, who has been in on the screen plays of nearly all the John M. Stahl pictures.

The story, laid in the heart of Africa, features Charles Laughton in his first American picture since "Sign Of The Cross," in a character similar to the cruel, ruthless role already established for that artist. Carole Lombard has the leading feminine role and the tone of the picture is further established by the spotting of Charles Bickford, recently in "Song Of The Eagle" and "This Day And Age," in the principal supporting heavy part. Other familiar names are Kent Taylor, Percy Kilbride, Charles B. Middleton and Ethel Griffies.

In theme, stark melodrama predominating, Laughton is a self-appointed king of the river plantations. Picking up Miss Lombard in London, he brings her to his domain. The presence of a voluptuous white woman in the steaming jungle arouses the elemental passions of Laughton's five associates with the inevitable cruelties, killings and thrill situations, until the vicious, domineering Laughton consolidates his claims, which Bickford disputes right to the bitter end.

Realism is the picture's keynote, expressed mainly through the characters, and made more poignant by the Mack Gordon original music, the lyrics to which were written by Harry Revel.

EAST OF FIFTH AVENUE
Columbia

Dramatic romance here brings a study of two kinds of love—the old-fashioned kind and the modern stop-at-nothing variety. The original story is by Lew Levenson; the screen playing by Jo Swerling, credited with "Hollywood Speaks," "Attorney for the Defense" and two Stanwyck pictures, "Forbidden" and "Shopworn." Al Rogell is directing.

The cast includes Wallace Ford, Mary Carlisle, recently in "College Humor" and "Ladies Must Love"; the newcomer, Dorothy Tree, erstwhile stage actress, who starred in such stage shows as "Holiday," "Clear All Wires," "Street Scene" and "Torch Singer." Columbia has had her under cover for several months and has every anticipation that her appearance in this show will mark the debut of a vibrant new star. Others are Walter Connolly, currently in "Paddy, the Next Best Thing," Walter Byron, Harry Holman, Lucien Littlefield, Maude Eburne and Louise Carter.

Treated in episodic fashion, the yarn is localed in a New York boarding house. Preparing for the Connally-Carter golden wedding festivities, Dorothy Tree's sweetheart, Ford, runs out on her as she learns she is to have a baby. Ford, a race track gambler, goes for flashy Mary Carlisle, who two-times him with Byron. Old love is rekindled for the two leads, Miss Tree steals money from Connolly, which Ford zooms into a big killing at the races. The money is returned, but Louise Carter has died from shock as she learns of Miss Tree's perfidy, and Connolly kills himself after pointing out the right road to love and leaving Ford and Miss Tree his small fortune as a nest egg.

Drama is the keynote, but human comedy provides the contrast. The production is attuned to the theme. Action and dialogue are intimate. While voices haven't been talked about for some time, Miss Tree has one that is quite apt to establish her as very much out of the ordinary.

THE CAT AND THE FIDDLE
MGM

In this adaptation of the Jerome Kern-Otto Harbach musical success, the picture follows closely the color, theme and glamor of the stage play. The screen play is by Sam and Bella Spewack, and William K. Howard is directing. The cast features Ramon Novarro, his first picture since "The Barbarian," and Jeanette MacDonald, remembered for her appearances with Chevalier in "Love Parade" and "One Hour With You," as well as "The Vagabond King" and "Love Me Tonight." Others in support are Charles Butterworth, Vivienne Segal, Frank Morgan, Henry Armetta, Jean Hersholt and Sterling Holloway.

Kern-Harbach music predominating, the story is localed in Brussels and Paris, and carries an atmosphere of conflict revolving around two rival musicians, Novarro and Miss MacDonald, building pretentiously into a colorful Parisian climax where the play featuring the two stars is presented to the public.

The full music score is included, featuring Novarro singing "The Night Was Made For Love" and "One Moment Alone." Miss MacDonald solos, "She Didn't Say Yes" and "Try To Forget"; she duets "Love Parade" with Novarro and "A New Love Is Old" with Vivienne Segal. Miss Segal has "If You're for Me" for her big single number.

The show is being elaborately produced, with settings and costuming pretentious. Its time is modern, and it has the unusual value of bringing together two of the finest voices of which Hollywood boasts on the screen.

Light drama sustaining the romantic motif, comedy will play an important function in the production with Charles Butterworth, Henry Armetta and Sterling Holloway as the principal fun stimulators.

Warner Expanding Theatre Acquisitions in Two States

The Warner circuit is seen consolidating its holdings in New Jersey, a stronghold of the company, in the acquisition this week of four houses. The Lyndhurst, in Lyndhurst, was taken from Max Cohen, and the American and Cameo, Newark, and Rex, East Rutherford, were acquired from Al Gottesman. The circuit is also planning additions in Wisconsin. Several houses have recently been taken over, and Warner is anxious to get the Wisconsin in Milwaukee.

The company has taken a new five-year lease on the Sheridan Square, second run in East Liberty, Pa. The house, originally leased by the Harris Amusement Company, was turned over to RKO two years ago and then went to Warner in a theatre exchange. The RKO bankruptcy brought the house back to its original owners, with the Harris company and Warner bidding for the new lease.

Peck Develops New Motor For Camera and Projector

William Hoyt Peck, president and chief engineer of the Peck Television Corporation, New York, has developed a new synchronous motor, capable of 1440 R. P. M., which he believes will afford a simpler and more effective means of driving talking picture cameras and projectors. The new motor, according to the announcement, is designed to provide an even speed of one revolution per frame when used with present sound-on-film equipment. Mr. Peck, a member of the SMPE, was formerly president of Colorcraft Corporation, making natural color films.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

Female

(First National)

Comedy-Drama

Here's a surprise package. It is not gigantic; it is smart, clean, clever, genuine entertainment every foot of the way. It should catch the fancy of sophisticates as well as the gallery gang, as both big city and small town screen fare. In acting and direction, with elaborate modernistic settings and crisp dialogue without exaggerated theatrics, the show has a naturalness sharply emphasizing its romantic, dramatic and comedy elements.

The picture has the stuff that interests women keenly, and should please the men folk. There's color, punch in practically every sequence, giving it a speedy tempo. All the good things that one expects of Ruth Chatterton are there and the same applies to George Brent.

Always an audience show, "Female" has the inherent showmanship with which to sell it. Title, cast names, novelty of story idea and production values are factors with which smart showmen can do much. Scores of dialogue lines can be adapted with clever dignity into smart advertising copy. Numerous situations suggest just as many ballyhoo developments.

In story Allison Drake is a pseudo Henry Ford; she's the dynamic, sharp-brained, decisive head of the Drake Motor Company. An iron woman during business hours, romance is the furthest thing from her mind but the closest thing to her heart. Becoming interested in Briggs and Cooper in turn, she invites them up to her house, really to find out whether her womanly charms have any effect upon them. Neither can hurdle the efficient business-woman barrier, but next morning when they attempt to continue in the romantic vein she shunts them off to branch offices as washouts.

Bored at a house-party, she blows out and winds up in a honky tonk shooting gallery. She forces a flirtation with Thorne, who takes the zip out of her by showing he considers her only as a pickup. Next morning she discovers that he's the engineer she stole from a rival company and he learns that she's the fabulous Miss Drake. He's invited up to the house to discuss a new car appliance, but the vodka fails to steam him up to any amorous action; rather, Allison gets a further discouraging chill.

She lures Thorne into a romantic liaison and, assuming the role of a womanly woman, finally gets under his skin and everything looks grand for her. But next morning she discovers that Thorne has fled. A business crisis means nothing, as she chases over several hundred miles of countryside in pursuit of her romantic ideal. Catching up with him in a carnival shooting gallery, she abdicates completely. Her only dream is to marry Thorne and turn the factory over to his control while she stays home, a regular woman.

The preview audience ate it up. Where the title led them to expect something lurid, they actually got smart, intriguing entertainment.

Consider "Female" as a picture that has what it takes, get behind it to the extent of spending a little extra money in exploitation. By all means concentrate on getting a big house for the opening performance; word-of-mouth advertising should be a valuable adjunct.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Warner-First National. Screen play by Gene Markey and Kathryn Scola. Based on story by Donald Henderson Clark. Dialogue directed by Stanley Logan. Director, Michael Curtiz. Art director, Jack Okey. Gowns by Orry-Kelly. Photography by Sid Hickox. Film editor, Jack Killifer. Running time, 60 minutes. Release date, Nov. 4, 1933.

Broadway Thru a Keyhole

(U. A. 20th Century)

Drama and Comedy

On the strength of title, the Winchell authorship name and public interest resulting from the famous Winchell-Jolson fistic melee, "Broadway Thru a Keyhole" enjoys a psycological advantage that should be capitalized upon in every way in stimulating maximum attention. Essentially the show is an underworld-Broadway life amalgamation, pepped up by a topical night-club atmosphere, that permits the ringing in of several Broadway characters and incidents.

Against the hectic flamboyant Broadway background which is ironically introduced, the picture tells the story of Rocci, a blossoming racketeer. At the request of Esther, he influences Max to put Joan in his revue. With Texas Guinan specializing in her familiar character as Tex, the night club color introduces several specialty numbers. Falling in love with the girl, Rocci forces Max to star her, a situation that carries the comedy vein. Joan, now a big timer, Rocci wants to marry her, but when rival racketeers indulge in a little machine-gunning, he sends her to Florida until the heat cools off.

At Miami, with Sybil as a companion, Joan finds romance with Clark Brian. Learning that the girl is two-timing him, Rocci orders her home. Brian follows and, though warned what to expect from Rocci, he is in Joan's dressing room when the racketeer enters. A great dramatic scene follows, in which the self-confessed coward pleads his case. Two men battling for a woman's love and with Ross Columbo as Brian doing a great job that promises much for him in future pictures, Rocci abdicates. Marriage is followed by a kidnapping. A typical Winchell lowndown broadcast identifies the snatcher and this is topped off by the flash announcement that Crowley has been killed and the lovers are reunited.

The sales assets are evident. The title can almost carry the whole load, and it's one that can be adapted to scores of effective ballyhoo gags. Winchell, because of his column and radio broadcasting, is another factor that can be made valuable in countless ways. Where, with the exception of Constance Cummings, Gregory Ratoff and C. Henry Gordon, other names are unfamiliar as screen players, several of them are well enough known in other directions to make them particularly powerful. This is particularly true of Texas Guinan and her "Hello, sucker" fame, and Blossom Seeley, whose vaudeville career has carried her into almost every corner of the country. Paul Kelly is really making his debut in pictures, yet more personal glamour surrounds Russ Columbo, who on account of his broadcasting popularity is almost sure to have a definite following awaiting his first screen-starring appearance.

For practical purposes "Broadway Thru A Keyhole" should be publicized in a hoorah fashion. The more noise made about it, the better the box-offices. Opening day business should be kept up by a slam-bang follow-up campaign. —McCarthy, Hollywood.

Hell and High Water

(Paramount)

Drama

Selling this picture depends largely upon what the exhibitor can do with name values. On the strength of his book and previous picture, "I Cover the Waterfront," the name of Max Miller should be worth something. Supporting that is the Richard Arlen draw. Without heavy expenditure a waterfront lobby featuring all kinds of shipping gear may prove stimulating.

The title suggests the waterfront story that it is, while basically it's an odd character study. The picture is heavily dramatic for the most part, with romance that is not easily understood. The comedy strikes an obstacle of being implausible, and where a Japanese is used the dialogue becomes almost unintelligible.

Human interest is built around a little foundling, and for thrill and spectacle the United States Navy and a race track scene are incorporated.

In theme, Jericho is skipper of a garbage scow servicing the Battle Fleet. An inveterate woman hater and grimly ambitious, he nevertheless is the fatherly guardian of deserted little Barney. Picking a would-be suicide, Sally, out of his net, he quickly tells her what's what. She becomes a dance hall girl, ridiculed by her mates into taking a sucker for his roll. Fleeing, she falls into Jericho's net again only to become the further object of Jericho's ironic bitterness. Satsanuki's romantic meanderings and Peck and Mom's kidding fail to dent Jericho's armor, but the sailors seeking Sally sort of get under his skin.

Anxious to get money to buy a bigger boat, he goes to the race track with Sally, who knows all about the runners, but fails to take her tip as the winner romps home. Out on a tuna fishing trip with Satsanuki, their little boat is run down by a liner and the Jap boy dies on an island. Rescued by the fleet, returning from gunnery practice, Jericho arrives home in time to find the sucker putting Sally on the spot. One good punch on the chin eliminates that menace to Jericho's new found dreams and the finale brings the boy and girl together for keeps with a ready-made family as Barney is legally adopted.

There is little relation between what the title suggests and what the picture actually is. Build up a strong surrounding program. Because of several of the exciting scenes, particularly the naval display and the tuna fishing sequences, it should fit in well on Saturday afternoon.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Screen play written and directed by Grover Jones and William Slavens McNutt, Based on a story by Max Miller, Adaptation by Agnes Brand Leahy. My Woman

(Columbia)

Drama

A marital complication, via the triangle route, thrown against a background in and about radio broadcasting, "My Woman" offers its best selling angles in the radio atmosphere. There is the ever ready, rather easily attainable radio tieup with which to put the picture across to the patronage. Too complete emphasis on the marital angle, though it readily may draw the feminine contingent, is likely to have exactly the opposite effect on the other half of the family. Hence the suggestion that the most be made of the radio material involved.

The story is simple, rather unexciting. The title has that same marital implication. Besides the leading name of Helen Twelvetrees there is comparatively little for the marquee in the cast. Victor Jory and Wallace Ford share the masculine lead opposite Miss Twelvetrees, but theirs are the only other familiar, saleable names at the disposal of the exhibitor.

Miss Twelvetrees is an entertainer in a Panama cafe, operated by her father, with her unambitious husband, Ford, the master of ceremonies, of sorts. He refuses to be shaken out of his lethargy to the extent of going after bigger things in New York, until Miss Twelvetrees meets Jory, president of a great radio corporation, and he promises to give her an audition if she should come to Broadway. She neglects to mention that she is married. In New York nothing happens, her efforts to penetrate to Jory through numerous secretaries unavailing. Finally she sees him, confesses she is married and wants the audition for her husband, not herself, and gets him a routine announcing job.

She develops an idea for a novel character on the air, in the person of Ford, which goes over, she writing the material. Throughout Jory plays the good sport and gentleman. Success goes to Ford's head and he falls for the wiles of a smart society girl, who, laughing in the sleeves she seldom wears, makes a fool of him, and enjoys herself. The woman and drink ruin him on the air, and after the inevitable squabble, his wife leaves him, returning to Panama. The girl, Claire Dodd, meantime has dropped into his mind seeds of doubt concerning the relations of Miss Twelvetrees and Jory. The conclusion finds the down-and-out Ford back in Havana, his lesson learned, in search of the forgiveness which he readily receives.

The marital angle is too old for successful selling with it alone, consequently exploitation which concentrates on the radio phase, having at least some element of novelty, should bring better results. The picture perhaps is best played in the middle of the week.—Aaronson, New York.

Ever in My Heart

(Warner)

Drama

In drama which is rather weightily sentimental, Barbara Stanwyck offers one of her anticipated and popularly excellent performances, with intelligent and capable support. The exhibitor has in "Ever in My Heart" a picture with an unquestionable strong feminine appeal of which much may be made.

There is in the title a beauty of expression, a tendency toward sentimental romance which should be sold in copy and advertising layout, with a quiet distinctiveness, always emphasizing that quality in the film, and avoiding anything in the nature of ballyhoo. It is one of those instances where stepping off the beaten track of selling in the direction of a distinctive beauty, with thorough justification in the film itself, should be essentially of great value to the exhibitor.

Miss Stanwyck, who has a considerable following, is aided, for marquee purposes, by Ralph Bellamy, a dependable, popular performer, and Otto Kruger, who, though a more or less recent recruit from the stage, has nonetheless already demonstrated his unquestioned ability and in this offers a performance which would be well worth the exhibitor's while in emphasis.

In the tranquil atmosphere of a small, typical American town in 1909, Miss Stanwyck awaits the return from study in Germany of her cousin, Bellamy, to whom she is expected to become engaged. Equally expectant is her straight-laced, Plymouth Rock worshipping Archer family. With Bellamy, on a visit, comes a friend of Oxford, Kruger, and inevitably, Kruger and Miss Stanwyck fall in love, marry. Kruger becomes a professor in the local college, Bellamy accepts the situation with good grace. A child is born, dies of an illness, shortly after war breaks out. The Lusitania is torpedoed, and the anti-German sentiment waxes strong, becomes hate. Driven by despair, Kruger leaves to join the Fatherland. Miss Stanwyck enters canteen service. Then tragedy stalks, as she suddenly, in the canteen in France, sees Kruger, in American uniform, and Bellamy discloses the presence of a spy in the camp. Kruger, fearsome, comes to her that night. Next morning, as dawn breaks, torn between her love for him, for he is "ever in my heart," and the terror which awaits thousands of soldiers is she permits his escape, she poisons his wine and her own, and the two die together.

The tragic conclusion, though wholly in keeping, presents an obvious problem. That is another reason for the distinctive selling treatment suggested. Granting that the film is heavily sentimental, that it will provoke tears, and that it is an adult motion picture, it is nevertheless true that the average audience desires that type of story, and that if it be properly, which means distinctively, sold, the exhibitor should do well with it. It would be well to strike out for the feminine patronage, relying on that to bring the masculine accompaniment to the box office.—Aaronson, New York.

Before Dawn

(RKO Radio)

Mystery

There is rather unusually good cast material for the marquee in this mystery film, which with the addition of the story's origin, from one of the Edgar Wallace yarns, which have untold readers, should serve to make the exhibitor's selling job a great deal easier.

The story has reasonably good suspense, a large amount of excitement and a fair mystery setting, however stereotyped it may be. Heading the cast, and in a serious, not a comedian role, is Stuart Erwin. In support are the attractive Dorothy Wilson, the always capable character performer, Dudley Diges, and Warner Oland gets away from detective roles to be a villain in this picture role. He contributes his usual quota of villainy in appearance and action.

In Vienna dies the last of a notorious gang of crooks. At the hospital is a specialist in psychopathology, Oland, to whom the crook divulges the hiding place, in America, of $1,000,000 in loot, guarded for 15 years apparently, by an old woman and her equally elderly and sinister-appearing woman servant. Oland comes after the money, but meanwhile the elderly woman learns of the crook's death and, about to unearth the money, dies of shock at the sight of the "ghost" of the departed crook. Erwin is the detective on the case. In the course of his routine duties, he has arrested Miss Wilson, a spirit medium, and her father-manager, Digges. To prove her sincerity Digges offers his daughter's assistance to the police. The frankly skeptical inspector is convinced, and Miss Wilson is placed on the case of the old woman's death, which appears to be murder. Oland presents himself as a noted psychologist and is given practically free rein in the house. Then follow tramping feet in the dark, "ghosts" of obvious manufacture, and sundry mysterious comings and goings, the while Oland and Digges try to outsmart each other, both obsessed by the desire to lay hands on the $1,000,000. Digges finds the secret room, Oland discovers him there and kills him, the while Miss Wilson senses danger and suspects Oland. When Miss Wilson and Oland grapple in the hidden room over an ancient cellar cistern, Erwin arrives in time to finish Oland and save Miss Wilson.

The theme, the two men striving for the hidden money, the use of the clairvoyant girl in the solving of the crime, lend somewhat novel twists. For the mystery fans and the Wallace followers there is much to offer, and the exhibitor should make full use, in exploitation, of the use of the medium by the police.—Aaronson, New York.

The Important Witness

(Tower)

Drama

The public stenographer in the large west coast hotel, the gang leader with whom she becomes involved when she is accidental witness to one of his little "parties," and the young bus driver who takes a liking to the steno and gets her out of a tight place and into his arms, constitute the be-all and end-all of this independent concoction.

Being the "important witness" to the shooting, for which the cigar counter girl, friend of the victim, is being held as the murderer, Noel Francis is kidnaped by the gang.

Miss Francis has the lead, with Donald Dilloway, Noel Madison, Dorothy Burgess and Charles Delaney coming nearest to being familiar names and consequent marquee material. The title should afford the exhibitor opportunity for a bit of selling along the lines of the kidnaped girl who holds the fate of another girl in her hands, but cannot free herself to save an error of justice.

Too many promises would be unwise, but there is a degree of excitement and suspense in the yarn. Miss Francis is the stenographer, Dilloway the bus driver, Madison the gangster, Miss Burgess the cigar counter clerk and Delaney one of Madison's gunmen.

When Madison kills the rival gangster, Miss Francis, in her capacity of stenographer, walks in on the shooting, and is taken along when they depart. Miss Burgess, in love with the victim, is held for the murder, while Miss Francis, playing on Madison, is a prisoner in the distant ranch house of Madison. She escapes, manages to catch the passing bus on the highway, being driven by Dilloway. She believes she is safe, but Madison and a gangster board the bus on her trail. Then follow a few minutes of general excitement, when the bus is held up by Madison and driven to his ranch. Dilloway gets free and holds Madison at the point of a gun while Miss Francis, locked in the driver's compartment, pilots the racing bus through the night to the nearest town and police station, finally escorted by a bevy of motorcycle police.

That is the story. The bus sequences, which are novel, incidentally provide an idea for a little unusual exploitation with the utilization of buses and the like.

There is nothing in it that calls for any caution as to youngster attendance. The best selling spot, however, is probably somewhere in the midweek.—AARONSON, New York.

The Song You Gave Me

(British International)

Bebe's British Debut

Not since "Rio Rita" has Bebe Daniels exuded the vivacity and charm which she brings to this, her first British picture.

She is perfectly cast as Mitzi Hansen, a popular Viennese actress just returned from a triumphant American tour, and sings with captivating verve several lovely numbers woven into a logical story of love deferred.

While she is singing a request song to friends in a public supper cafe, Karl Linden, ex-officer, leaves noisily and abruptly: he is piqued because her song makes "monkeys of the military."

Later Karl is among applicants to her advertisement for a male secretary. She hands him the job so that she may get near enough to punish him. His subsequent fate may arouse in male bosoms a passion for the punitive, for Karl has not long been Mitzi's secretary when she succumbs to his charms. Karl maintains an icy front, presumably accepting her advances as part of the business, but never for one moment hoping that she is seriously enamored of a penniless ex-hussar.

Dumbly he adores; dumbly she implores, until in desperation she dictates to him a fiery letter of passion. Calmly he takes it down; then asks her, "To whom must I address this letter, madam?" At random she names a man, and not till the last moment when the resultant marriage threatens the happy ending do we learn that our frigid ex-soldier hero has not forgotten that soldiers must take whatever they conquer.

The difficult role of Karl gives Victor Varconi a chance for his best performance in years, and he and the star, who carry most of the story, provide an example in team work which artists in Britain may study with profit.

Technically the film is worthy of serious attention as indicating that British film production is no longer a pioneering proposition. There is polish and sparkle plus stellar pull to sell this film right away through U. S. A. Amusing comedy is provided by three Cavaliers —Frederick Lloyd, Claude Hulbert, and Lester Matthews—and an original gag is played out between the two principals as producer and audience respectively of an amusing miniature marionette play, reflecting their own experiences.—CHARMAN, London.

Aniakchak

(Fox)

Great Interest

Father Hubbard, Catholic priest and intrepid explorer of the wastes of Alaska, herein recounts, vocally and pictorially, in a lengthy short subject, the greatest of his adventures into the unknown, his quest for, descent into and investigation of the largest erupted volcano crater in the world, Aniakchak. And his story is one of great interest, especially for the "class" motion picture audience, for he has combined occasional pictorial magnificance with scientific interest. His journey, by dog-sled, which forms an interesting phase of the film, is featured by a visit to the Valley of 10,000 Smokes, several Eskimo villages, and the surmounting of another live volcano, where bitter cold and howling winds are in sharp contrast to the heat of the cone-shaped mountain peak. It is an interesting, worthwhile subject.—Running time, 28 minutes.

Blow Me Down

(Paramount)

Good

Popeye, the incredibly strong newspaper comic cartoon sailor, comes to the screen and also becomes animated, in this, another of the Paramount Fleisher series, which ranks with the better, more amusing cartoons, and should prove highly enjoyable to the youngsters in particular. Popeye comes ashore, flattening a few native desperadoes in the process, and proceeds to save his "goil" from a gun-toting bandit. Entertaining stuff.—Running time, 7 minutes.

'Tis Spring

(Vitaphone)

Excellent

There is amusing comedy, pleasant chorus work, attractive melody and color in this number of the Technicolor musical series of shorts. There is something to sell in the fact that Allan Jenkins and Ruth Donnelly, two of the Warner featured players, are cast. Tramps are gamboling on the greensward, when the sheriff arrives with his dogs and Jenkins and the "professor" meander onward, invading a girls' seminary to instill a taste of spring into the girls and visiting boys. It is all quite colorful, melodious and humorous, with Jenkins, the professor and Miss Donnelly, the school's dean, providing the humor.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Peeping Tom

(Universal)

Diverting

With Louis Sobol, Broadway columnist, in the background in the fourth of the William Roland-Monte Brice series bearing his name, Roy Atwell tops the several acts introduced, though for the most part they all lend materially to the entertainment. It's a good short feature.—Running time, 17 minutes.

Screen Snapshots

(Columbia)

Entertaining

There is a considerable amount of fan interest in this, as in other numbers of the series, which pictures the personalities of the screen off the set. In this instance, in a Hollywood night club, numerous of them are seen in brief moments, including Jack Holt, Anita Page, Una Merkel, Chico Marx, Richard Barthelmess, Lois Moran and many more. Ted Healey and his three stooges do a turn in the club, which, of the slapstick variety, is none the less amusing.—Running time, 8 minutes.

Strange As It Seems No. 2

(Universal)

Spottily Interesting

With the test of a picture of this kind resting largely in the variety of subjects presented, this second of the series runs a range from a Navajo Indian plucking his whiskers with a piece of tin to a Georgia farmer scratching his nose with his lower lip. There should be something for every one in this John Hix novelty.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Beau Bosko

(Vitaphone)

Fair

Bosko of the Looney Tunes cartoon comedies, takes his turn as a member of the Foreign Legion, ordered to capture the desperate desert bandit. In the town he meets the belle of the harem, who is soon pursued by the bandit. He captures him in rather novel but not unusual cartoon style. Ranks as a fair number.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Five and Dime

(Universal)

Fair

Cartoon characters dashing about in a rainstorm give a bit of fresh turn to this Oswald comedy, and the nimble leaps of the pen to all corners of a heterogeneous five and ten-cent store have something of the same merit. There is, however, the inevitable burlesque of screen stars, and the incessant theme-ing of "I Found a Million Dollar Baby" carries to monotony.—Running time, 8 minutes.

Bosko the Musketeer

(Vitaphone)

Amusing

Not particularly outstanding among animated cartoons, this number is nonetheless reasonably amusing. Bosko visits his sweetie, and falls into day dreams of himself as D'Artagnan, the Musketeer, wielding his sword and saving his girl from the bad man. The youngsters will like it, no doubt, and the oldsters will find it enjoyable of its kind.—Running time, 7 minutes.

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 195.—(A) Explain, in detail, what insulation is for. (B) Name as many types of insulation as you can. (C) What type of substances do we class as insulating materials? (D) Is there any known material that is a complete non-conductor of electricity? Explain. (E) Why are R.C. wires rated at less carrying capacity than those having fireproof insulation?

Answer to Question No. 188

Bluebook School Question No. 188 was: (A) By diagram show how you would so arrange that a new set of fuses might be cut in instantly when a projection circuit blew. (B) Tell us just what a glare spot is and what various bad effects such spots set up. (C) Tell us just what is meant by a "ground" as applied to an electric circuit. (D) Has current generated by a battery or dynamo any affinity for or inclination to escape into the earth?

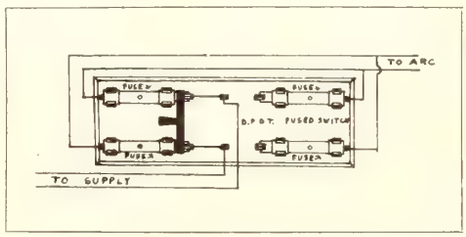
The following made at least reasonably good answers, some of them providing really excellent replies: C. Rau and S. Evans; T. Van Vaulkingburg; D. Danielson; G. E. Doe; H. H. Menifee; L. Van Buskirk and E. Kroll; J. Wentworth; B. Doe; W. Ostrum; B. Ilers and D. Holler; J. Ahrenson and G. Lomberd; L. F. Evans; A. Bailey; H. Steele and T. Potter; M. L. Wright; B. Diglah and O. Garling; D. U. Tomms: G. Thompson and G. Lilley; P. L. Algy and R. Dinmat; H. D. Schofield; G. C. Hendrie and B. T. Sampson; L. Katz; D. Johnson and A. Lomberg; C. Traxler; J. and M. L. Ginsburg; P. L. Lalley and P. Ackerson; G. E. Breston; G. Thompson; D. C. Clay and D. A. Brown; G. E. Eddy and D. J. Bulett; J. C. Richardson: D. L. Solomon, P. Hadley and N. B. Cohen; T. L. Shelton; T. M. and S. O'Brien; J. W. Morrison; D. E. Ellis and L. N. Galley; T. D. Cudmore; R. Bates; M. Winning and N. Daniels; O. Kuhne and R. Hines; D. B. Bates and J. L. Major; R. D. Grimes and A. Lomberg; L. L. Lang; P. N. Pundray; M. N. Daniels; G. L. Grimes; B. Gaitsley and B. R. Compton; N. D. Sailer; M. H. Sanders; B. T. Daniels; M. Compton; B. Walker and L. Genter; H. M. Evans; H. B. Jenkins; G. Davis and P. L. Mangan; T. R. Haley; T. L. Hessberg; W. D. Adamson and L. Simmons; T. L. Dodge; B. J. Parker and M. Gregison; H. D. Caylor, L. Peterson and D. Donohue; J. S. Bischoff and L. S. Marksley; R. K. Wayland; G. M. Marksley; L. I. Trigley; P. H. Saunders; B. T. Daniels; R. K. Wayland; F. Clarke; C. D. and L. Dodson; D. L. Bentley; Kenneth Dowling.

(A) Again we have a great pile of correct and excellent drawings from projectionists and rather than offend anyone by selecting from them one which others would feel, and rightly, to be no better than their own, I shall print the drawing made by the young man Ostrum. Darn it all, I feel rather badly about this, for so very many of you have so evidently taken so much pains with your drawings that it seems a shame not to be able to print them all. However, none of them is better than Ostrum's, though many are just as excellent, so that's that. I think I'll sidestep drawings in future.



(B) Many excellent answers, but I believe T. Van Vaulkenburg has a shade the best of it. He says: "A glare spot, so far as concerns the auditorium itself, is a small area, usually of a wall, within view of theatre patrons, or some of them, which is illuminated sufficiently higher than its immediate surroundings to be an annoyance to the eyes of patrons viewing the screen. In this I, of course, have cut my answer to fit theatres and theatre patrons. I might add that a spot that is annoying to some eyes may not be to others, as the eyes of all persons do not react equally to such a condition.

"As to the screen itself, low auditorium lighting and screen illumination may make a glare spot of all spots of white on the screen. This is especially true if the screen have high reflection powers and reflects most of the light back toward the center of the auditorium.

"As F. H. R. many times has said, glare spots reduce the box office income for the reason that patrons who find what they believe to be the picture (and in the latter case it really is) to 'hurt their eyes,' are not likely to come as often as they would were their eyes not thus strained. Strain is of course injurious to the eyes and may, if continued or experienced too frequently, permanently weaken them, but I do not believe our editor wishes us to go into that phase of the matter."

A corking good answer, if you ask me. Take note that by his answer friend Van Vaulkenburg makes it evident that he really understands the whole matter very well; also make note that in reading my department he sometimes makes personal investigation of the arguments advanced, and that, gentlemen, spells progressiveness and real interest in the profession.

(C) D. L. Solomon, P. Hadley and N. B. Cohen reply as follows: "The term 'ground' has more than one application in electrics. (a) It may mean purposely connecting one side of a circuit to the earth permanently to act as a return circuit. This practice obtains with some rural telephone systems. It may mean the grounding of neutral in an Edison 3-wire system to prevent possible charging of conduit, etc., with double the voltage of one side of the system, usually 220 volts. It may mean a connection of one side of a circuit with some object, such as, for example, a projector lamphouse. It may mean an unintended connection between two polarities having sufficient resistance not to be termed a short, yet resistance low enough to permit current leakage."

(D) From the pile I have selected a great number of answers reading thus, though the idea is couched in a wide range of words: "Current has no affinity for the earth except insofar as earth may offer a path of opposite polarity of the same power source."

J. C. Jenkins--His Colyum

Salina, Kansas

DEAR HERALD:

Hop Peterson at Genoa, Nebraska, told us that he played to eighteen hundred people in his house in one day recently. This was in a town of one thousand. We said to him, "Now look here Hop, you are all right when it comes to fish stories but you ought to confine your talent to that field." Then Ma Peterson spoke up and said, "Say, you old devil, don't you call my husband a liar." And Ma being a very large woman, we apologized. Then Hop told us that the show was a free show put on by the merchants of the town.

R. D. White of the Royal theatre at Fullerton, Nebraska, runs a cafe in connection with his show. That's a good idea. He feeds 'em physically as well as mentally. He says that when they get filled up on hamburgers and 3.2 they are in a better condition to stand the show. We didn't try his hamburgers.

Getting His Batting Eye

Tommy Thompson is batting about 750 at his theatre at St. Paul. Tommy used to bat 1000 when he was selling film out of Omaha but he says he strikes out too often at his box office. There are a lot of curves in this theatre business that Tommy didn't get onto until he left the road and went into the big league. But he'll come out all right for he's got it in him.

We see by the press that a doctor at Tulsa, Oklahoma, delivered an address before the medical society on how to treat "Neuropsychiatrics." Good gosh, if they are going to hang that thing onto us somebody ought to know how to treat it. We knew a girl once who had phyplosyclemgoregm and that was a whole lot worse.

Jack Riggs who operates the theatre at Central City, is considering opening a theatre at Grand Island. He expects to make it a ten cent house. If the house has the capacity and Jack caters to the hired girls and hayrack boys we'll betcha he makes it win. This isn't the day for full dress performances. The most of the public are now wearing overalls. We need a new pair ourself.

A. F. Jenkins has taken over the City theatre at David City. Some time ago he sold this theatre to Monsky Brothers of Omaha but they recently gave it up and now A. F. is in full charge again.

A.F. said to us: "You know, Colonel, us Jenkins folks must be respected. It was a Jenkins who brought the Plymouth Rock chickens over with our Pilgrim Fathers; it was a Jenkins who taught 'em how to make limburger cheese, and it was a Jenkins who carried the flag in the front ranks at Bull Run." and we said, "You are right, A.F., and the Jenkins family have made the bull run ever since, mostly bull." Then he gave us a check for a renewal of his subscription to the Herald.

Nothing Cool About Kuhl

We have called at Seward several times and failed to find I. N. Kuhl, the manager of the theatre, but this time we found him at home, and we are mighty well pleased that we did, for we met him and his estimable wife and had a delightful visit with them. They were giving an anniversary show and they played to two packed houses, which proves that it pays to give an anniversary performance.

Harry Gould operates the Sunbeam at Geneva for Bert Beams of Red Cloud. Harry is a mighty likeable durn pup and we hope we will always find him when we call.

Art Record still runs the Majestic at Hebron. Art said, "Well, Colonel, I don't care if I do." Then we ran onto Ike Rubens, who sells film out of Omaha for Paramount, and he said he didn't care if he did too. We never saw a film salesman yet who would refuse if you offered to buy, and it takes a lot to fill a film salesman up. They all wear rubber belts.

We heard a crooner on the radio last night and there was an airedale lying on the lobby floor and as soon as that crooner started he got up and began to howl as loud as he could and kept it up until the crooner finished. We never thought much of an airedale as a house dog, but by gosh we went out and bought that pup fifty cents worth of beefsteak.

Jack Galbraith at Superior was having a fight with the Universal manager and Harry Lefholz, salesman, over the cancellation of some news reels, when we called. They wanted us to referee the fight but we refused on the grounds of prejudice, for we hoped they both got licked. The melee went to a ten round draw.

R. E. Cooper is soon to open a theatre at Scandia, Kansas. He gave us a subscription for the HERALD as the first important requisite. It's the first and most important thing all showmen ought to do in preparing to open a new theatre. Figure it out yourself.

Sam Blair in Hospital

We stopped at Belleville, Kansas, to call on our old friend, Sam Blair. Sam was in the hospital and recovering from a very serious operation. Mrs. Blair said we could go out and call on him if we would agree not to start a political argument with him, as we usually do, and we agreed we wouldn't, but when we got out there about the first thing he said was, "Colonel, as soon as I get out of here me and Roosevelt are going to shoot this depression so full of holes it won't hold hazelbrush," and we said, "Oh yeah, what are you going to use for a gun, air rifles or pop guns?" Then Sam got excited and said to the nurse, "Hand me that ball bat over in that corner, I'll show this hammerhead what we are going to use." We finally got him quieted down and then he told us about his plans to go duck hunting up in the sand hill country and he even invited us to go with him.

Charlie Swiercinsky is running true to form at the Majestic theatre at Washington. This is the town that was virtually blown away by a cyclone a year ago last spring. It wrecked the most of the town and blew the south half of Charlie's theatre over into Missouri, but the whole town has been rebuilt and Charlie is right on the job. That's the way these Jayhawkers do business.

Why is it that a radio announcer always introduces the talent as the world's greatest this, that and the other thing? There is more bull on the radio nowadays than there is in the Union Stock Yards.

A Community Necessity

Walt Hohefeld of the Elite theatre at Greenleaf is a general utilities man. In addition to operating the theatre, he runs a filling station, repairs radios for the community, operates a matrimonial bureau and finds husbands for the hired girls. There are two things he says he won't do, act as wet nurse for the farmers' cows and worm Mrs. Malony's pups. Outside of that he's at the beck and call of the community both day and night.

F. W. Davis is still on a batting spree at the Fox Rex theatre at Clay Center. He hasn't struck out once yet.

H. F. Strowig of the Lyric theatre in Abilene broke his arm a few days ago playing polo. When an exhibitor goes to playing polo it's time for a mental test. Yes, you are right, we ought to have one too.

The last time we met H. E. Ulrich he was operating a theatre in Springfield, Missouri. He now operates the Fox Watson here in Salina and is still the swell fellow he always was. C. M. Morehead is the local manager of the Strand, another Fox house. Fox seems to know how to pick good ones.

Majestic Gets B.I.P. Films, Increasing Lineup to 15

Herman Gluckman, president of Majestic Pictures, has concluded a deal with Arthur Dent, vice-president of B.I.P., for three productions, with American stars, which will be released by Majestic in addition to the 12 already announced.

The first of this BIP group will be a Thelma Todd-Stanley Lupino comedy directed by Monty Banks. The second, starring Ben Lyon and Sally Eilers, is a comedy directed by Allan Dwan, and the third, a comedy drama, also is directed by Monty Banks, starring Constance Cummings.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

IN this, the exhibitor's own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
1790 Broadway, New York

B. I. P. America

MY WIFE'S FAMILY: Gene Gerrard—Good old slapstick comedy. How it does draw in the rural districts. One of the funniest pictures ever made. Everybody happy. Sound very good and even American ears should have no difficulty getting it, but picture may be too clean to go over in the States.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Kerrobert, Canada. Rural patronage.

British and Dominions

FLAG LIEUTENANT, THE: Henry Edwards—Very good action picture that did nice business. Some excellent sea shots of the British Navy. Sound rather hard to get at first but cleared up after the first few reels. Consider the sound version not nearly as good as the old silent picture.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Kerrobert, Canada. Rural patronage.

British International

MAID OF THE MOUNTAINS, THE: Nancy Brown—Slightly above average program picture with more slapstick comedy and less music than I expected. Patrons as a whole were disappointed as owing to the popularity of the stage play they looked for something better. Having seen the original stage production in London, I can say that the film did not compare at all favorably. Receipts were satisfactory, particularly in view of reasonable rental.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Kerrobert, Canada. Rural patronage.

Chesterfield

FORGOTTEN: June Clyde, William Collier, Jr.—A good show but no cast to draw anybody in to see it. The picture alone was good but somehow those independents do not draw unless double featured. Running time, 50 minutes. Played October 4-5.—William Dabb, Lyric Theatre, Shenandoah, Pa. General patronage.

Columbia

AIR HOSTESS: James Murray—The fact that this story is based on the serial that ran in True Story Magazine gives the exhibitor a break and True Story readers came to see the picture who are not regular movie goers, and believe me, they're not disappointed as Columbia again gives them a honey. Business above the average on this one. Running time, 69 minutes. Played October 1-2.—Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

ANN CARVER'S PROFESSION: Fay Wray, Gene Raymond—This is another good picture from Columbia. This is the only picture we have played in some time that has pleased 100 per cent. The story of a wife who seeks to make a career for herself is the theme of the picture. The story is so human that the patrons seem to forget it is a picture. A touch of comedy here and there adds to the picture. Acting splendid and business average. Running time, 68 minutes. Played October 5.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

BELOW THE SEA: Ralph Bellamy, Fay Wray—Good action drama, with some fine undersea shots. Played September 8-9.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

CHILD OF MANHATTAN: John Boles, Nancy Carroll—Good program picture. Nothing objectionable in the picture. Ladies will probably like it better than the men. Played October 1-2.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

LADY FOR A DAY: Warren William, May Robson—Columbia has made a star for MGM in May Robson. Here is excellent entertainment. The picture is built around May Robson (Apple Annie) and she is fine. I know of no one that could have handled her part better. Ned Sparks and Guy Kibbee furnish plenty of laughs. Had lots of compliments. Boys, step on this. It will stand up. Played September 24-25.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

PAROLE GIRL: Mae Clarke, Ralph Bellamy—Nice little picture, clean and holds interest from beginning to end. Miss Clarke and Mr. Bellamy both good. Our patrons liked it and said so. Played September 28-29.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

SOLDIERS OF THE STORM: Regis Toomey, Anita Page—A swell little action picture.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

THAT'S MY BOY: Richard Cromwell, Dorothy Jordan—One of the swellest football stories that it has been my pleasure to see or run. The patrons ate it up and we doubled our business on the second night. Not an unfavorable comment, plenty of praise. Columbia certainly has delivered some swell product this year. Running time, 67 minutes. Played October 6-7.—Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

Empire Films, Ltd.

LOOKING ON THE BRIGHT SIDE: Gracie Fields—Admittedly a good picture will appeal more to Old Country people, but can be built up by a little advance with the Theme Song. Did fair businss with this and it was well liked. Running time, 82 minutes. Played September 8-9.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

First National

BUREAU OF MISSING PERSONS: Lewis Stone, Glenda Farrell, Bette Davis—The title may mean nothing, but if you can get them in they will just naturally eat this up. Snappy and full of grand entertainment. Worthy of your best playing time. Pat O'Brien steals the show. Running time, 8 reels. Played October 3-4.—R. W. Hickman, Lyric Theatre, Greenville, Ill. General patronage.

CENTRAL AIRPORT: Richard Barthelmess—Good picture, good business. Played September 29-30.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

I LOVED A WOMAN: Edward G. Robinson, Kay Francis—This is a good picture but too high for this town and I am afraid that this picture is going to be a flop in many a small town. I would like to know the reason of First National putting Robinson in a role like that. If they put Robinson in any more roles like this it is going to kill him right. He is dying now, and if they put Robinson in any more it is just too bad for the small town exhibitor. And can you imagine Warner Brothers making this picture a special. The only thing that is special about this picture is the price. And if they should make another picture of Robinson like this, they should give it to the exhibitors for nothing. The acting of those three stars is very good but some times the acting is not everything in the picture. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 1-2-3.—William Dabb, Lyric Theatre, Shenandoah, Pa. General patronage.

THREE ON A MATCH: Joan Blondell, Warren William, Ann Dvorak, Bette Davis—This feature seemed to give good satisfaction to all. Double billed with Tom Mix's "Hidden Gold," and the program did above average business in the face of most unfavorable weather conditions. Saturday would probably have outgrossed "42d Street" if the roads had not been mired up.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Kerrobert, Canada. Rural patronage.

THREE ON A MATCH: Joan Blondell, Warren William, Ann Dvorak—Very dramatic number; good business. Played September 24-25.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Fox

FACE IN THE SKY: Lee Tracy, Marian Nixon—Good entertainment; fair business. Played September 15-16.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

HELLO SISTER: James Dunn, Boots Mallory—Another block booking product. A picture that could have been sent back to the studio for remaking but for the fact that it was presold by block booking. Business N. S. G.—Herman J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

London Film

COUNSEL'S OPINION: Henry Kendall, Cyril Maude—For a good society bedroom type comedy drama this is OK. All characters are well chosen. Cyril Maude is starred but the rest of the cast deserve honorable mention, for they were all good. Well liked. Business fair. Double billed this one. Running time, 71 minutes. Played September 27-28.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

Majestic

SING, SINNER, SING: Paul Lukas, Leila Hyams—A fair picture of a torch singer but nothing to rave about. It will get by in some spots. Recording not so good. Running time, 65 minutes. Played October 8-9-10.—William Dabb, Lyric Theatre, Shenandoah, Pa. General patronage.

MGM

ANOTHER LANGUAGE: Helen Hayes, Robert Montgomery—A very good program picture. Did average business. Running time, 79 minutes. Played October 6-7.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

BARBARIAN, THE: Ramon Novarro, Myrna Loy—Didn't get over very well here.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

BARBARIAN, THE: Ramon Novarro, Myrna Loy—A story of Arabian deserts, romance, sheiks, etc. Goes great with the ladies, especially the songs in this one. A good picture doing good business. Running time, 82 minutes. Played October 4-5.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

BROADWAY TO HOLLYWOOD: Alice Brady, Frank Morgan, Jackie Cooper—Say, Daddy J. C. Jenkins, if you think you've seen the theatre business portrayed on the screen, you just ain't seen anything "yet." It's a pleasure to show that good old trooper, Alice Brady. "Oh, for those good old silent days." Frank Morgan did himself proud. It's got everything you want for a good family audience entertainment. What more can you expect. Keep it up, Leo.—Wm. Roob, The Grand Theatre, Port Washington, Wis. General patronage.

DEVIL'S BROTHER, THE: Laurel and Hardy—A good Laurel and Hardy picture.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

DEVIL'S BROTHER, THE: Laurel and Hardy—Dennis King shares the limelight with his pleasing singing in this picture, but that doesn't take anything from the work of these two comedians. They are as good as ever and have some real good laugh producing gags in this one. Business better than average. Running time, 92 minutes. Played October 2-3.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

DEVIL'S BROTHER, THE: Laurel and Hardy, Dennis King—This production brought more laughs from patrons than any picture this year. There were minutes at a time when nothing could be heard but the laughter of the audience. I have read criticisms in this column that there was too much singing. My patrons did not seem to think so. In my personal opinion the singing of King was equally as pleasing and entertaining as the comedy antics of Laurel and Hardy. I was, however, somewhat disappointed in the drawing power of the picture. Running time, 92 minutes. Played October 3-4.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

DEVIL'S BROTHER, THE: Laurel and Hardy—I liked the picture very much, especially the singing of Dennis King. The real comedy was in Henry Armetta as the waiter trying to imitate Stan Laurel. All in all it was good and pleased almost 100 per cent. Played October 4-5.—Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

LOOKING FORWARD: Lionel Barrymore, Lewis Stone—Should go good in England. No good here.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

PEG O' MY HEART: Marion Davies—The best Davies picture in some time. Pleased my patrons.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

PEG O' MY HEART: Marion Davies—A good tale of Old Ireland, with songs that have the air of peat bog and shamrock. They certainly went for it in a big way here. A real refreshing picture. Business good. Running time, 86 minutes. Played September 29-30.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

PENTHOUSE: Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy—Lots of favorable comments on this picture. Warner Baxter hits his stride in this one and it pleased a good Sunday crowd. Running time, 7 reels. Played October 1-2.—R. W. Hickman, Lyric Theatre, Greenville, Ill. General patronage.

STRANGER'S RETURN, THE: Lionel Barrymore, Miriam Hopkins—This is a very good show, in my opinion, but it pleased only about 50% here. Running time, 89 minutes. Played September 25-26.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

TUGBOAT ANNIE: Marie Dressler, Wallace Beery—A box office natural. We ordinarily run a picture two nights. On a three-day engagement with this production Thursday night was almost capacity, Friday night every seat was filled and Saturday night we turned them away. Broke all attendance records for the house. Beat the former "Ben Hur" record by over a hundred. Seemed to please everybody. Metro-Goldwyn is certainly releasing some fine productions this season. Running time, 88 minutes. Played October 5-6-7.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

Monogram

DEVIL'S MATE: Peggy Shannon, Preston Foster—This is a very good picture of the mystery type from Monogram. A good story and splendid acting. Should prove to do a good business. I personally would like to see the producers get away from the murder angle, but it seems that they never will. We played this one day to a fair business, but it should do much better than some of the specials. Running time, 68 minutes. Played October 3.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

Paramount

BIG EXECUTIVE: Ricardo Cortez, Elizabeth Young—Nice little program picture. Is clean and that's something. Played September 26-27.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

COLLEGE HUMOR: Bing Crosby, Jack Oakie, Burns & Allen—A good, up-to-the-minute musical comedy in which Jack Oakie excels himself. Bing Crosby's singing is an outstanding feature. Did good business. Ran it on week-end. Running time, 81 minutes. Played September 22-23.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B.C. Neighborhood patronage.

DISGRACED: Helen Twelvetrees—Starts with the promise of a dandy picture, fizzles out to a close that ruins the picture.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

GAMBLING SHIP: Cary Grant, Benita Hume—This is a very good picture, but has not much appeal for the ladies. Entirely too much gangster atmosphere and ladies do not want that. However, it will answer any one day questions. We played this one day to an average business and especially the men were well pleased. If the producers ever get away from gangster pictures, maybe the business will come back. Running time, 72 minutes. Played October 6.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

I LOVE THAT MAN: Nancy Carroll, Edmund Lowe—Is not much to this, very unsatisfactory here. Running time, 75 minutes. Played September 29-30.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

MIDNIGHT CLUB: George Raft, Clive Brook—Fair program to mediocre business. The public is fed up with criminals.—Herman J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

ONE SUNDAY AFTERNOON: Gary Cooper—Fair program. They liked it. Got by. The producers overlook an immense bet in not making stories into serials for the newspapers and selling the mats for same at a minimum price to exhibitors. They never seem to have gotten how to do this through their heads. It is a very important thing.—Herman J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

70,000 WITNESSES: Phillips Holmes—Used this on our 15c bargain program. Attendance larger than usual. Patrons seemed to enjoy this one very much. Charles Ruggles was the whole show. He was a scream. This is just the season for a picture of this kind. Sound extra good. Played October 4.—Marion Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

STORY OF TEMPLE DRAKE: Miriam Hopkins, Jack LaRue—A picture with some excellent acting in it by Miriam Hopkins, Jack LaRue and William Gargan. A little different story from usual, thence the appeal. Received favorable comments. Business fair. Double-billed it. Running time, 67 minutes. Played September 27-28.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

SUNSET PASS: Tom Keene, Randolph Scott—This is an extra good western picture based on the story by Zane Grey and is crammed full of action and thrills. This one should please all types of persons who are looking for something different. Drama, romance, comedy and excitement aplenty. A romantic drama of the old west, showing a man who dared death to establish law and order and win the love of a woman. Business good. Running time, 65 minutes. Played September 30.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. Country patronage.

THIS DAY AND AGE: Charles Bickford, Judith Allen—A good picture but not up to the usual De Mille standard. Took a terrible flop at the box office and never heard a soul say they liked it. The story is good and the acting fine but somehow it failed to click. Running time, 8 reels. Played September 24-25.—R. W. Hickman, Lyric Theatre, Greenville, Ill. General patronage.

TO THE LAST MAN: Randolph Scott—This is a very good Zane Grey picture. It pleased here. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 4-5.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

TORCH SINGER: Claudette Colbert—If this star is a favorite with your patrons here is your chance. It's the best thing she ever did and that is saying a lot. She is absolutely perfect in this picture and it will please everyone. Running time, 8 reels. Played October 5-6.—R. W. Hickman, Lyric Theatre, Greenville, Ill. General patronage.

Principal

TARZAN THE FEARLESS: Buster Crabbe—Below average business even with big kid trade. Picture drew adverse comment from many adults who expected a feature and got a long-drawn-out serial installment. Sorry I ran it.—Herman J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

RKO

CHRISTOPHER STRONG: Katharine Hepburn—Depressing story with an unhappy ending. Business not so good. Played September 17-18. — Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

DELUGE, THE: Peggy Shannon, Lois Wilson, Sidney Blackmer, Matt Moore—Very good. The earthquake and tidal waves, although made in miniature, are almost perfectly realistic. Good audience.—Wm. Roob, The Grand Theatre, Port Washington, Wis. General patronage.

MIDSHIPMAN JACK: Bruce Cabot, Betty Furness—An excellent picture woven around the Naval Academy. Pleased all.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MORNING GLORY: Katharine Hepburn—"Morning Glory" has now broken two records, one at RKO Music Hall where it broke all records for high attendance, and one at Orpheum Theatre, Harrisburg, Ill., where it broke all records for low attendance. We had more walkouts on this one than in many months. Too much talking and good acting, in place of good action. It's a swell picture for those who like high class pictures, but not made for our town. Running time, 74 minutes. Played October 1-2.—Steve Farrar, Orpheum Theatre, Harrisburg, Ill. Small city patronage.

NO MARRIAGE TIES: Richard Dix—A dandy picture with a title that is misleading and means nothing. Watch this Elizabeth Allen.—Wm. Roob, The Grand Theatre, Port Washington, Wis. General patronage.

PROFESSIONAL SWEETHEART: Ginger Rogers, Norman Foster—Just so-so. Okay if you get them in to see the Ipsie Wipsie radio girl.—Wm. Roob, The Grand Theatre, Port Washington, Wis. General patronage.

RAFTER ROMANCE: Ginger Rogers, Norman Foster—Pleased our Saturday night crowd immensely. A fine, clean comedy.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SON OF THE BORDER: Tom Keene—Another good old reliable western. Business just so-so. Played September 22-23.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

United Artists

RAIN: Joan Crawford—This is only a fair picture and many patrons will leave very much displeased. This is almost a year old and if you have not played it, then don't. We played this in place of a jungle picture, to a good one-day business, but most of our patrons were displeased with it. The supporting cast includes Walter Huston, William Gargan and Guy Kibbee. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 2.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SECRETS: Mary Pickford, Leslie Howard—Mary is not the draw she used to be. She only appeals to the gentler sex. Although there is some good western stuff in it, it is rather stereotyped. A nice picture but only fair business resulted. Running time, 81 minutes. Played September 25-26.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

State Rights

SEVENTH COMMANDMENT: Played one day to adults only and had people from all over the county. People that had never even been to the theatre here before. If our home people had turned out like the out-of-town pople did this would have been a record-breaker. In addition to the above feature picture we used the Max Schmeling vs. Max Baer fight picture and the two together made exceptionally good drawing cards. Some of the cranks said the picture was too raw and that it should never have been permitted to be shown. But we noticed there were no walkouts so they must have enjoyed it. Those that complain the most are not always so easily shocked. Believe we made a mistake by not playing it two days.—Marion Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

Universal

COHENS AND KELLYS IN TROUBLE: George Sidney, Charles Murray—Very funny and entirely clean. Good business. Played September 10-11.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

DON'T BET ON LOVE: Lew Ayres, Ginger Rogers—A very pleasing and satisfying picture to better business than expected.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

HER FIRST MATE: Slim Summerville, Zasu Pitts—Have noticed some good reviews on this but I rate it as a passable program picture. There are no funny situations. At least, my audience did not laugh a single time. I believe this team should not make to exceed one picture every six months. Played September 30.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

KING OF THE ARENA: Ken Maynard—A good western better than average. Some different angle from other westerns. Some good trick riding from Ken and Bobby Nelson. Should take in any town where they like westerns. Running time, 65 minutes. Played September 29-30. — William Dabb, Lyric Theatre, Shenandoah, Pa. General patronage.

KISS BEFORE THE MIRROR: Frank Morgan, Nancy Carroll, Paul Lukas—Better than the title led me to expect. It's a heavy dramatic courtroom scene. Fair business. Played October 1-2.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LADIES MUST LOVE: June Knight, Neil Hamilton—This is a very good show. Pleased about 75%. Very good in these times. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 2-3.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

LADIES MUST LOVE: June Knight, Neil Hamilton—A very nice little picture. This new star, June Knight, is very good. She sings well and dances gracefully, and should become a draw if given the right kind of pictures. This is another Gold Digger story, same type as all the others, but Uncle Carl does not want 50% of the gross for this one; in fact, he has never asked for more than was coming to him in all the 25 years we have been doing business with him. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 8-9.—Steve Farrar, Orpheum Theatre, Harrisburg, Ill. Small city patronage.

MOONLIGHT AND PRETZELS: Mary Brian, Leo Carrillo—To say this is a wonderful picture would be putting it mildly. Some will tell you that other musicals that have been released this year are better, but my personal opinion is there could not be any better picture than this one. Several numbers on the show stand out above all the rest. One of them is "Moonlight and Pretzels" and the other "You Gotta Get Up and Go To Work." Everybody connected with this picture is right up and at 'em. Business 200%.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

MOONLIGHT AND PRETZELS: Mary Brian, Leo Carrillo—Good, grand, great. A swell musical show to good business.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

TRAIL DRIVE, THE: Ken Maynard—A fair western, not up to Maynard standard. Running time, 61 minutes. Played September 27-28.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

Warner

42ND STREET: Warner Baxter, Bebe Daniels, Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell—This pleased the public but was a disappointment to me, particularly from the B. O. viewpoint, as did not do more than half of what I had hoped for.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Kerrobert, Canada. Rural patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1933: Warren William, Joan Blondell, Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler—This is a marvelous picture, which words cannot describe. This is the second run of this picture to a good business and every patron well pleased. The settings are gorgeous and the songs and music are good. The last scene, "The Forgotten Man" scene, seemed to impress the patrons more than the others. It is a sure fire box office hit. Play it and see for yourself. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 9-10.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MAN FROM MONTEREY, THE: John Wayne, Ruth Hall—This is a very good western picture and will please everyone, young or old. Plenty of action and thrills, with a touch of comedy here and there to complete the entertainment. The story goes back to the days of 1848 and the locale is the Mexican border. When Warner produces such good westerns, it is too bad that they have discontinued them on the new season contracts. Running time, 57 minutes. Played October 7.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. Country patronage.

PICTURE SNATCHER: James Cagney—Rough, rowdy and spicy in spots. Fair business on an extra midweek program. Played October 3-4.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

VOLTAIRE: George Arliss—This is a wonderful picture, expertly produced, but has absolutely no drawing power in the small towns. Arliss turns in some splendid acting, as do Doris Kenyon and Margaret Lindsay, but the acting is not enough to pull up this type of story. This is a historical drama of France, located in Paris in 1762, and is another costume picture. Business below average. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 28-29.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

VOLTAIRE: George Arliss—Excellent Arliss picture that as usual drew the village people and kept the country folks at home. Receipts above average in face of stiff counter attractions so consider I have no complaint to offer except the price.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Kerrobert, Canada. Rural patronage.

Short Features

Associated Screen News

CARNIVAL ON SKATES: Very pretty short that pleased all.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Kerrobert, Canada. Rural patronage.

Columbia

BLUE RHYTHM: Mickey Mouse—One of the best cartoons I have ever seen. Hottest music and plenty of action. Running time, one reel.—Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

FISHIN' AROUND: Mickey Mouse—Another good cartoon from Walt Disney. Boy, how he can make these black and white characters act! Running time, one reel.—Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

POOR FISH, THE: Lambs Gambol—My patrons liked this comedy very much. There isn't a dull moment in it. Running time, two reels.—Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOT: No. 11—Plenty good. Shows the Marx Brothers and Sid Grauman laying the sidewalk near Grauman's Chinese Theatre. Also an up and up polo game among the stars of Hollywood. You can't go wrong on this one. Running time, one reel. Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

Educational

FARMER'S FATAL FOLLY: Moran and Mack—Seemed to please. Several amusing situations which got some laughs. Running time, two reels.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

GIANTS OF THE NORTH: Bray's Naturgraphs—This is an excellent single reel and different.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HITCH HIKER, THE: Harry Langdon—Patrons seemed to enjoy it from the suppressed laughs. Personally did not think much of it. Running time, two reels.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

TORCHY ROLLS HIS OWN: Ray Cooke—Good comedy.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Kerrobert, Canada. Rural patronage.

MGM

ARABIAN TIGHTS: Charley Chase—Good two-reel comedy. The two songs by a quartet add materially. Running time, two reels.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

BIRTHDAY BLUES: Our Gang—A good Our Gang comedy. The kids just love it. Helps out on a sophisticated heavy drama program. Running time, 20 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

CALL HER SAUSAGE: Taxi Boys—Without their taxi. This is the best one so far. If you have a German clientele you can feature it big.—Wm. Roob, The Grand Theatre, Port Washington, Wis. General patronage.

FALLEN ARCHES: Charley Chase—A good comedy. Good for a lot of laughs. Running time, 19 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

FORGOTTEN BABIES: Our Gang—A good kid's comedy. Suits grown-ups too, for that matter. For good, wholesome fun you'd go a long way to beat this. Running time, 17 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

NATURE IN THE WRONG: Charley Chase—A very funny Charlie Chase comedy. This time he goes back to his ancestors and becomes an ape man.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PHONEY EXPRESS: Flip the Frog—A good cartoon comedy well liked by all ages. Running time, 7 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

RUMMY, THE: Taxi Boys—This is the first of this series that actually got some laughs. It is a real good comedy. Running time, two reels.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

SEA SPIDER: Oddity—A good educational short subject. Makes a great filler. Running time, 9 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

SNEAK EASILY: Zasu Pitts, Thelma Todd—Pitts and Todd are very good in this one. Goes over great. Running time, 18 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

SOILERS, THE: Zasu Pitts, Thelma Todd—Keeps the audience rocking with laughter. A splendid comedy and recommended. Running time, 19 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

STRANGE INNERTUBE: Taxi Boys—Just a comedy. Rather inane type of picture at first, warms up toward the end. Just fair. Running time, 19 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

TAXI BARONS: Taxi Boys—Good slapstick.—Robt. K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. Railroad and general patronage.

TOWED IN A HOLE: Laurel and Hardy—Laurel and Hardy are as good as ever in this one. Good for a lot of laughs. Some new gags in this, too. Running time, 20 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

TWICE TWO: Laurel and Hardy—One of the best two reelers put out by this pair. Some great doubling done by both of them. A laugh from start to finish. Running time, 20 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

WRECKETY WRECKS: Taxi Boys—It is a comedy of mediocre type, that's all. Running time, 19 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

YOUNG IRONSIDES: Charley Chase—Very good Chase comedy.—Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BUNDLE OF BLUES: A real band act. Excellent singing and good dancing. "Stormy Weather" pleased all—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DETECTIVE TOM HOWARD OF THE SUICIDE SQUAD: Tom Howard—Only fair entertainment is all that I can say about this one-reeler from Paramount. This kind of comedy has never been liked in our town and here's hoping that this one will end them. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

DUCKY DEAR: Sidney Toler—Not much of a comedy. Running time, two reels.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

I YAM WHAT I YAM: Popeye the Sailor—Excellent cartoon. Plenty of laughs and action. Running time, one reel.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

I'LL BE GLAD WHEN YOU'RE DEAD, YOU RASCAL, YOU: Screen Song—Betty Boop, Louis Armstrong—Poor.—Robt. K. Yauncey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. Railroad and general patronage.

LET'S DANCE: Burns and Allen—Satisfactory, on par with prior shorts by these popular radio stars. Running time, one reel.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

OLD MAN OF THE MOUNTAINS: Betty Boop with Cab Calloway—After being an enthusiast on these Screen Songs it was an awful let-down to have to show this reel. It seems to me that there is but little excuse to take a cartoon that is primarily the one thing in the show the kids really like and make it a vulgar, smutty blare of noise and gags without humor. Running time, one reel.—Henry Reeve, Mission Theatre, Menard, Texas. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL: No. 1—One of the best pictorials. Shows three colored bands in action. Give this preferred booking.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

STOOPNOCRACY: Stoopnagle and Budd—A very clever Screen Song with Stoopnagle and Budd. Gives them a laugh.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO

ART IN THE RAW: Edgar Kennedy—Mediocre comedy that just got by.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Kerrobert, Canada. Rural patronage.

CUBBY'S PICNIC: Cartoon—These Cubby Cartoons are turning out to be excellent.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre. Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HIP, ZIP, HOORAY: Eugene Pallette, Nat Carr—A good comedy.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

HOCUS FOCUS: Cark & McCullough—This started out fairly well, but petered out at the end.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

KICKING THE CROWN AROUND: Clark & McCullough—Clark & McCullough turn out another real comedy.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MOTHER-IN-LAW'S DAY: Edgar Kennedy—A good family comedy that has several laughs. Running time, two reels.—Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

United Artists

FATHER NOAH'S ARK: Silly Symphony—Excellent and drew considerable business.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Kerrobert, Canada. Rural patronage.

THREE LITTLE PIGS: Silly Symphony—This is the best colored short in many a day. Have had patrons come back to see it the second time and numerous phone calls. You can't go wrong on this one. Running time, 7 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

ALIAS THE PROFESSOR: James Gleason—A funny comedy—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

WARREN DOANE BREVITY: Excellent! It should go over any place. One of the best shorts we have had in a long time. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

Warner Vitaphone

C'EST PARIS: Good color musical.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

BREAKWATER: Pepper Pot—Not so hot. A depression story.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DOUBLE-CROSSING OF COLUMBUS, THE: Charles Judels—This is a very good musical comedy with plenty of pretty girls and good music. There are several specialties in this that are knockouts. Hats off to Vitaphone for this series of musicals. They are just what the public want. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

FIFI: Vivienne Segal—A splendid musical short that appeals to everyone. Great soprano singing some old numbers that touch your heartstrings. Running time, 22 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

HERE, PRINCE: Joe Penner—Poor. Haven't been able to figure out what it was supposed to be.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

HOW'VE YOU BEAN? "Fatty" Arbuckle—This is a very good comedy of the old slapstick variety. Just the type of comedy that made Arbuckle famous and the kind that everyone seems to enjoy. Full of laughs and should please both young and old. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

"NO" MAN, THE: Broadway Brevity—Very good.—Running time, 20 minutes.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

ONE STEP AHEAD OF MY SHADOW: Merry Melody—This is a good musical cartoon comedy. Scenes are in China and the drawing is excellent. This will make a good filler on any program. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SEA DEVILS: Pepper Pot—This Pepper Pot is a story of deep sea commercial fishing; interesting, and with a witty running comment accompanying it. Running time, 10 minutes.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

TIP-TAP-TOE: Broadway Brevity—Mildly interesting.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Kerrobert, Canada. Rural patronage.

20,000 CHEERS FOR THE CHAIN GANG: Broadway Brevity—This is a very good comedy of the Brevity series. Good music, pretty girls and some very fine specialties. Such radio stars as the Pickens sisters and others. This is good entertainment and will make a good filler. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

WONDER SPOTS OF THE WORLD: E. M. Newman World Adventures—This is a very interesting and educational one reeler, showing just what the title implies. Wonder Spots of the World. Shots of the Victoria Falls, Great Wall of China and other wonderful things. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

Crosby Gaige recently announced for early production the following plays, "Ten Minute Alibi," which opened Tuesday, and "A Man in the Zoo," "Hat, Coat and Glove," "Ragged Army."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

LET 'EM ALL IN

Why cannot these gatherings be put on in the various key cities for the information and inspiration of other circuit and independent exhibitors and managers as well? We refer to the recent Boston convention of the Mullin and Pinanski New England theatre circuit, where managers were brought together to discuss the new season's product with film company department heads.

From all reports, the meeting was productive of much good. The sales representatives detailed their coming pictures, and ad chiefs explained nationwide campaigns and merchandising ideas planned to aid the new releases at the box office. Sounds fine, as far as it goes. No doubt the theatremen present obtained a lot of good dope and were stimulated by the helpful contacts with the film people.

However, a series of such meetings should be arranged in all key cities, to which should be invited exhibitors and managers irrespective of their affiliations, circuit or independent. Gatherings of this nature must of necessity build up invaluable good will for the film companies as well as helping sales. At the same time, the ambitious manager could have the rare first hand opportunity to discover for himself just what the home offices are doing to make his labors more profitable.

Producers should realize that informed theatremen are apt to turn in better business than those working in the dark, so to speak. And if it is true that higher rentals follow increased patronage, then no effort should be spared to let the manager in on what's what.

GETTING BETTER

The "lowly" press book evidently is coming into its own, to judge from some of the recent efforts we have been studying with great interest. The showmanly touch becomes more apparent as skilled theatremen with field experience are being brought into the home office by wise ad chiefs who realize the advantages of this procedure.

Paramount's "I'm No Angel" book, Warner Brothers' "Footlight Parade," United Artists' "The Bowery," and Fox's "My Weakness" can be quoted as good examples of what the manager needs and can use in the field. From publicity to posters, from exploitation to advertising, these manuals offer diversification to suit most every situation.

While we agree that the average press book is not always what it should be, nevertheless we do not hesitate to say a few words for the home office ad men responsible for their creation. As a former member of this "press gang," we well understand the physical difficulties and the strain of turning out these books, week after week. And although the job isn't killing, it is far from being what might be termed a sinecure.

Therefore it is pleasing to discover a flock of press books at one time, all of which do a better than expected job, and to their makers our sincerest wishes, on behalf of the membership, for a continuation of the good work that should go far to solve what has always been one of the industry's most annoying problems.

EARS TO THE GROUND

From Kansas City via Red Kann's Motion Picture Daily come brave words credited to exhibitor-visiting Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer ace director Clarence Brown, stating that for viewpoint freshening, studios should compel picture makers to make regular visits into the field for the purpose of gathering exchangeites and exhibitor picture reactions. Brown further opines that theatres are losing much money by not exploiting fully the possibilities of pictures with name values.

That studio folk are now interested in the other fellow's ideas on production is a far cry from the old days when Hollywood regarded opinions from theatremen as so much wind, continuing to turn out quantities of perfume-labeled bilge, to be jammed down the protesting gullets of paying customers by distressed showmen.

Now that Brown and other Hollywood explorers are leaving their firesides to find out what's what, there is reason to feel optimistic of closer studio and theatre cooperation. But in seeking gold, the manager might be prevailed upon to say a few words, especially about exploitation opportunities in actual story production.

We venture to state that within one day's journey, open minded, truth-searching studioites could obtain from managers with ears to the ground enough real lowdown on star and story box office slants to change, tout suite, some of Hollywood's pet production ideas.

Ad Men Go "West" For "I'm No Angel"

Reports from early engagements on the new Mae West picture, "I'm No Angel," indicate that the Lady Lou is doing everything she was expected to do in the way of tossing records around. Bob Gillham, Paramount ad chief, states that the story is the same in all dates, but although capacity business was anticipated, the publicity men took nothing for granted in their campaigns to roll up the grosses.

Newspaper ads of course, are all "West" in art and copy. Below is a striking example adapted from the press book, by Bill Raynor, maestro of the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Paramount, who, you will notice, stressed the "day-and-date" booking with New York. With Dave Davidson, his publicity shooter, Raynor put over a wallop campaign that did plenty to pay the rent, details of which will be run in these columns shortly.

Chicago opened the picture at the Oriental Theatre, where Bill Hollander's Balaban and Katz crew also turned out some fancy ads, along the lines of the above, emphasizing the sock ad lines from the press book campaign. The Windy City lads also went in for some bally, as illustrated by the accompanying photo of the "West" carriage gag that was planted in the American Legion convention parade, and witnessed by a half million onlookers. Incidentally, this was the only commercial stunt allowed in the parade and took a lot of doing.

Sock Newspaper Flash

Chicago's Parade Bally

Detroit (Mich.) and Dallas (Tex.) repeat the same box office story, and all these swell returns no doubt are due to the tremendous campaign built up on West during the past months, the effectiveness of which is personified in the "Lady Lou" fashion trend that the Paramounteers started in Paris and is now mopping up over here.

Showmen all over the country are putting on a raft of swell exploitation on this picture, and the campaigns of course will be published here as they are received.

College Tie Up Idea

Hal Horne, U. A. ad chief, informs us that the Eugene O'Neill "Emperor Jones" has been added to the plays on the new college entrance requirement list, the school edition being illustrated with stills from the picture. It might be a good idea for managers in college towns to keep it in mind when playing the picture, as a number of good tieups can be put over with this angle.

Exploiteers Hilight 'Henry VIII' Opening

Fresh from their "Bowery" campaign, the United Artist exploiteers in New York put over a lot of nice work for the opening of "The Private Life of Henry VIII" at Radio City Music Hall, where George Gerhard cooperated with Hal Horne and Monroe Greenthal of U. A., assisted by Meyer Beck, to register a nice high score.

Of course, every British and Canadian club and organization in New York was informed of the date, and bulletins were posted at all headquarters and clubrooms. High and elementary school history and English department heads were asked to inform their classes of the historical interest of the picture, and the various New York colleges also cooperated in bringing this information to the attention of students.

Special screenings were held for representatives of over 600 local women's clubs, the National Council of History Teachers, the Daughters of the American Revolution, and other prominent organizations, whose secretaries signed endorsements of the picture on postcards sent by United Artists to all individual members. Other screenings were held for magazine and newspaper picture editors and critics with excellent advance publicity results.

The local Liggett drug stores carried special 40 by 60 window cards done in the Ripley manner showing the highlights of Henry's matrimonial career, and book stores also plugged the Hackett edition of the king's biography.

A clever humorous angle was carried out in the newspaper ads, wherein the entertainment values of Henry's roaring romances were stressed, and managers who do not choose to sell the historical angle too strongly, should utilize this slant which is carried out in the press book ads.

Well Rounded Campaign To Introduce Harvey

Arthur Swanke, Saenger Theatre manager at Hope, Ark., put over the first date showing of "My Weakness" with a nicely rounded campaign that covered a number of good angles. As Lilian Harvey, the star, is a new personality in American produced pictures, Art sold her effectively by putting out a special lobby panel board of stills in advance, of the new personality in different poses, with copy stressing the new picture name. A regular three-sheet, cut out of the star, was set over the panel to sell her more strongly.

On another poster, Swanke placed cutouts of a poker hand, the face of a pretty girl, a bottle of beer, a new auto and some stage money, lettering the title at the top. He also carried out this idea in a 3 by 5 cardboard folder, on the cover of which was printed only the title and a question mark, and on the inside was listed the above "weaknesses," with star's name in caps, the title and theatre.

Another clever hookup was the imprinting of theatre copy on the back of the gas company envelopes, enclosing the monthly bills. The tie in read: "Pay this bill promptly and with the discount see" (etc., etc.). The cost of this was just a few dollars and some passes. All the above, with the addition of striking newspaper copy, made up, in our opinion, a very effective campaign.

"Bowery" Campaign Startles Cleveland

As we expected, a shower of unusual exploitation on "The Bowery" is descending upon us, one of the healthiest campaigns being that of Loew's Cleveland (Ohio) division manager H. M. Addison and staff at the State Theatre, whose activities on the picture are reported to us by Frank Moneyhun, assisting publicist.

A swell "builder-upper" was an advance preview and party for the newspaper people, who were requested to come in Bowery costumes, this idea suggested by Oscar Doob,

Bowery Costume Winners

Loew theatre national ad chief. Addy's invitation was quite clever, headed "Let Joy Be Unrefined," the copy inviting the guests to cast dignity aside, dress in outlandish costumes and come primed for a good time. Very few turned down the invitation and the festivities, which included refreshments served at an old time bar, resulted in plenty of click publicity in advance of the opening.

The costume idea was also put across as part of the general campaign with a contest open to all patrons at a midnight show on the opening night in which prizes were given for the best "Bowery" makeup and free admissions to those coming in full costume. This was tied in with one of the papers and over 500 entrants was the result, the three winners of which are shown in accompanying photo.

A free coffee stunt that netted special window cards in 1,500 local grocery stores was put on in the lobby, where a "Bowery Coffee House" was erected, and the liquid served on red checkered tablecloths by costumed girls. A series of painted beer kegs enclosed the spot (see photo) and the gag is to be recommended, whether it be used on a coffee or beer tie-up, or just planting the painted kegs as an advance lobby showing.

A special lobby front included old fashioned street gas lights, with atmosphere heightened by boys and girls in costume; a street bally of an old time horse and buggy, with boy and girl in character; distribution of thousands of the "Bowery Gazette" available to all dates, extra newspaper space were other of the high lights that helped to put this one over big.

"Annie" Drawing Stunt Clicks for Ed Hart

We have a nice newspaper contest put on by Ed Hart on his "Tugboat Annie" date at Strand Theatre, Plainfield, N. J., which sounds like a natural for most any big production. Ed hooked in with his local paper to run one-column full ad, the top half of which was devoted to line drawings of one-half the faces of Wallace Beery and Marie Dressler, each drawing six inches deep and two inches wide.

The rest of the display was copy inviting readers to complete the drawings of the faces, offering guest tickets to the best 50 submitted, and, of course, the stars, title and theatre were prominently mentioned. The drawings of the winners were displayed on lobby posters, which gathered crowds intent on finding out if their efforts were included.

Ed reports a gratifying number of entries, the paper cooperating with generous breaks each day during the week of the contest. Managers interested in putting this on in conjunction with "Annie," should be able to obtain the necessary mats from their local MGM exchanges as the stunt is chronicled on Billy Ferguson's exploitation pages in the press book. It also can be put on with other pictures, by having the poster artist or local newspaper cartoonist sketch the faces of stars you are plugging.

Managers Also Printers

The advantages of running one's own job printing plant in conjunction with theatre advertising are clearly indicated by some of the circulars gotten out by C. B. and C. H. Estes, who operate the Merry Land Theatre, Addison (Mich.), as well as a print shop. Newspapers not being easily available, these folks concentrate on highly attractive handbills, either using press book mats to illustrate their own copy, or depending upon straight type. Very nice work.

Ties Kidnapping To "Missing Persons"

Among recent examples of quick thinking smart showmanship is reported from Oklahoma City (Okla.) where Manager George Henger of the Liberty Theatre there tied in his showing of "Bureau of Missing Persons" to the trial of the widely publicised Urschel kidnappers, held in that city during the run of the picture.

On easels in front of the theatre were placed airbrushed heads of the head "snatchers," Machine Gun Kelly and Pretty Boy Floyd, with captions reading—"Oklahoma's Missing Persons Who Were Caught by Uncle Sam's Bureau of Missing Persons."

One entire side of the front was made up of streamer press heads of the Urschel case, these headlines being in the different colors of the bulldog editions of the local papers. However, the feminine angle was not neglected, the rest of the front selling the romance of the picture.

The "snatch" angle was carried out further inside the lobby with duplicates of the leg irons and chains used to bind the prisoners in addition to many of the gags used in the New York showing such as the carrier pigeon and police file stunts.

That the showing broke all records for the theatre is not surprising in view of the mental agility Henger displayed to hook up the picture with the hottest news in town.

POSTER CUTOUT FLOAT. Ken Collins, Apollo Theatre manager, Indianapolis, Ind., fashioned this float from a cutout of the regular 24 sheet on "His First Mate." Quite sizable and looks flashy.

ANALYSE YOUR ATTRACTIONS

So Says Prominent Kentucky Showman Who Started Theatre Career by Writing Publicity

by LEE L. GOLDBERG

Zone Manager, Warner Kentucky Unit

Some years ago, when I was business manager of the Louisville-Kansas City Baseball Club, I discovered one noteworthy fact about baseball. A high-salaried, or so-called "star" team, did not generally win the pennant. Instead, the championship more often was gained by the manager who was smart enough to mould into winning form the "material" he had available. Of course, even a Connie Mack or Muggsy McGraw couldn't win a pennant with an outfit of utterly incapable players.

During my rather long experience in the theatrical world, I have found these same salient facts to apply with equal force. In other words, the theatre manager equipped with the most costly and classiest "show material" doesn't necessarily "come through" with his box office on the top rung. Often, his competitor, in a theatre of less palatial appearance nearby, with attractions of secondary rank, is the box office winner.

Naturally, the exhibitor with the better grade of product finds himself in a quandary as to why his good old public is so foolishly passing his theatre by and patronizing the house with attractions of a lower rank. To that unfortunate and unsophisticated exhibitor, I would give this advice:

Forget for just one day that you are the owner or manager of the "A" theatre. Instead, cast yourself in the role of a patron.

Note carefully the front of the "A" Theatre. Is there anything about it, either in its physical construction, or, more important, the presentation of lobby display, to beckon to you in a manner as if to say, "Come in; here's a show you will enjoy, amid comfortable, pleasant surroundings"?

Personnel Cooperation

Then, after you have been lured to the box office, have the gracious and smiling countenances of the ticket-seller and doorman indicated appreciation of your ticket expenditure? And, having been seated, have the physical elements (sound projection, ventilation, etc.) tended to augment the pleasurable enjoyment of a program not entirely dependent upon the quality of the feature?

Determine for yourself if the shorts were selected with the proper care and programmed in a manner to make the entire show highly interesting and diverting. Perhaps on that same "off day" you have the good sense and courage to similarly visit the other theatre nearby, you might readily find the solution to your problem.

Those of us who have been in the show business for any length of time must freely concede that audiences in various towns and sections differ as to taste. However, I have found that the enthusiasm or the tastes of the theatre manager, himself, generally reflect the reaction of his particular audience. I don't mean to imply for a moment that a manager can, through false enthusiasm, become a miracle man and cause his audience to enthusiastically accept pictures generally in disfavor elsewhere.

One of the first men to write motion picture publicity was Lee L. Goldberg, who started at the Hopkins Theatre, Louisville, Ky., billed at that time as "the world's largest moving picture theatre." Continuing as publicity manager, and later manager, of the Hopkins Theatre and Fontaine Ferry Park, through 1913; in 1913 to 1916 manager of Keith's National, Mary Anderson and Strand Theatres, Louisville; 1916 to 1931 part owner and active manager of an independent circuit of theatres, and in 1931 joining Warner Bros. as zone manager for the Kentucky unit. Mr. Goldberg in the adjoining columns has given us some of his observations on theatre operation which should prove of value to the membership.

Again, I want to point out that while the feature picture is undoubtedly the basic attraction, the correct blending and booking of diverting short subjects are often essential to the success of the combined program. Some of us who came to the picture field from vaudeville learned this important point in booking and programming the right kind of acts around our so-called "headline" attractions. Often, we found that some unknown or apparently inconsequential act gave more real entertainment and satisfaction than the high-priced "headliner."

Even more care than in selecting his entertainment program should be exercised by the theatre manager in engaging his personnel. The exhibitor cannot always control the elements of his program, but he surely can control the selection of employees, and I think most exhibitors will agree with me that it costs no more to engage an efficient, cheerful and courteous crew of house attaches than it does to hire an unintelligent and disinterested staff.

Above all, the house manager should, himself, make it a point to set the pace for his employees by interested and gracious contacts with his audiences. No manager is too big an executive to have to take the role of an usher in an emergency. To paraphrase Shakespeare, it is undoubtedly true that "the picture is the thing." By the same token, the best picture cannot be successfully presented in a theatre amid an atmosphere devoid of those pleasant personal elements that we all like to contact when we purchase our own wares, be they groceries or entertainment.

STUDY THIS ISSUE OF "BETTER THEATRES"

In it you will find some sound practical advice on maintenance by Jack Knight, who continues his articles on cleaning, among other things, discussing its value at the box office.

Also read the article by J. E. Volkmann, acoustics engineer with RCA Victor, who writes of the effect on acoustical treatment of the new extended frequency reproduction. Also, a last word is had in the series on air conditioning, summarizing the explanation previously given of four charts, which have been applied directly to theatre needs and should therefore be a part of every manager's equipment.

Bill Brown, popular Round Tabler and skipper of the Marlboro, Brooklyn, (N. Y.), who cracked up in a taxi accident last August, walked into Club headquarters a few days ago, just about rarin' to go again. Which is good news indeed, as Bill was pretty well bunged up and spent weeks and weeks on his back.

On the same day we received an announcement that Joe Feldman, Warner Pittsburg zone ad chief, had become a proud poppa with the birth of a son, James Michael, and to celebrate, Joe put over a welcome campaign that topped anything he has done lately.

On behalf of the Club, we extend a hearty welcome to the good as new and the brand new showmen.

Universal Tries Out Studio Exploitation

Joe Weil, Universal ad chief, is working out a number of advance exploitation stunts on pictures still in production, and sends along a report on the traffic stoppers put over by Marc Lachmann, handling this end at the studios, who startled Los Angeles with his gags on "The Invisible Man," soon to be released.

A man garbed in the same costume worn by "The Invisible Man" in the picture was taken about Hollywood (see photo), where he lunched at popular restaurants, sent "invisible" telegrams in a tieup that landed a photo of the stunt in the window of every local telegraph office, drove around town and also visited the local jail where he was interviewed by the city's leading crime specialist, the story landing in all papers.

The invisible man has managed to create plenty of excitement in the film city, and the stunts worked will no doubt be included in the press book on this picture. Joe's advance exploitation tryouts will have the undoubted advantage of being actually worked before they are suggested to managers, and for this the idea is to be heartily commended.

Kenimer Promotes Bakers For "Pretzel Week"

A well rounded campaign that resulted in better than capacity business for "Moonlight and Pretzels" is reported by Round Tabler Guy A. Kenimer, who has the happy faculty of setting Jacksonville (Fla.) on its ear with his consistently effective exploitation, at the Florida Theatre.

Deeming the picture worthy of his personal endorsement, Guy proclaimed it so in his screen and newspaper advertising under his own signature, a plug that he uses rarely, and to make sure that plenty of the folks would know of the date he pledged every child at his Saturday children's matinee to tell at least three people about it.

A leading store put on a pretzel week, during which large imprinted bags of pretzels were sold at bargain prices from a specially constructed booth in the store, which was decorated with streamers, stills and theatre posters. A large window was filled with piles of the twisted delicacies and decorated with picture cut outs and stills all carrying theatre advertising.

The pretzel sale idea was carried out in ten of the town's largest groceries, all of which gave windows and extra counters to the tie in with the picture, besides stuffing each bag with a herald, and in addition to which the theatre gave a number of passes which were likewise distributed. The baking company behind the idea at all these stores paid for the services of specially engaged girls in charge of the pretzel departments, as well as assuming the cost of all the specially constructed booths.

L. E. Myers, chief artist, was responsible for the very flashy front done in large metallic cut out letters and a street float which also helped to bring them in, free pretzels being distributed by costumed girls from the top of the truck.

The other advertising channels were not neglected, as Guy missed no angles in thoroughly publicizing his date. The baking company hook up on a city wide "Pretzel Week" is a very snappy idea and, incidentally, the first of its kind reported on this picture. Happy to hear from you again, Guy, and trust that you will keep on sending in the good stuff.

SEDGE COPPOCK'S UNUSUAL DISPLAY

For striking and breath taking lobby displays, E. S. C. Coppock, Paramount Theatre, Stapleton, S. I., gets the medal this week.

When he played "Big Executive" he took one of the stills from the picture and enlarged it to life size. After the photo of Sharon Lynne was enlarged, they cut out around her figure so that she apparently was seated on the desk. To lend still further the "Big Executive" effect, he placed the cutout on a desk borrowed from a furniture dealer for the occasion and Sedge says it was amusing to see the startled expressions on some of patrons' faces as they came to the seemingly alive figure seated on the desk, and that the impression lingered sufficiently in their minds to reward him with a few dollars at the box-office, which after all is what counts.

Paging Pete

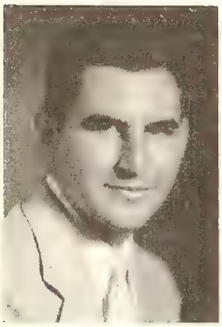
Whenever the Hudson's Bay Company puts on a kid party in Calgary, Alberta, Can., Pete Egan, head man of the Palace Theatre is called on to help make it run. In a recent bicycle, tricycle and doll carriage parade, Pete not only acted as a judge, but also presented the prizes, among which were theatre passes. Egan's skilled showmanship put the party over so big that the Bay executives have decided to make it an annual affair.

"It Really Happened"

by JACK HODGES

Manager, Tampa, Tampa, Fla.

Under this heading, several articles have appeared in this magazine during the past few weeks, telling about carefully prepared stunts that didn't go off, or for some reason or other turned out differently than they were planned. Well, I have a little story to tell, about a stunt that went over too well. In fact, it went over so well it caused the writer of this article no little embarrassment, and almost even more serious consequences.



Jack Hodges

I was at the Florida Theatre, Jacksonville (Fla.) at the time this stunt was pulled off. We had booked "The Secret Six" to play our house on rather short notice, and I wanted to get something out on the picture that would tease the people's fancy so that they would want to see the picture. I hit upon the idea of getting out some small cards which I would have distributed on the streets of Jacksonville. This card was about two inches wide and three or four inches long and had a large red splotch in the center. Across the top was this heading:

"Watch Your Step—You Are on the Spot!" And the rest of the copy read: "Do not try to get away—the eyes of the underworld are on you! It's our code. Death to enemies and squealers! Kill! Kill! Kill!" And under the red splotch was signed, "The Secret Six."

Now, the above copy may not sound so bad to you, and it didn't to me at the time I wrote it, but it did sound quite threatening to a number of people in Jacksonville who received one of them, and several of them believed it so much they went to the police to seek protection. The next day the afternoon paper came out with a front page story telling about several Jaxons being "put on the spot" by persons unknown, but about the same time the story appeared in the paper they found out what it was all about and that it was only an advertising stunt.

Then the fun really did begin. Instead of the people being put on the spot, I was placed on the spot myself. It appeared that several people, knowing that the card was only a joke, sent it through the mail to their friends, and I found out from none other than His Honor, the Federal Judge himself, that Uncle Sam was not fond of people who sent threatening letters through his mails. I was called before the Judge, and was told that he didn't think my little stunt was nearly as funny as I seemed to think it was, and that he had a mind to give me about three years in Atlanta to "laugh it off."

Now, the moral of this story is, if you are getting out any little trick cards similar to the one used above, be sure you have the name of your theatre placed somewhere on them. I know, because the judge told me so.

ELECTION AND ARMISTICE DAY IDEAS

These early November events, local observances of which can be tied into by theatres, should encourage various good will and box office buildups. In spots where elections are to be held, the following might be useful:

Returns announced from stage, over house p.a. system, or by slides, advertising this in advance. Photos of local candidates in lobby, with names and offices sought, and perhaps passes for those guessing nearest numbers of winners' votes, a contest idea that might be tied in with newspaper. For windows and tacking, print regulation size advertising "vote for" election cards, with star photos; and name, picture, and theatre under photo, star cuts or mats to be obtained from exchanges.

Armistice Day will no doubt be observed by local Legion and Foreign War Vet posts, and if you intend running special Armistice Day short, include trailer dedicating showing to local posts. From them borrow flags, trophies, photos, etc., for lobby display. If parades and other events are held, place information booth in lobby or on sidewalk for out of town visitors, and offer rest room facilities during parade, as a good will gesture.

Organ or orchestra program should include soldier songs, and presentation ideas could be built around this atmosphere with doughboy quartets, soloists, etc. Advertise special program in surrounding territory as well, for after the parade and civic ceremonies, visitors will no doubt be eager for further entertainment.

Brient and Deering Step Fast in Richmond

In the wired news, Round Table issue of September 30, Elmer Brient of Loew's Theatre, Richmond (Va.), informed us of a fashion show he put on in conjunction with "Penthouse" which we are now describing more in detail, with the receipt of the local newspapers.

To further publicize the stage presentation, Elmer promoted a three-column full ad paid for by the store putting on the show in which was included a large production cut and plenteous copy covering the picture. Besides this, the paper itself ran two and three-column cuts of the local models taking part in the fashion presentation.

While Brient was busily engaged in working out the above, Francis Deering, his assistant, lent his talents to plugging "One Sunday Afternoon," in which he dug up an old fashioned horse and buggy (see photo) to illustrate the background of the picture. The gag was strictly in character, even including the iron hat worn by the boy friend. That's Francis, himself, to the right, with his arms crossed. Handsome devil, what?

Old Fashioned Gig Bally

We appreciate the hearty cooperation of both Elmer and Francis in keeping the Club informed of their current activities, as many of their ideas are being adapted by brother members in putting over the new releases.

Outdoor Bally Stops Traffic

After filling important assignments for the Skouras Bros. in various sections of the country, Lew Preston is back at his old stamping grounds, the Academy of Music in New York, and 14th Street is again resounding to the mighty exploitation of this skilled showman.

Lew doped out a nice idea by distributing a circular in the form of a newspaper ad proof on his coming picture, "One Man's Journey," with hand written copy to the effect that the proof was sent out in advance of release for the information of patrons who planned to see the picture.

To publicize one of his headline stage acts, an escape artist, Preston effectually blocked traffic by suspending him in a strait-jacket from the roof of the theatre, and before the headliner shook himself loose from his bonds police reserves were needed to keep the crowd in order.

The above is a fair sample of the high speed exploitation Preston employs to put over his attractions, and brother members can do worse than adapt his ideas, which will appear in these columns, for theatres in thickly populous sections.

Pu-lenty of "Tugboat" in Troy Showing

That was quite a campaign that Troy (N. Y.) saw on "Tugboat Annie," put on at the Troy Theatre by Manager Leo Rosen cooperating with Charley Smakwitz, Warner zone ad chief. The zippy parade bally, shot of which we are running here below, was the outstander of course, but there were a host of other stunts that clicked.

The newspapers came across with plenty of art and stories, including a four column cut and story by the author, Norman Reilly Raine, on "How Tugboat Annie Was Born," good enough, incidentally, to crack any paper. A guessing contest, in which two letters of the title were run each day, such as "Tee You," "Gee Bee" etc., with passes for the first ones sending in the correct title, brought in a flock of answers.

Marine display in lobby and ushers in sailors' uniforms and white title-bearing sashes helped sell the atmosphere, as did a tugboat street float. Children were sold through the Parent-Teachers and Better Film Bureau on special matinees, and the leaders were invited to a midnight show.

The conventional window streamer idea was treated a bit differently by hand lettering and process printing in color, and though they cost a bit more, practically every soda fountain and restaurant used them to advertise special "Annie" sandwiches, sundaes, and of course, the picture and theatre.

The other regular mediums of course, contributed to the success of the campaign, the results of which at the box office proved the effectiveness of the ideas that were put across.

BOWKER EMPHASIZES ACE LOCATIONS FOR 24 SHEET STANDS

Charles A. Bowker, operator of the Strand Theatre, Norwich, Conn., is a real oldtimer of 35 years of showbusiness experience, and forwards some interesting ideas on billposting along with an account of activities on "Tugboat Annie" by Manager Ruff, who sponsored a children's free morning show on two successive days, attended by 2,000 youngsters, who paraded to the theatre.

24 Sheet on Corner

Bowker sends some shots of his more prominent 24 stands, which he selects with care, stating his many years of actual posting experience convinces him that a board must be 100 per cent to be effective, and that these locations bring in many extra admissions. Notice the one above. He also suggests the producers put out 16 to 20 sheet boards, thus allowing the manager to use a four or eight-sheet for theatre and date.

Although the idea has its good points, we doubt whether the producers would give it the proper consideration. It is claimed that accessories rarely return any profit and for this reason any change in the sizes of paper would not be unanimously adopted, if at all. However, it's something different. Bowker is to be thanked for bringing it to the attention of the membership.

British Member Puts Out Monthly Mag

We've just finished looking over the August issue of "The Beaufort Mag," sent over by Frederick J. Studd, a new member from abroad, and licensee of the Beaufort Cinema, Birmingham, England. Though meant as a house organ, it really takes on the proportions of a magazine, what with the plenitude of merchants advertising plus chatty fan stories and art.

Studd lists his pictures for the entire month and the last page is given to a feature called "Backchat" in which he discusses various picture angles and mentions local social affairs. In this issue, he takes exception to fan magazine reviews, evidently another indication that the American and English members are beset by similar problems.

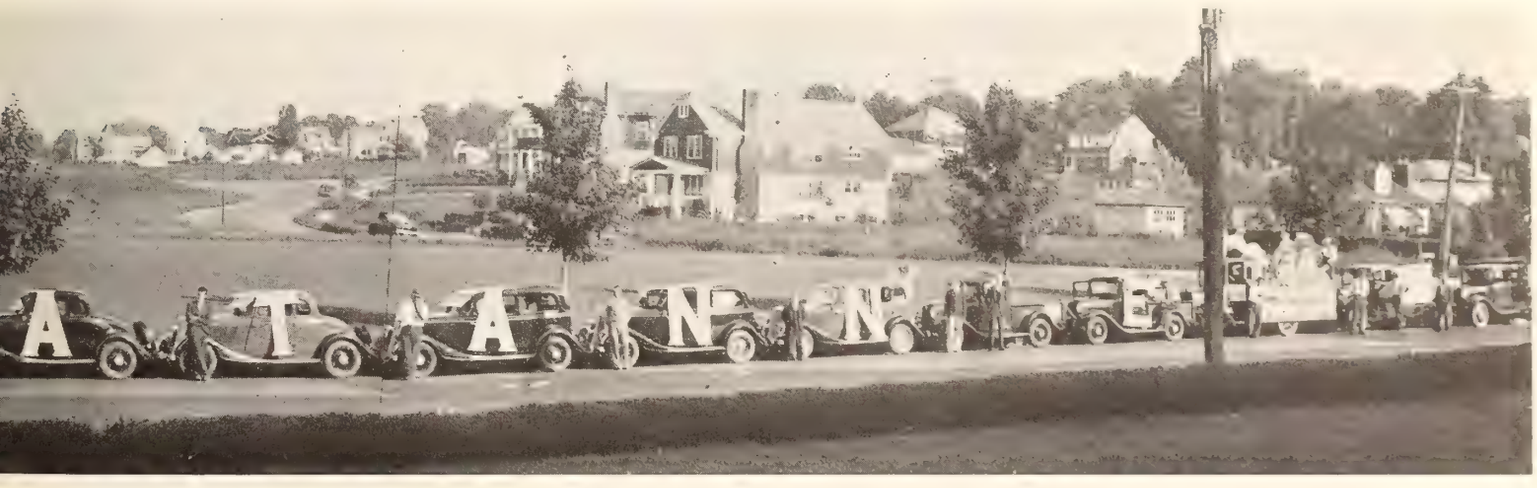
To celebrate the theatre's birthday, Studd distributed expensive looking memo books, with house ads on front cover and back. And as a burglar chose this time to break into the theatre, Fred had a picture taken of the damage done, and planted the shot in his leading Birmingham paper, the cut line humorously tying in with the party.

Pony and Cart Bally Help Put Over "Paddy"

Manager Michael H. Chakeres, State Theatre, Springfield (Ohio), dug up a small pony and cart for a street bally on his showing of "Paddy The Next Best Thing" and had a girl dressed as Gaynor in the picture, drive the outfit around town and also across the playing field, between the halves, of two local football games which took place two days in advance of the picture showing.

All prominent drug and candy stores were tied in with a Janet Gaynor sundae, the theatre furnishing window stickers and also stills for window and counter displays. Stores selling fan magazines came in with nice showings for which Chakeres furnished 14 x 17 portrait stills with date card in corner.

Beside mounting a 24 sheet on the canopy of the theatre, Mike pulled a little different one by placing another right in the theatre, with a baby spot giving it a nice flash. Being in a college town, this Round Tabler ties in on every opportunity to plug his student trade, one of his effective ideas being a hook in with the college weekly paper for a half page gratis weekly ad secured in exchange for passes.



IT WAS PUT OVER BY MANAGER LEO ROSEN AND SURE IS A GRAND STUNT. ACES, LEO.

Showman Stresses Psychology Study To Build Business

by PAUL BINSTOCK
Manager, Republic, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Every manager at this time should be asking himself the question, "In what way can I put a different atmosphere in my theatre so as to increase business?"

Paul Binstock

It is a known fact that environment plays a prime factor in the make-up of the universe, so let us all bear in mind that in no other business does the surroundings play so vital a part as it does in show business. Our job is to study the conditions as they exist in our own theatre and make as pleasant an atmosphere for our patrons as possible, because no other profession makes the mind so susceptible to the suggestion of environment as does show business. Since the public is coming into our theatre in order to use their imagination, let us strive to make possible their imaginary powers to the fullest extent.

Although there may be nothing new under the sun, yet we can take old ideas and mould them into ideas that will appear new. This is an art in itself, and if we can constantly put forth the idea that they are seeing something new, then we are keeping the glamour alive, the very quality that attracts people to the theatre. The producers are aware of the fact that they must keep up with the present conditions and even ahead of the times and in this they are successful, for we are constantly seeing new things in the pictures. By being on the alert for changes, we keep a living personality in the theatre, for surely a theatre lives just as truly as any institution of learning.

Theatre Personality

Without personality a theatre becomes cold and uninviting and nothing could do more to hurt the whole industry than the fact that the theatre is losing its life and glamour, for this is the medium through which our patrons' minds are taken from their humdrum every-day life into the land of make believe and unless they can give way completely to their emotions, then it is surely our fault, in that we are not giving them the right atmosphere. The manager's personality should be reflected in his theatre, for his actions determine whether the conditions are pleasant or otherwise, as he can instill in his force the mannerisms that will be a compliment to his patrons.

The theatre can be educational due to the fact that every impression becomes an expression and we must try to make the impressions favorable, so that the expressions will be to our advantage. As the patron enters our theatre, he should be greeted as our guest and made to feel as much at home as if he really were at home, because after all it is up to our patrons whether we are a success or not, so it is well to let them feel that it is their own interests we are serving in everything we do or plan.

From the manager down to the porter, there should be a personal feeling of pride in making the patron feel at home, because it is through this channel that the spirit of good will travels from one to another. By observing the audience reaction and contacting the patrons after they have seen our show, we see whether we are giving them what they want, for that is our objective.

"Tarzan" Bally Earns Nice Newspaper Break

Manager Harold F. Janecky, Jamaica Theatre, Jamaica (L. I.), managed to get himself an armload of newspaper breaks with his street bally on "Tarzan the Fearless," in which he paraded a Tarzan and monkey up and down the main streets. The newspapers not only went for a two-column cut of the stunt, but also ran a swell story to the effect that contrary to Janecky's wishes, the police paid no attention to the gag, allowing the "jungleer" and his simian companion to roam the streets without interference from the law.

A few days later the same paper gave the bally a two-column cartoon cut in which the stunt was prominently mentioned, and whether or not Harold meant to cross swords with the local gendarmes, he did manage to get a lot of helpful publicity from his local sheet.

The kids, of course, were not neglected, as Janecky distributed Tarzan club cards which allowed the holders to see the last episode free of charge if they had attended the seven previous, their cards being punched by the doorman to attest to their faithful patronage. A store ad on reverse side of card paid for the printing.

Janecky's Tarzan Front

A jungle front included natural green grass as background for red lobby-wide title banners, and the Tarzan cutouts on each side of the box office as pictured above. Flash three sheets and special heralds were included in this very well rounded campaign, and Janecky is to be commended in getting the newspaper publicity which, though kidding the street bally, nevertheless did so with generous space.

SWELL "MICKEY" WINDOW

Those United Artists ad men are breaking into swank New York Fifth Avenue stores with "Mickey Mouse" tie ups, and the above is a shot of the display in a prominent Saks' window, on "Puppy Love," played at the Rivoli Theatre.

"Thar's Gold in Them Gals," Says Frank Larson

Gold being a headline issue out in that section of the country, Frank Larson, skipper of the Paramount, Idaho Falls (Idaho) and Ed Burke, his next in command, put across a novel weight guessing contest on "Gold Diggers," using the daily ounce quotation on the precious metal as a basis for the guessers. Here's how it was done.

The newspaper ran a two column ten inch "Gold Diggers" press book ad showing one of the girls around whose neck was draped a gold (?) cape weighing 324 ounces (Larson's figures). At the then current price of gold, she was therefore supposed to be worth some nine thousand odd dollars.

Ten free tickets were given daily to those coming nearest guessing the worth of the young lady according to the day's quotation of gold ounce prices, which meant a simple operation of multiplying the original 324 ounces by the current price of gold. Although it may sound a bit involved, the gag went over very well, especially since Idaho is in the midst of the gold mining country. Outstanding, of course, was the fact that the paper thought enough of the idea to give it two column display ads for the week.

Gammett Puts Over Effective Street Bally

A masked "masquerader" in complete evening costume, handing out Ronald Colman calling cards on which were inscribed the title and theatre, was one of the ace stunts used by Manager Harry Gammett of the Globe Theatre, Bethlehem (Pa.), in advance of his showing. Cards were also put under windshield wipers of automobiles and distributed to clerks and customers in all stores.

Gammett also mailed out post cards using the two-column slug mat with the top line reading, "Announcement Extraordinary," with theatre name and date line under the cut. Different treatment was accorded the usual newspaper display, and Harry says that the campaign went over very well.

The street stunt fits in very well with the exploitation on "The Masquerader" and other managers who would like to use it can do so without incurring any too great expense. It seems to us that the costume can be promoted and the calling cards printed very cheaply.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features which are finished or are in work, but to which release dates have not been assigned, are listed in "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the distributors. Where they vary, the change is probably due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1933, unless otherwise specified.

THOSE INTERESTING

in the pictures you show have called for new ingenuity on the part of the producer. What is more, the photographing of the backgrounds has definitely demanded a special new type of raw film. Eastman Background Negative—recently announced and now widely used—is the answer. Possessing unique characteristics, it dovetails perfectly with this important technical advance. It greatly enhances the beauty, effectiveness, and value of projection background "shots." Eastman Kodak Company. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)

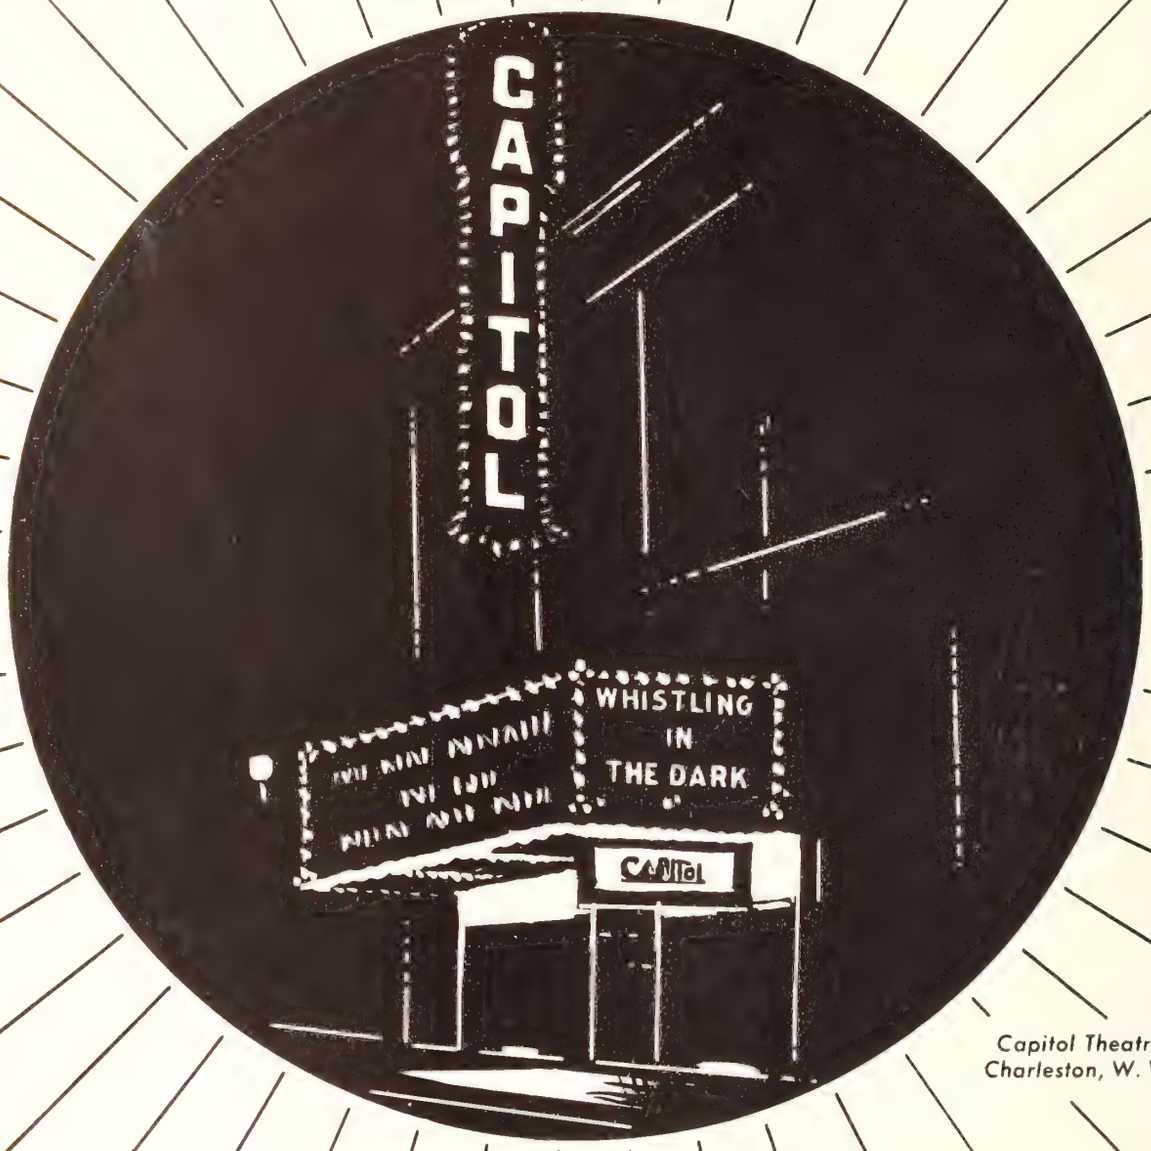
BRIGHT LIGHTS AREN'T ENOUGH



Capitol Theatre, Charleston, W. Va.

People will put up with second class surroundings in order to see a first class picture. But they won't put up with second class surroundings to see ordinary program pictures.

That is why theatres that are making money attach almost as much importance to interior furnishings as to their programs.

Alexander Smith long-wearing carpets —richly colored, luxurious looking, soft-under-foot—will go a long way towards adding to the attractiveness of your house.

Why not have our representative call and show you how little Alexander Smith Carpets cost? Among his samples you will find patterns for every type of theatre and grades for every budget. Write W. & J. Sloane, 577 Fifth Avenue, New York, wholesale selling agents.

ALEXANDER SMITH CARPET

Used by the Majority of the Country's Outstanding Theatres

From either

VIEWPOINT

that of the Projection Room that of the Box Office

NATIONAL PROJECTOR CARBONS

are the most economical and satisfactory

National Projector Carbons surpass in both volume and efficiency of screen illumination. They have won every competitive test in which all three major factors have been compared—screen illumination, amperage and carbon life.

The brilliancy, steadiness and snow white quality of the light from National Projector Carbons is a source of satisfaction to the patrons of the theatre. Satisfied patronage is directly reflected in satisfying box office returns.

AN OPERATING SUGGESTION

Correct Arc Length on Hi-Low Reflecting Arc is Important.

Increasing the arc current by shortening the arc on Hi-Low reflecting arc lamps may give more light but is liable to result in pitting of the reflecting mirror and damage to rheostat or motor-generator. The arc voltage should be maintained at 55 volts and the current regulated entirely by adjustment of the rheostat provided for that purpose.

NATIONAL

PROJECTOR CARBONS

. . . . . National Projector Carbons are sold exclusively through distributors and dealers. National Carbon Company will gladly cooperate with the producer, exhibitor, machine manufacturer or projectionist on any problem involving the production or use of light.

BE KIND

or else...

IT'S twenty to one (and that's no sport's bet) the house with old type sound doesn't even begin to approach the attendance of the house down the street with a brand new High Fidelity System.

And that stands to reason. Six years ago the show business was for the eye only. When sound came in, anything was good...at first. But now, it's different. Folks come to see and hear. And they're not taking nor liking sound that's frayed at the edges.

High Fidelity Sound means new life for your house ...new patronage and new profits. Hardly a week goes by without an enthusiastic report bearing us out on this . . . reports of exhibitors who claim that purely from a box office standpoint, their High Fidelity Equipment is the best paying investment they have.

This we pass along to you with the reminder that times are on the up and up. More recreation for workers and more money . . . better product and new headliners all mean bigger crowds willing to stand in line to pay you money, IF you give them sound in tune with the times . . . IF you give them

Observations

¶ It's a good idea, and we are going to adopt it right now. The suggestion occurs in a letter from N. C. Haefele of the Baltimore office of the National Theatre Supply Company, who takes stenographer at side to say that "the first month under the Blue Eagle regime has shown such a decided influx of orders, and increased the purchase of theatrical equipment to such an extent" that some publicity ought to be given to it.

Mr. Haefele's testimony is quite in line with that of the other sources of theatre equipment. And we think it has significance to the motion picture theatre owner and manager. If the equipment manufacturer and dealer has grounds for courage, faith and confidence, surely all exhibition interests have them, for from vigorous, enterprising quarters of the theatre field this confidence, this faith and courage have come.

The reports of revived activity in remodeling and general reconditioning come daily to our desk. The news columns of the motion picture press carry some of them. In front of us now is a thick sheaf of communications from editorial correspondents, enough to fill pages. From Richmond, Va., Fredericksburg, Detroit, several cities in Wisconsin and Ohio, from New York State, from New England, from the Northwest. And these are just one accumulation. The motion picture theatre business at last is doing something about its theatres,—properties representing one of the nation's greatest investments which have been so generally deprived of normal maintenance and regular modernization during the last two years.

True it is that motion picture exhibition needs a greater income. But it is also true that part of this necessary increase must come from its own enterprise. Whatever potential patronage is created by rises in employment and wages, must be gone after, won by widely interesting product and by live-looking, technically effective theatres. The theatre that appears and runs as if it had succumbed to the past can scarcely hope for an active place in the future. It is a matter of extinction or betterment to be decided in the present.

The decision, of course, is one which thousands of theatre interests must make if the motion picture is to flourish again. Therein lies the true significance of the influx of orders for equipment, furnishings and supplies. It means that the retail branch of this industry is determined to renew itself.

¶ Here is the kind of editorial we like: one already written for us! Originally it was addressed only to Hoosier showmen, as a message to members of the Association of Theatre Owners of Indiana from their headquarters. But its words of consummate wisdom apply as urgently to theatre operators everywhere. In the hope they will be more persuasive than anything on the subject that we could say, we steal them, in toto, as follows:

"Far too many of the smaller theatres of Indiana are dirty and grimy and look exactly as they did 15 years ago. The very nature of any form of show business is that it make a 'flash' that appeals to the public. Sometimes exhibitors sit back complacently with the feeling that they are offering a show and that the public must come in, and then they wonder why they are in the 'red' all the time. The theatres in Indiana today that are making money (and there are quite a number of these) are the ones where the owners are on their toes and the theatre is attractive and clean and comfortable both inside and out. If you cannot afford to fix up the inside, at least keep it clean and sweet-smelling, and do something to the outside. You would surprise yourself if you spent a little time, thought and money in making your theatre more inviting. Think it over and then do something about it—Cordially yours, Officers and Directors, Association of Theatre Owners of Indiana."

¶ Mr. Edward Filene, in speaking recently over an NBC nation-wide network, said too many words for repetition here. But some we wish to pass on — for this is an industry of union labor. Mr. Filene:

"I have been an employer throughout my life. My reaction to this labor objective [A. F. L. goal of 25,000,000 members] therefore may seem strange and paradoxical. . . . It seems to me folly, from the employer's point of view, to attempt to destroy unionism. If unionism could be destroyed, it would be necessary to build it again. The whole tendency of unions has been to give non-competitive wages and adequate buying power to their members. Business needs the stability which is conferred by standard, non-competitive wages. Business needs, to insure a steady market, adequate and distributed buying power for the masses."—G. S.

THE CHALLENGE OF SMALL THEATRES

By BEN SCHLANGER

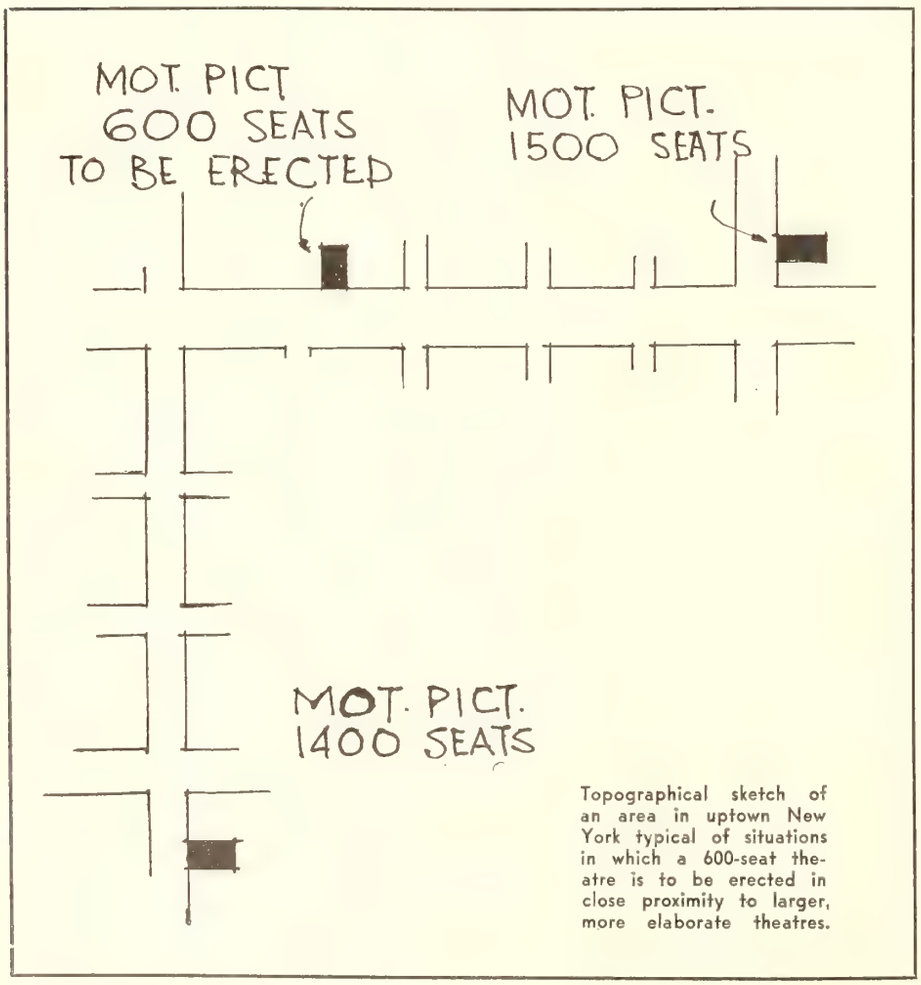
As an architect views the growing interest in 600-seat houses devoted entirely to screen entertainment

WHILE THE motion picture theatre of large seating capacity, and lavish in treatment, might have been a product of the prosperity era hysteria, it can not be said that the smaller type of theatre now becoming popular is a product of reverse economic conditions. It is more likely that financial difficulties have tended to stagnate theatre construction rather than to start a new phase of theatre building. The smaller theatre is a result of a natural evolution—it might even have appeared sooner had economic conditions at all permitted it.

We have but to analyze the initial reasons for the coming into existence of the large over-ornamented theatre to see that these reasons no longer hold any importance in the average community. The stage performance, which required a large seating capacity to insure financial returns, has been pretty well proved to be an unnecessary adjunct to the motion picture performance. The importance of the premier showing of a film, which formerly attracted large attendance in first-run theatres, has also greatly diminished. The first run of a film is now viewed by a comparatively small public, while the attendance at second- and third-run showings has by comparison, greatly increased. At the present time there is even evidence of a considerable amount of revivals of films a year and even two years old. Now a demand has evidenced itself for the smaller type of theatre to meet more effectively the new conditions under which the motion picture product is being distributed.

Some four years ago, I stated that there was a vital need for structures that would more properly house and extend the exhibition of motion pictures. In an article written at that time, the problem of appropriate and efficient seating capacities for the motion picture theatre was discussed. In this article the following question was raised: "Should there be many smaller theatres in preference to fewer larger ones?" I stressed that theatres should be more carefully placed and more scientifically planned and sized to suit the immediate communities they serve. In a subsequent article appearing in BETTER THEATRES, called "Planning Today's Simplified Cinema," I said:

"It seems that the 600-seat theatre could be popularized in both centralized and neighborhood locations. Two such units might easily serve a community that is at the present time being served by one larger unit. It is a fallacy to assume that a 1500-seat theatre alone would better answer the need of a community. The amount of seats crowded into larger theatres has created a condition known as over-seating, which might be more aptly called inefficient seating."



Topographical sketch of an area in uptown New York typical of situations in which a 600-seat theatre is to be erected in close proximity to larger, more elaborate theatres.

OVER-SEATING OR FAULTY SEATING?

EVIDENCE to prove that this condition of over-seating is rightfully a condition of inefficient seating, is rapidly presenting itself. We now find large seating capacity theatres dark or else operating under considerably reduced incomes, while smaller theatres, more appropriately sized and located, are prospering. It is encouraging to see smaller theatres being remodelled, and even being newly constructed within a very short distance from larger houses. In some instances, the larger theatres themselves are being reduced in seating capacity, thereby releasing surplus theatre-building areas for other rental purposes.

A considerable amount of new small theatre construction work can be carried on without actually increasing the present number of seats, since the process eventually becomes that of a redistribution of the present seating total, until each seat ultimately reaches its maximum earning power.

It should be noted that small theatres are being built even where the exhibitor knows that he will be able to exhibit films only after they are exhibited by a nearby competitor. This is because it has been proved to him that if he can maintain a high standard of exhibition and yet reduce his admission price, he can be assured a substantial income despite the fact that he must show his product later. The reasons for this assured patronage to the exhibitor of the small theatre is as follows:

Topographical sketch of an area along upper Broadway, New York City, wherein three 600-seat motion picture theatres have been erected during the last few months, although the district has many theatres of much larger capacity. Note theatre in which capacity as been reduced from 1,000 to 600 seats. (Across the street from this house is located the Midtown.)

1. The small theatre is closer to the patron's home.
2. Minimum admission price due to minimum running costs.
3. Greater choice of and variety of program for the patron due to greater number of theatres in a given vicinity.
4. Intimacy of small theatre.
5. Physical comfort in small theatre due to ease of accessibility to seats and better sight lines.

FINANCING OF SMALL THEATRE

IT IS ENCOURAGING to find construction of new theatres in these times, when building financing generally is extremely difficult. Most theatre projects which are at the present time going ahead are being financed by an exhibitor or a builder. As yet there is very little evidence of mortgage financing for theatres from banking institutions. It is therefore evident that a theatre project today does not materialize unless a definite potential need for it is obvious.

Yet the number of projects which have gone ahead and the number that seem definitely scheduled to mature are surprisingly many. The number of projects would increase greatly in a very short space of time if there were as many builders or institutions ready to finance theatre construction as there are exhibitors who are anxious to obtain theatres in locations in which they have confidence.

An even more encouraging sign is found in the fact that the number of exhibitor-owned small theatres is increasing. The small theatre is at its best when it is built by the exhibitor who intends to personally operate it. There is a better chance that the theatre will be properly planned and designed than when a speculative builder is the landlord. The speculative builder endeavors to make a minimum investment, usually with poor results, inasmuch as his lack of knowledge of theatre operation hampers him from a judicious use of the investment. There is also usually a tendency on the part of the speculative builder to cheapen the structure in items the importance of which he may not realize.

It is because the smaller theatre involves an investment that many exhibitors can more readily finance that there can be expected a considerable program of construction. The alert exhibitor is now conscious of his opportunity. He knows that a new small theatre can now have features of comfort and effective screen presentation that even the larger expensively built theatres of the past ten years could not offer. It is a healthy sign for the motion picture itself when we find a better source of income from the economically conceived small theatres, and realize that the motion picture no longer needs the palatial background to draw its public.

PROFITABLE CAPACITY

THE SEATING capacity of theatres most recently built, and those scheduled to mature soon, all range from 200 to 800 seats, the more popular size being from 500 to 600 seats. Those having a capacity of 200 to 300 seats have proved successful only where they have been able to have at least three turnovers per day, in heavy transient locations such as a railroad station. One particular operating company has recently found it necessary to increase the unit size from 200 to approximately 400 seats. It has found that the 200 seat theatre has a running cost too high to be offset by the income derived.

Theatres having a capacity of over 600 seats require a construction of a more expensive type due to more rigid requirements of governing building codes and a more costly shape of physical structure, having wide structural spans. Air conditioning and acoustics are also much more costly and complicated in theatres of more than 600 seats. The 600-seat theatre is therefore by far a most desirable unit. In addition to its efficiency, its size itself offers a feeling of intimacy, which is not small enough to lose the effectiveness of audience reaction, an important consideration also.

Although it is desirable to limit the size of the small theatre, it is important to allow ample space for the following provisions:

(1) A large enough screen for effective vision

(2) A correct distance from the first row of seats to the screen.

(3) At least 2 feet, 10 inches from back-to-back of seats (2 inches better than common practice).

(4) An easily accessible lounge and retiring rooms.

There is no reason, of course, why the small house cannot be the equal of the large theatre in every essential respect. In fact, so far as technical provisions are concerned, there is much distinctly in favor of the small theatre.

The advantage may be such that screen entertainment could be more successfully sold in a theatre of around 600 seats than in the "palace." It is to be found in projection (well illuminated picture and small angle of projection), in acoustics (which are always difficult at best in the large auditorium), in vision (relatively narrow seating area), in traffic conditions and elsewhere.

The lower operating cost, of course, is what appeals to the individual exhibitor. But perhaps the industry as a whole should not overlook the influence of more readily accessible theatres on the national movie-going habit.

CLEANLINESS AS A BOX OFFICE FACTOR

By J. T. KNIGHT, JR.

Further setting forth proved methods of keeping the theatre clean—the sixth article in a series on maintenance

THE POSITION of theatre manager is basically a sales position. Pictures and stage entertainment must be sold to the public; the theatre and its service must be sold to the public. Any manager who overlooks any one of these as part of his responsibility to sell to the public cannot be a 100% manager.

By some peculiar twist of the mind some self-styled showmen belittle any manager who excels in selling to the public a clean theatre and a well-trained Service staff. The training of a theatre staff, which includes the janitors, ushers, cashiers and projectionists, as well as the musicians and stage hands, if there be any, requires the sustained expenditure of energy and alertness on the part of a manager and thereby demands greater reliability than is called for in the spasmodic performance of those managers who, calling themselves showmen, spend all their time on advertising, programming and staging their shows.

Emphasis is here placed on the fundamental A-B-C's of management: the training and supervision of employees and the care and cleaning of a theatre. To be a really good manager these elementary lessons must be learned well.

FUNDAMENTALS OF CLEANLINESS

ATTENTION IS here called to something that cannot be overlooked in selling a theatre to the public — cleanliness! Cleanliness is a sales argument. Millions of dollars are spent every year on sanitation and on experimental processes to make utensils, products and equipment clean. Cleanliness and sanitation have been the basis of the cellophane idea that has swept the country and increased the sales in many lines of industry.

A theatre, a theatre seat, or a toilet cannot be wrapped up in cellophane in order to impress a patron with its cleanliness and sanitation. Unable, then, to use cellophane, management must find some other means to impress the public.

Two of the five senses do most of the detecting of unsanitary conditions—sight and smell. Use as much light as possible in and about the theatre without detracting from the screen illumination. This will permit the patron to see conditions. Then make sure that the theatre is clean. There will be no obnoxious odors in a clean theatre.

The toilets of a theatre are the spots where the impression of cleanliness is most firmly impressed upon a patron. Toilets, lavatories and sink rooms should receive immediate attention. If these rooms are permitted to be dirty, they give off an odor. If they give off an odor, all the ventilation in the world will not overcome or correct the basic condition. Lavatories, toilets and sink rooms should be absolutely free from objectionable odors. When odors are present the rooms are dirty.

A PLAN OF CLEANLINESS

HERE IS a workable program, not based on theory but upon years of practical application which has produced results. At the beginning of the second month of this schedule a marked improvement should be noticed in the condition of toilet rooms.

To approach this program the assumption will be made that the toilet rooms do need immediate attention. Here is the program:

TREATING WATER

All the water used for mopping or for cleaning purposes must be treated with a disinfectant deodorant. There are any number of good disinfectants on the market.

A real disinfectant is a chemical compound which kills bacteria. The term is frequently and incorrectly applied to products which cover up an objectionable odor with another odor less objectionable.

In the wash rooms of public buildings, hotels, and some theatres, various devices are used to release odors that permeate the rooms, and in the minds of many, such odors are designed to be associated with antiseptics and disinfectants, but they still remain just odors, and perform no other function. By this means of suggestion an attempt is made to create a sense of cleanliness. In such cases, if the odors introduced are not too objectionable, the nose may be deceived, but the eyes will tell the true story of sanitation.

Many offensive and repulsive odors result from the decomposition of organic matter. Such conditions can only be overcome by preventing the accumulation of bacterial growths. Consequently a disinfectant which stops bacterial growth must be used. The daily use of disinfectant in all mop and scrub water used in cleaning toilet rooms is most important.

All managers are cautioned that some chemical disinfectants are dangerous to use in and about a theatre. Some have objectionable odors in addition to being highly antiseptic, others are very poisonous, while still others will corrode metals and are dangerous to the janitor using them, some will stain and discolor any porous stone, such as marble or porcelain, with which they are brought into contact.

In the average 14-quart pail of water there is generally about 10 quarts of water actually in it. One coffee cup (about 6 fluid ounces) of disinfectant is sufficient for 10 quarts of water. This practice on the part of the janitor should be an iron-clad rule; if he disobeys it, he should be summarily dismissed. This will set an example to the rest of the cleaning force.

The usual custom is to set aside a certain set of rags, mops and brushes to be used only in these rooms. These rags, mops and brushes generally are left in a filthy condition and themselves give off distinctly foul odors. It is often observed that the rags, mops and brushes are stuck underneath or behind fixtures, or in closets just off toilet rooms after being used. Every time that such rags, mops, and brushes are used they must be thoroughly washed in hot water, with soap and disinfectant. Whenever an employee is observed trying to clean in a toilet room with dirty rags or mops, the chances are that dirt is just being smeared about from place to place. That room will have an odor.

DRAIN CLEANERS

Drain cleaners might be used as a name to express a group of chemical compounds primarily used to open up clogged or sluggish drains. The best policy is to use it as a preventive rather than to correct a neglected condition. In the best regulated theatre, sink and toilet drains will sometimes become clogged. Many times this clogging is caused by an accumulation of soap, grease, various solid particles, such as matches and cigarette butts, and sometimes cotton or fabric. Such conditions gradually build up a tenacious and insoluble stoppage in the drain or trap. Unless such conditions are treated regularly they might bring about a clogging of the entire system.

Drain cleaners are a chemical product which, in combination with water, soften, dissolve and loosen the accumulations in the drain. Most drain cleaners are highly active and will burn the skin, therefore they should be handled with great care; the eyes, nose and hands (especially around fingernails), should be protected.

During the first week of the program use a half-pound of a commercial drain cleaner every day in each toilet fixture, about four ounces in each slop sink, and about two ounces in each wash bowl. After the first week set one day every two weeks, and be sure that each fixture gets its proportion of drain cleaner. It is suggested that the drain cleaner be used at night after the last performance and be permitted to stand in solution in the trap or drain until morning, at which time it should be flushed down with hot water.

BOWL CLEANERS

Bowl cleaner is a chemical mixture used to remove the coating of calcium or lime deposit which collects in the bowl and trap of all toilets and urinals. Ordinarily these coatings are detected by yellowish or brownish deposits on the porcelain of the bowl. To facilitate the usual unpleasant job of removing these stains or deposits by brushing or scrubbing, a commercial bowl cleaner is used to soften them, making their removal a simple and easy job.

Weekly, throughout this program, a commercial bowl cleaner should be used in each fixture. Best results are obtained by removing as much water from the bowl as possible by using a rubber suction cup plunger. Then pour into the fixture about 8 fluid ounces (one pint) of bowl cleaner, permit it to stand for a few minutes (10 or 15), then scrub off the deposit with the usual stiff toilet brush or mop made by wrapping a rag about the end of a stick. Follow this by flushing the fixture several times.

The composition of most commercial bowl cleaners is highly acid in nature. It will readily attack marbles, tiles and cement, any substance containing calcium or lime. The reaction is gassing and excessive boiling, therefore wipe off any drop that might get on marble or tile floors or partitions with clear water until all gassing and boiling has stopped. Used in this manner there will be no detrimental effect on your plumbing.

WIRE SCREENING

All wire screening used in fixtures should fit properly in order to afford complete protection for your plumbing against foreign substances thrown into the fixtures. Such screens should be cleaned daily and carefully as they are the sources of vile odors. Where possible theatres should have two sets of such screens so that they might be changed twice each week. In cleaning these screens, they should be washed and scrubbed in a strong solution made by putting a half-pound of a drain cleaner in a bucket of hot water. Caution the janitor to be careful of his hands during this process. After cleaning the set of screens not in use, they should be exposed to the fresh air and sunshine by putting them out on a roof, or hanging them inconspicuously from some fire-escape.

TOILETS

All toilet seats should be cleaned, washed daily with warm water, soap and disinfectant, both top and bottom, then thoroughly rinsed and dried. Celluloid seats have a tendency to turn yellow upon repeated cleansing with soap and water. To remove this yellowish stain it is necessary at intervals of every 30 days to clean the seats with a very fine pumice powder—50 cents worth from any drug store or paint store should last a long time.

Flush boxes should be wiped off daily with a cloth dampened in warm water with disinfectant in it.

Flush valves, piping and all nickel plating or trimmings should be polished at least twice weekly.

VERMIN

During the warm months (the fly season) use insect spray for flies before the theatre opens daily, in all toilet, wash rooms and slop sink closets, and at intervals during the day if necessary.

Exterminate all vermin. Water bugs and roaches are extremely objectionable in a toilet or wash room. Remember, soap is food for vermin. Do not permit it to be left exposed in sink rooms or toilets. Be on the alert to note the existence of vermin in any portion of the theatre, and use the necessary powders or liquids in order to exterminate them.

Cleanliness of toilets, wash rooms, and sink rooms is really inexpensive if this plan is followed. If odors are to be eliminated, such rooms must be clean. This is not a periodic program; it is a daily procedure.

It is hard to sell anything that is not clean. If toilets are dirty, the whole theatre is dirty, and the manager of the theatre has lost a contact with the patrons of the theatre and a wonderful opportunity to impress them with the class and type of theatre being operated.

THE CLEANING OF FLOORS

ANOTHER PROBLEM common to all theatres is that of cleaning floors. There are a vast variety of floors, floor materials and floor surfacing materials. The method of cleaning a floor is all-important from the standpoint of results obtained, economy of material and labor.

The first step in cleaning any floor is to remove as much as possible of the loose, free dirt that might be on the floor. This can most easily be done by sweeping. A good quality of hair broom is recommended for this work.

To clean marble, tile or terrazzo floors properly, sprinkle or wet with a mop a section of floor about 6 to 8 feet deep, and the entire width of the space to be cleaned, unless such width is excessive or interrupted by pillars, columns, gates or railings, in which cases stop at rather a natural division in the width of the space. After sprinkling with water, shake, sprinkle or scatter a cleaning scouring powder over the wetted area. The quantity of cleaning powder must be determined by the condition of the floor to be cleaned. Because 3 pounds are used tonight, it does not necessarily mean that 3 pounds must be used tomorrow night, or that 3 pounds will be enough tomorrow night. The quantity of material to be used must be determined entirely by the degree of dirtiness of the floor to be cleaned, and by the experiences of the janitor performing the task.

In the great majority of cases too much cleaning powder is used rather too little. The excess used, over and above the quantity necessary to do an efficient job, only adds to the labor. Such labor consumed in removing the excess from the floor and through additional rinsings, if the soap is to be removed from the floor, is wasted money.

After sprinkling the cleaner on the floor, the cleaner, with the water, forms a paste-like substance. This paste-like substance should be well worked over the surface with a mop or brush; the time required for this operation depends also upon the condition of the floor.

Following this scrubbing or mopping, the mass of paste (soap, detergent, dirt and water) is pushed on to the next section

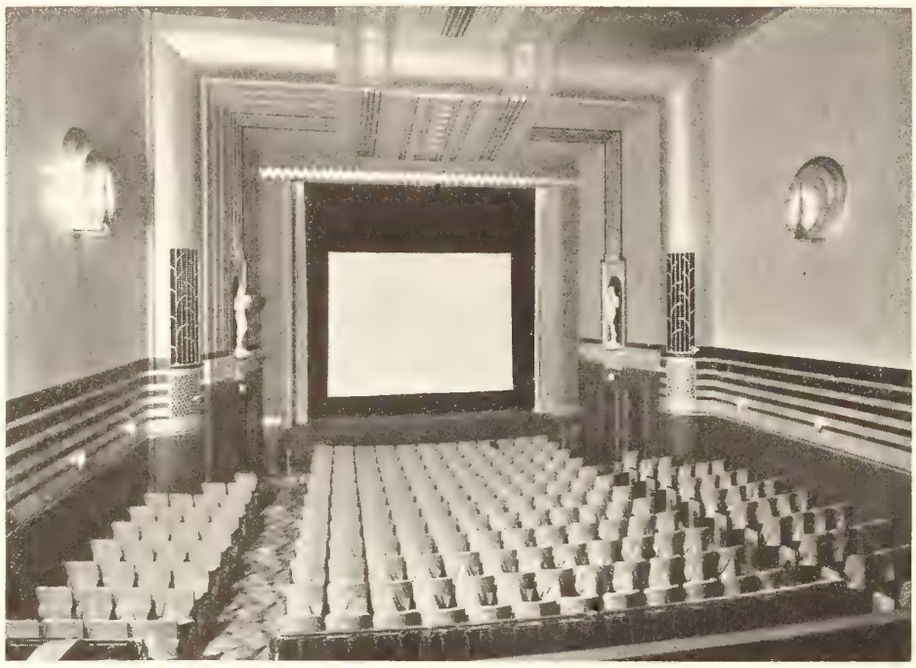
"The training of a theatre staff, which includes the janitors, ushers, cashiers and projectionists, as well as the musicians and stagehands, if there be any, requires the sustained expenditure of energy and alertness on the part of a manager and thereby demands greater reliability than is called for in the spasmodic performance of those managers who, calling themselves showmen, spend all their time on advertising, programming and staging their shows."

A METROPOLITAN THEATRE SEATING 600



A LATE expression of the new interest in motion picture theatres of reduced size (an interest that may represent a fundamental revaluation of the purposes of Exhibition) is the Midtown theatre in New York City. Located in an important business community in a densely populated residential section of the nation's largest city, the Midtown yet represents nothing essential that is not just as adaptable to the small city and town. The architects were Boak and Paris of New York.

The theatre is part of commercial building in the Nineties on Broadway, and is operated by the Lee A. Ochs circuit under a lease from the A. C. & H. M. Hall Realty Company. The area covered by the theatre and by the stores adjoining the vestibule and lobby is 50 x 100 feet. Construction is fireproof, with the exception of the roof, with terra cotta and aluminum facing at the front. Exclusive of the site, the enterprise represents an investment of $106,500, or $180 a seat. Of this amount, $31,500 was expended for equipment. All construction work was erected under a general contract awarded to J. J. Secoles, Inc.

SEATING PLAN

The Midtown is of the stadium type (see accompanying plans), with the 590 seats distributed equally between the stadium section and forward area, each of which contains 14 rows. The chairs, by American Seating Company, are of spring-edge type with both backs and seats upholstered. The distance from the first row to the screen is 9½ feet.

PROJECTION

The projection room, which is set into the rear of the stadium, measures 10 x 29 feet. The motor-generator and battery rooms are immediately off the projection room. Walls and ceiling of the latter are tinted a blue-green. The picture size is 16 x 20 feet, and the angle of projection is 14°. The theatre is equipped for screen entertainment only, with a proscenium opening 22 2/3 x 21½ feet. The two projectors are Simplex, while sound reproduction is by Western Electric "wide range" equipment.

The sound apparatus in this installation is of the "two-way" type, whereby the output is divided into two frequency bands. All frequencies below 3,000 cycles are separated from those above. They are fed into different types of loudspeakers, those in the lower range feeding into dynamic units, and those above 3,000 cycles feed-

An attempt to suggest in graphic form the principle represented in the proposal presented in the adjoining discussion. The chart at left indicates a scheme of organization along the lines therein described, as compared, on the right, with the established general system of circuit administration.

A NEW SYSTEM OF CIRCUIT OPERATION

[Presented here is a study of administrative methods in the operation of motion picture circuits. It is part of material prepared for inclusion in a thesis to be presented by a candidate for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from a leading university. Because they are not essential here, we accede to a request not to publish their names, made on the grounds that the thesis, which will concern itself with the economics of the motion picture industry in general, has not yet been submitted. The observations made in the section given here and its proposals, are not to be associated, of course, with either the experience or the opinion of anyone in charge of this publication. They are presented merely for their possible interest—and comment is invited. The words used are the author's own, except for certain italic interruptions.—THE EDITOR.]

NO BRANCH of the motion picture industry has felt the effects of the present business depression more intensely than that of theatre circuits (controlled in most cases by major film companies). A general drop in box office receipts was to be anticipated as a normal reaction to an economic crisis. The motion picture industry's losses due to the diminished purchasing power of the population eventually had to be absorbed by the theatres.

It is being pointed out, however, that as a rule, earnings of circuit theatres have been affected to a greater extent by the current business recession than those of independent houses. It is therefore asserted that a crisis brought to the surface the lack of soundness of theatre circuits as a system of operation.

The writer then divides criticism of circuit operation into that referring to expansion during a period of inflated prices and over-capitalization due to magnified goodwill figures; and into criticism directed against the method of circuit administration. Only the latter is involved in this particular section of the study, which describes the present structure of circuit organization as follows:

Broadly speaking, there are at present three systems of circuit organization:

(1) The highly centralized system.—In this the booking and exploitation of pictures for all districts are done directly from central headquarters (even if certain theatre managers may have some freedom in local advertising).

(2) The territorial administrative system.—Circuits with theatres spread extensively through the country found advisable to have divisions or district managers for certain territories. Their offices are responsible to headquarters for the policies of all the theatres in their respective territories.

(3) The loose control system.—In this system each theatre of a circuit forms an independent unit and its management has a free hand in bookings and exploitation.

It should be noted that in each of these systems (except the last one, which is a simple substitute for independently owned theatres) the administrative unit is the so-called district.

The districts are organized on vertical principles; i.e., each district possesses its first-run, second-run, third-run and sometimes subsequent-run houses.

A more significant fact, however, is that theatres within the same district are catering to various strata of the general motion picture audience. While one theatre of a district may be located in a well-to-do section, in another theatre's vicinity the average income per capita per family of the population seldom, if ever, exceeds $1,500 yearly. Yet the same district administration is selecting the programs and mapping out the publicity campaign of these theatres. Moreover, as districts usually belong to theatre circuits covering wide territories, differences in economic and social standards of various social strata within a district are further multiplied by economic and social peculiarities of specific parts of wide geographical area. At first glance, the above conditions may appear of little consequence; a closer examination, however, will reveal the nature of the handicaps involved.

In this respect the advantage lies with the independent theatre, it is stated, for the management of the independent house is closer to its group of customers and freer to respond readily to their interests. But—

The handicaps [of the circuit] can easily be overcome. Changes in the structure of circuit organizations, however, are required.

At present the motion picture public is considered almost as a unit. Not enough stress is laid on the fact that there is no such thing as a motion picture public. The 113,330,650 individuals (population above the age of five in 1930) composing the potential motion picture public are spread through great cities, various-sized towns, and rural districts. This population is of both sexes, of different ages, and has various occupations, financial circumstances, backgrounds and standards of living; different habits, various degrees of education and culture. It is only logical, therefore, to assume that these people are bound to split into all manner of groups and group subdivisions possessing various standards of entertainment.

It can be easily seen that it is not practical to make the same man responsible for guiding the policy of theatres whose publics come from various strata and have different conceptions of amusement.

To make a success, such a man should possess an unusually penetrating mind, besides a very vivid imagination. Even then he will be greatly handicapped. . . . Moreover, he seldom has any precise information on the attributes of the patrons in different theatres of his district. Neither has he much time or opportunity to make first-hand observations himself. . . .

In order to overcome these difficulties in circuit organization, horizontal grouping of theatres should be substituted. In other words, circuit houses located in similar types of neighborhoods, whose publics have corresponding conceptions of entertainment, should be a common administrative unit. The group-units would replace the present "district" as organization setups.

These groups, to be dependable, should be based on statistical research previously undertaken. Such research would attempt to obtain facts and data on the following points:

LATE LAW FOR THEATRE EXECUTIVES

By LEO T. PARKER

A digest of recent litigations and high court decisions involving legal questions of interest to theatre operators

A THEATRE PATRON who performs an act which is annoying to other patrons may be subject to a fine for such offense. Moreover, any person who performs an offensive act with malicious intent may be convicted and sentenced to jail, as well as being required to pay a heavy fine.

Annoyances Created by Patrons

CASE

For illustration, in the recent case of Archey v. State (59 S. W. [2d] 406, Wichita Falls, Tex.) it was alleged by a theatre owner that a patron, who was seated three rows distant from other patrons, discharged a stench bomb in the theatre which caused a very offensive odor and considerable annoyance to other persons in the theatre. The owner of the theatre swore out a warrant that the patron had violated a state law which provides:

"It shall be unlawful to break, open, or explode, or to abet in the breaking, opening, or exploding, of any stink bomb or any stinking, offensive smelling, or injurious bomb or substance with a malicious intent wrongfully to injure, molest or coerce another, or to injure the property or business of another, or to molest another in the use, management, conduct or control of his business or property."

The accused patron contended that he was not guilty of the offense. However, during the trial evidence was introduced showing that another patron of the theatre saw the accused sitting in the isolated section of the theatre, and detected the odor at about the same time that the accused arose from his seat to walk from the theatre. The witness ran down to where the accused had been sitting and found a bottle sitting there with some strong stinking liquid in it. About half of it was spilled on the floor. At the time he first saw the bottle the witness did not pick it up but ran out in front and saw the accused standing there and he pointed him out to the theatre manager.

In view of this testimony the lower court fined the accused $200 and sentenced him to serve 30 days in jail. The higher court sustained this verdict, and said:

DECISION

"Whether or not the substance in the bottle was offensive to the smell was not a contested issue in the case, the appellant's defense being solely that of an alibi. . . . The fact that the jury was permitted to smell the contents of the bottle . . . could not be regarded as harmful under the circumstances. No witness was introduced who asserted or claimed in any way that the contents of the bottle was not of an offensive stinking substance. The witness P. W. Mitchell testified without any objection that he was in the theatre on the night the alleged offense was committed and he smelled something in there that had an awful offensive stinking odor."

ENFORCED ARBITRATION

CONSIDERABLE discussion has arisen from time to time whether or not a contract is valid and enforceable by the terms of which the contracting parties agree not to enter courts for the purpose of settling any controversy, but that such controversy must be settled by arbitration. The latest higher court case involving this point of the law is Vitaphone Corporation v. Electrical Research Products (166 Atl. 255, Delaware).

CASE

In this case it was shown that the Vitaphone Corporation and the Electrical Research Products were joint adventurers in originating and developing the art of producing and reproducing talking motion pictures, in introducing talking motion pictures to the public and in making available the apparatus required therefor.

It was alleged that the Electrical Research Products was entrusted with the management and control of the joint enterprise and its assets and that the Vitaphone Corporation became entitled under the fiduciary relationship between it and Electrical Research Products to have the latter not only exercise the highest degree of good faith in the management and administration of the joint enterprise and to refrain from profiting at the expense of the Vitaphone Corporation, its co-adventurer, and from doing any acts inconsistent with or detrimental to the interests of the Vitaphone Corporation in the joint enterprise.

The Vitaphone Corporation filed suit, contending that Electrical Research Products, instead of complying with those fiduciary obligations, acted in complete disregard thereof and has been guilty of a series of breaches of trust to the great detriment of the former.

Electrical Research Products contended that the Vitaphone Corporation was not entitled to file suit in the State of Delaware for the reason that the contract between the two parties had been made in the State of New York, and that such contract clearly specified that neither party should enter the courts to settle a controversy but that such controversy would be settled by arbitration.

However, the counsel for the Vitaphone Corporation argued that the suit was filed in the State of Delaware, whose laws prohibited contracting parties from agreeing not to enter the courts, and that therefore the Vitaphone Corporation had privilege of settling its differences with Electrical Research Products before a court. In upholding this contention, the court said:

DECISION

"The question this court is required to decide is one of law, viz: Whether the arbitration covenant and statute relied on by the respondent (Electrical Research Products) constitute a bar to the action instituted in this court by the complainant (Vitaphone Corporation). . . . In the Randel Case the court said: 'Courts will not suffer themselves to be ousted of their jurisdiction by the private agreement of the parties'. . . ."

Also, the court said, "I do not say that the policy of this State is opposed to the settlement of controversies by arbitration. Such a policy would be unfortunate in these times when settlements without litigation should be encouraged in every way. . . . But I do say that courts here and elsewhere are opposed to being ousted of jurisdiction by the agreement of parties to an arbitration, no award having been made."

ANOTHER DECISION

Another important point of the law is that although no State law has been enacted which prohibits contracting parties from settling differences by arbitration, yet a contract of this nature may not be valid.

For instance, in the late case of Meacham v. Jamestown (211 N. Y. 346), it was shown that a contract provided not only that the decision of an arbitrator should be final and conclusive between the parties, but further that each party "waives all right of action, suit or suits or other remedy in law or otherwise under this contract or arising out of the same to enforce any claim except as the same shall have been determined by said arbitrator." The court in this case said:

"Tested by the principles of the cases cited, we conclude that the language employed in the contract in question is susceptible of but one construction, namely, an attempt on the part of the parties to the same to enter into an independent covenant or agreement to provide for an adjustment of all questions of difference arising between the parties by arbitration to the exclusion of jurisdiction by the courts. . . . If any exceptions to the general rule are to be admitted, we ought not to extend them to a contract where the exclusive jurisdiction has been bestowed, not on the regular courts of another sovereignty, but on private arbitrators. . . . The jurisdiction of our courts is established by law, and is not to be diminished, any more than it is to be increased, by the convention of the parties."

Therefore, it is extremely doubtful that contracts are valid by the terms of which contracting parties agree not to enter the courts for the purpose of settling difficulties.

NOTIFICATION TO FILE SUIT

ANY PERSON is liable who threatens to file suit to recover an amount due if it is shown that he had no intention of filing the suit. However, irrespective whether the debtor is in a position to pay the bill, the creditor is entitled to notify the debtor of his intention to file suit to collect an amount due.

CASE

For example, in Alamo Amusement Company v. Motion Picture Industries (147 So. 114, New Orleans, La.), it was disclosed that a motion picture equipment company sold to a theatre owner a talking picture machine for $6,500. The seller agreed to pay the theatre owner $500 provided the latter would agree to pay the whole amount, that is to say, $6,500. Why the transaction was handled in this way is not apparent, but it is immaterial. The fact is that the sale was so executed.

When the theatre owner undertook to collect the $500 the seller refused payment stating that the machine had not been properly used. However, the controversy was settled when the seller gave to the theatre owner ten promissory notes for $50 each. The seller paid two of these notes and refused to pay the other eight. The theatre owner notified the seller that if he failed to pay the notes when due suit would be filed to collect the same.

The seller failed to pay the notes and the theatre owner filed suit. The seller attempted to avoid liability on the grounds that the theatre owner had attempted to threaten him by notifying him of the intended suit. However, the higher court held the theatre owner entitled to collect the amount due, and said:

DECISION

"Our attention has been directed to no authority, and we know of none, which would support the proposition that a threat to institute suit for the purpose of collecting a claim amounts to duress. It is perfectly true, as defendant suggests, that the insistence upon payment of a claim, coupled with a threat of litigation, is often embarrassing and frequently disastrous, but it is expected that obligations are to be met and courts are established for the enforcement of just obligations."

A GUIDE TO SAFE CONTRACTS

BY M. MARVIN BERGER
MEMBER NEW YORK BAR

IT IS TO BE NOTED that business men are relying to an increasing extent in their transactions upon written rather than oral agreements. Especially in the field of employment is the written contract rapidly supplanting the oral agreement which is admittedly vague, uncertain and lacking in foresight.

For the guidance of theatre owners and managers I have prepared a number of suggestions to be considered in the drafting of employment contracts and a rough form of such a contract. The following form should not be regarded as a substitute for the services of a lawyer, but rather as a supplement to such services. Competent legal advice should always be taken in preference to blindly copying a form.

The contract of employment should begin with a statement that the parties have come to an agreement and should then state the nature of the agreement; viz.—

Agreement between A. B. (hereinafter called the employer) and C. D. (hereinafter called the employee) by which it is mutually agreed:

1. The employer agrees to employ the Employee and the Employee agrees to work for the Employer for a term of ..... years, commencing .....

The duties of the employee should be specifically set forth, allowing reasonable leeway for the performance of such other duties in the general line of employment, as the employer may direct.

2. The duties of the Employee shall be those of (here state capacity of employment) and shall include ..... and such other duties in connection with said employment as may be assigned to him by the employer.

The hours of employment and salary should follow, with provisions for overtime work, vacations and the effect of absence of the Employee on his salary.

3. The Employer will pay the Employee as compensation for his services as aforesaid, the sum of ..... dollars per week, payable at the end of each week. The regular hours of employment shall be from ..... to ..... daily, and for all time taken by the Employee from his employment, except for such periods of vacation with pay that the Employer may at his option grant the Employee, a deduction proportionate to the time so taken, shall be made in the Employee's salary. For any working time in excess of the Employee's regular hours of employment, the Employee shall be paid at the rate of ..... per .....

To insure the employee's undivided attention to his duties and to safeguard the employer against incompetent work, the following paragraphs should be included:

4. The Employee agrees during the term of his employment not to enter directly or indirectly any business or employment with or for any other person or persons, corporation or corporations, and to use his best endeavors to promote the business interests of the Employer.

5. The Employee agrees to perform his work to the satisfaction of the Employer and it is expressly agreed that if the work of the Employee shall not be performed in a manner satisfactory to the Employer, that then the Employer shall have the right at any time during the term of this agreement, to discharge the Employee and upon such discharge, the Employer shall be released of all further obligations or liabilities hereunder.

The ending of the agreement should next be provided for as follows:

6. This agreement shall terminate without further notice upon the death or incapacity of either of the parties hereto or bankruptcy of the Employer, or illness of the Employee for a period in excess of ..... weeks or the unexcused absence of the Employee and the Employer may, at his option, terminate this agreement without further notice in the event of interruption of his business.

If it is desired to give the employer or both employer and employee the right to arbitrarily end the agreement, it may be provided for as follows:

7. The Employer (or either of the parties hereto) may terminate this agreement by giving to the other party hereto, at least ..... days notice in writing.

If the employee is to hold a position of trust, he may be restrained from disclosing trade secrets by the following paragraph:

8. The Employee agrees that he will not disclose information or trade secrets concerning his Employer's business during or after the period of this employment.

Where circumstances make it desirable, the contract may contain a non-competing clause as follows:

9. The Employee agrees not to compete directly or indirectly with the business of the Employer within an area of ..... miles for a period of ..... years after the termination of this agreement.

In addition to the signatures of the parties the agreement should contain the signature of at least one witness.

AIR CONDITIONING—AND MANAGEMENT

A discussion supplementing the four Air Conditioning Guide Sheets previously presented

AIR CONDITIONING has become a most important consideration for all employers of large groups who perform their work indoors, and for all proprietors of businesses that serve the general public. The fact that the relation of moisture content of air, heat and air motion does affect the human comfort and physiological efficiency, has been accepted by business men, doctors and engineers.

This places the general problem of air conditioning in a fair way to become one of the important industries during the next decade. It also is the handwriting on the wall, so to speak, that theatre owners and managers must face the problem squarely, or face a continual decline in box office grosses during those months of the year when the outside atmospheric conditions are unfavorable to them.

There is no easy and inexpensive way to true air conditioning or really good ventilation. Money spent toward obtaining a proper air condition in a theatre is many times wasted in an attempt to install a system that is merely cheap, and just enough of a system to permit the theatre manager to meet his competitor advertising on air comfort within the competitor theatre. The old attitude in the motion picture industry of "keeping up with your competitor" has been responsible for much of the general progress of the industry, but on the other hand, it also has been the reason for many horrible mistakes involving the loss or waste of thousands of dollars.

Each unit of this business, right down to the single theatre, presents definite problems that are individual to that particular phase of the industry. The effort in the past to standardize the solution to these individual problems has proved a decided failure. In many quarters, even after the tragic experiences of the past three and one-half years, the idea still persists that an executive other than the theatre manager and more removed from the problems of the theatre than the manager can best meet and solve the problems confronting that particular situation.

These points are made here to emphasize that the individual theatre manager, whether owner-manager or an employed manager, must ultimately become and be recognized as the backbone of this business of exhibiting motion pictures. The theatre manager must be now, or must become a rounded-out, trained, trustworthy, intelligent, capable business man whose opinions and decisions will carry the weight of that operation. There is a definite influence that must be injected into the operation of theatres through the complete development of each manager as a business man, not only an expert on publicity and exploitation.

VALUE OF CHARTS

With this conception of the modern theatre manager in mind, four articles on ventilation and air conditioning have been presented in BETTER THEATRES. These articles were prepared to give each manager the opportunity to become skilled to some degree in analyzing the problem of ventilation or air conditioning as it is presented to him by his own theatre. This has been a step towards rounding out the technical or mechanical side of your training. A study of these articles will permit recommendations for a particular theatre to be made, based upon authentic data and sound reason. One of the most pitiful requests for ventilation is when a manager states that something must be done, because a competitor has put in a "cooling system." Such a request indicates that the competing manager is a leader, progressive and alive to his problems. Such a request becomes a self-indictment of the manager making it.

If improved ventilation or air conditioning was unsound economically before competition presented itself the chances are that it is going to be equally unsound in meeting and overcoming that competition; but competition has put you in the nine hole and you are forced to follow. This old game of follow the leader has in the past pyramided successes in some cases (minority) and trebled losses (majority) in other cases.

Permit this emphasis once more: Investments are not justified when based solely on keeping up with competition (you may be competing with something too big and out of your class). Investments for improvements must be based on the definite benefits to be derived by your theatre.

TRUE COMFORT FACTORS

Researches by several scientific and engineering groups have definitely established the relation between moisture, heat and motion in air. The mathematical curves representing these relations have been presented to you. These curves show the required conditions that must exist to result in a given effective temperature. It has been shown that temperature, by itself, even when automatically controlled, does not determine human comfort. Humidity is equally important. The proper relation between temperature and humidity can only be obtained and maintained by complete air conditioning. This is a fact though some will state otherwise. However, it also has been brought out that a very satisfactory apparent temperature condition can be created by a complete understanding of air velocities, within certain limits.

Some managers may ask, is it necessary to have all these charts and go through all this to determine the air conditions in a theatre? The answer is yes. There is no one instrument yet devised as an indicator of comfort. An instrument attempting to accomplish this has been devised by Dr. Leonard Hill of England, and is known as the Kata-Thermometer. Under conditions of high humidity this instrument is a reliable indicator, but it does not record with sufficient precision the effective temperatures under the varying conditions met in theatre operation.

AIR DISTRIBUTION

In all these discussions there is one of great concern to the theatre manager that has not as yet been directly discussed. The distribution of air within an auditorium is of great importance. To tackle this problem intelligently certain characteristics of air must be understood. (1) Air can be pushed or pulled, (2) it can be compressed, (3) it has a tendency, regardless of quantity, to uniformly fill any space into which a given quantity of it is put.

Because of the first characteristic we can move air about from place to place, but because of the third characteristic we must provide a path for that air or it will not go where we want it to go. Because of the second quality, in order to control air change in an auditorium, there must be provided some definite control or means of getting rid of air that we push into the auditorium by means of the delivery fans. Of course there are always many ways in which air forced into an auditorium leaks out; but this is largely uncontrolled.

Air is generally best distributed by pushing it into an auditorium, then pulling it to the desired spots. Therefore, where air conditioning is not installed and the apparent cooling effect must be obtained from air change or air velocity, it is necessary to positively direct the incoming air and attempt to pull it to desired spots by exhaust fans or gravity vents.

When a satisfactory distribution has been obtained with fans at full speed, don't attempt to adjust for conditions within the theatre by changing the fan speeds. Make the adjustments reducing the quantity by reducing the delivery opening into the auditorium. This can be done by louvres or slides, which will cut down the size of the opening. This method permits the remaining quantity of air to enter at approximately the original speed or velocity and thereby disturbs the distribution balance least.

SPECIAL PROVISIONS

In lieu of exhaust fans it becomes necessary to provide definite openings through which air delivered into an auditorium may escape. The location of such openings and their size is all-important. When such openings are provided some means must be installed to regulate the quantity of air that may escape through them.

When there is no air conditioning equip-

CIRCUITS RECONDITION

● Reconditioning activities among the circuits have in many cases been worked out into extensive programs, either begun or to be initiated soon. Radio-Keith-Orpheum, for example, has already carried out many improvements, which are listed in some detail by Mr. Arthur J. Benline, supervising engineer, of that circuit. His communication includes some significant observations of the value of planned reconditioning at this time, and we therefore have asked for the privilege of quoting him:

"After a period of a number of years, when the work of maintaining the RKO theatres was limited to only such minor patching as could be done for the least possible expense, we have been proceeding with some improvements and replacements.

"Modernistic box offices were placed in front of many theatres, including five houses in Brooklyn, Proctor's in Troy, Proctor's in Albany, Keith's in Boston, Keith's Lowell and the Palace in Rochester. In each instance these new accessibly located box offices replaced old, inside box offices that were found by the patrons with the greatest difficulty. They improve the appearance of the theatres, and in each instance there has been a decided improvement in business probably due in some part to the new box offices, among other things. Other old box offices were reconstructed, frames installed and otherwise improved.

"In a number of theatres new rubber mats in attractive colors were placed in the lobbies, replacing old, worn-out black mats. The new mats cost somewhat more than replacement with the same type of black mats would have cost, but they greatly improve the appearance of the lobby.

"There has been considerable replacement of carpet. Instead of inserting small patches throughout the house, as was the practice in the past, entirely new carpeting was installed—and at a very little difference in expense. We completely recarpeted the first area seen by patrons, in each theatre—main lobby, main foyer, rear of first floor seating area, etc. In each instance black carpet was replaced with carpet of bright attractive colors, consistent with the architecture of the theatre. A long list of houses were so improved, eight of them located in Greater New York, five in New York State, one in Boston, one in Lowell, one in Providence, six in Cincinnati, one in Dayton and one in Columbus. Smaller carpet repairs, of course, were made in practically every other RKO theatre.

"Marquee and attraction signs not previously painted for three or four years, were cleaned and thoroughly repainted and decorated. Through a mistaken artistic sense, RKO theatres had black marquee soffits, and these were painted with white enamel. Painting and decorating is now in progress at many RKO theatres.

"Boilers and heating systems have also been overhauled, some of them for the first time since the theatres were constructed. This has been reflected in the decreased consumption of fuel and the increased heating efficiency.

"The staffs in each theatre were trained and encouraged to take care of the routine maintenance that was previously neglected or done by an expensive home office staff.

"Records made by our managers on the cost of these repairs, in comparison to former costs for similar work, indicated that almost $100,000 worth of work has already gone into RKO theatres.

"It is difficult to estimate on the cost of alterations, but these examples might prove interesting. Box offices cost from $200 to $300 apiece. Rubber mats ranged from $250 to $1,000 per theatre. Carpet installations cost from $500 to $1,500, while painting ran between $100 and $500 per theatre.

"I think that the most interesting thing to point out is that all of this work improves the appearance and efficiency of our theatres and does not cost much more than mere patch work. In other words, it is entirely a case of intelligent purchasing and maintenance, rather than piecemeal replacement."

Warner Brothers Theatres has also begun a broad program of replacement, covering some 500 houses. According to Mr. Herman R. Maier, chief of construction and maintenance for the circuit, the work is being done on the basis of a six-months program. It consists in general redecorating of about half the houses in the circuit, recarpeting about 200 theatres, and re-seating and re-upholstering in about 20 houses. This part of the reconditioning program is being conducted in conjunction with repairs to heating plants, electrical apparatus, etc.

Herman R. Maier

Mr. Maier disclosed that during the first six months it is planned to spend about $200,000. Thinking of the relationship of this expenditure to the unemployment problem, Mr. Maier adds:

"This amount should give about 150,000 man-hours of employment, figuring it at $1 an hour. This is only an average, of course, for in some places the rate would be higher, and in others lower.

"Even with this expenditure we have only started to do the work which is actually necessary. If conditions permit, for the first six months of 1934 we will put another half-million dollars back into our theatres—which, figured on the same basis, will give about 350,000 man-hours of work."

IMPROVEMENTS MADE

● A single branch office of the National Theatre Supply Company—Baltimore—has made an impressive report of reconditioning activity in that territory. Among the houses supplied have been the following:

Baltimore.—Columbia: Eugene McCurdy, owner; motor-generator. . . . Regent: Isaac Hornstein, owner; Walker screen. . . . New: Morris A. Mechanic, owner; marquee and neon sign. . . . Hippodrome: Isadore Rappaport, owner; two Simplex projector heads. . . . Alpha: Oscar Coblentz, owner; two Simplex projector heads. . . . Little (new theatre): Herman A. Blum, owner; complete projection room and stage equipment, including two Simplex projector heads and two Peerless lamps. . . . Boulevard: Durkee Circuit; two Simplex projector heads. . . . Avon (new house): Durkee Circuit; complete projection room and stage equipment, including two Simplex projector heads and Peerless lamps. . . . Aldine: James Rydzewski, owner; complete drape job, carpet, stage equipment, neon sign and marquee. . . . Ritz: Louis Gaertner, owner; complete redecorating, paint and drape job.

Belair, Md.—Argonne: Earl Burkins, owner; curtain control.

Bethesda, Md.—State: John H. Hiser, owner; Walker screen.

Washington, D. C.—Roosevelt (new theatre); Marcus Notes, owner; complete projection equipment, including two Simplex projector heads and two Peerless lamps.

Danville, Va.—Virginia: J. F. Falls, owner; two Simplex projector heads.

Fredericksburg, Va.—Colonial: Benjamin T. Pitts, owner; two Simplex projector heads, Walker screen.

Richmond, Va.—Venus: Morton Thalheimer Interests; Walker screen, changeover mechanisms. . . . State (new house): Morton Thalheimer Interests; complete projection room equipment, including two Simplex projector heads, Peerless lamps, motor-generator and stage equipment.

Charlestown, W. Va.—Opera House: Benjamin T. Pitts, owner; two Simplex-Acme sound projectors, screen and other equipment.

SOUNDHEAD

● The latest sound head developed by the LeRoy Sound Equipment Corporation shows the following main features of design:

The front edge guide is a removable ring adjustable to approximately 100 positions. It is made of tool steel, ground and chromium-plated. The sound gate is of the drum or turtleback type. It is made of seamless tubing ground to within .00025 of an inch and chromium-plated. It can be replaced in the field without readjustment of the optical unit.

Film guide rollers are full-ball bearing throughout. The optical unit employs a mechanical slit. The exciter lamp is adjustable to two positions. Two fabric belts transmit the motor power to the soundhead flywheel, while the projector head drive is effected by a silent link chain from a sprocket on the flywheel shaft of the soundhead to sprocket and pinion assembly on the projector head.

RECTIFIER TUBE

● A rectifier tube for theatre use has been added to the line of the Gordos Products Company. This mercury vapor bulb is of the hot cathode type but depends on mercury vapor for its rectifying action.

Equalization of pressure at charging rates of from ¼ ampere to 6 amperes is sought by the addition of a chamber designed to add a cooling member to the bulb which at the same time holds the surplus mercury not needed for rectifying action. This bulb can be used as a replacement element for any battery charger or sound rectifier.

Gordos mercury vapor rectifier tube.

Other recently developed items in the Gordos tube line are amplifier tubes, including one for use in pre-amplifiers. The 242 and 211 amplification tubes are constructed with carbon plate and Tungsten filament. The G-205 is designed to work as a power output tube and intermediate amplifier tube. A carbonized plate support four pillars with straight supports to the elements, re-enforced at the top for rigidity.

LOUDSPEAKER UNIT

● A loudspeaker unit of high-frequency type employing a piezo-electric diaphragm, has been brought out by the Electrophone Corporation. The self-actuating diaphragm is made of Rochelle salt crystals. The unit includes an exponential horn and in addition a self-contained coupling device.

The speaker is designed to be used in conjunction with a low-frequency loudspeaker unit, with which, according to the design, it may be connected in parallel without the use of extra networks or filters.

DUAL AMPLIFIER

● An amplifier for sound-on-film reproduction has been brought out by the Operadio Manufacturing Company with a dual feature consisting of two complete independent amplifiers having individual power supplies. They are interconnected by cord and plug and connect with a common control panel.

The amplifier is a.c. operated and supplies photoelectric cell voltage and exciter lamp current. An indicating meter is also provided. It is designed to operate with any sound-on-film apparatus using standard caesium type cells, and to match any 500-ohm stage line. A 110-volt a.c. outlet, controlled by the main amplifier switch, is provided for energizing speakers. It is adapted to exciter lamps of 10 volts, 7½ amperes; 10 volts, 5 amperes; or 8 volts, 4 amperes.

An interesting feature is a visual tone control designed to make possible a visual determination of the quality of the sound coming from the stage speakers. The amplifier, which is declared suitable for 500-seat theatres, is furnished with an inbuilt monitor speaker of electro-dynamic type, for which volume control is provided independent of the stage speakers.

SOUNDHEAD

● To meet the new requirements of extended frequency reproduction, the Weber Machine Company has developed its Model D Syncrofilm soundhead. It is framed in cast aluminum with a black enamel finish, and all working parts are chromium-plated. The optical system is rated to cut up to 10,000 cycles. The Model D standard head is in addition to this same company's Model E portable sound projector.

Syncrofilm head on Simplex projector.

H.-F. LOUDSPEAKER

● A high-frequency speaker of dynamic type for use with extended frequency reproduction equipment to cover a frequency range of from 3,000 to 12,000 cycles, has been marketed by the Racon Electric Company, Inc. It is supplied with a horn, which is an integral part of the loudspeaker, the assembly being mounted as a unit. Other characteristics are: Field rating, 6 volts or 110 volts, as specified; voice coil impedance, 15 ohms; overall height, 6¾ inches; horn bell, 3 inches.

SOUNDHEAD UNIT

● A soundhead for installation of the principal projectors has been developed by the Langsenkamp-Wheeler Brass Works. The head is mounted on a heavy-duty base casting and is enclosed in an aluminum case.

The photoelectric cell is situated behind the aperture plate so that the p.e. cell plate is nearly covered by the exciter lamp beam. The p.e. cell is enclosed in an aluminum housing. The aperture plate is semi-cylindrical in form and is made of chromium-plated steel.

Current is supplied the exciter lamp through a spring metal contact. The constant speed shaft is supported by two double-race ball bearings. Drive is through a groove in the flywheel, with power transmission through a silent chain.

The film passes under a tension roller to guide rollers, then is drawn over the aperture plate by the constant speed sprocket, and next through a loop to a hold-back sprocket, which is directly driven by gears from the main shaft. The sprocket assembly includes the sprocket, pad roller and stripper plate. All steel parts are finished in cadmium, and the casing finish is black crackle baked enamel.

SELECTING HORNS

● Prompted by the rapid increase in the number of extended frequency reproducing equipments installed, Mr. D. W. Wright, president of Wright-DeCoster, Inc., manufacturer of speakers and horns, writes in this timely observation of a consequent condition:

"With the advent of wide range film recording, theatre owners came suddenly awake to the fact that it was necessary for them to install in their theatres equipment capable of reproducing the high and low frequencies present on the film.

"Naturally, there were many owners of theatres that felt they could not afford to make a change at this time because of the position they were in due to the past depression. Those who were lucky enough to have speakers installed in the past which were capable of reproducing a wider range of frequencies than they were receiving, were able to get by with the new recording.

"However, those theatres in which the common ordinary theatre speakers were installed found themselves in a most embarrassing position because the sound which they considered satisfactory a short time ago was proving antiquated.

"Some manufacturers deemed it necessary to have three different units installed behind the screen; one for the low notes, another for the middle register, and a third for the high frequencies in order to properly reproduce the wide range recording. This combination was usually made up with a cone type speaker for the low notes, an air column horn for the middle register, and a small horn commonly called a 'tweeter' for the high register. There were others who seemed to feel they could get satisfactory results with two speakers; one for the low register, and one for the high register.

"Yet, there is no possibility of denying that the ideal reproducer is one which is capable of reproducing the high, middle, and low registers with equal fidelity. Such an instrument will have no so-called lapping by one unit reproducing over a portion of the same scale that another unit is covering. It can easily be seen when such a thing occurs that the portion of the musical scale covered by both units would be more accentuated than the portion of the scale covered by only one unit. In other words, it would be impossible to have even volume over the entire scale.

"This unevenness which has just been referred to, would generally go unnoticed as it would be hard for the human ear to detect, but there are bound to be certain places in the reproducing of pictures where this slight accentutation of a certain portion of the scale would jar and unconsciously, perhaps, destroy the rapt attention and enjoyment of the audience.

"Another item of serious importance towards securing the type of sound necessary to insure restfulness and enjoyment by the audience is the horn or projector used in which the reproducer is installed.

"In some theatres where the acoustic treatment has reduced the echoing to a point where it is not objectionable, the ordinary flat baffle may be used.

"However, it is generally found that some type of horn must be used in order to confine the beam of the sound waves to just cover the audience and reduce the reflecting effect of walls and ceiling.

"A great deal of care should always be used in selecting the proper type of horn. A horn which is completely manufactured with insulating material has walls which are not hard enough to keep from absorbing some high frequencies, while a horn constructed with hard smooth walls usually has resonant vibratory periods which accentuates certain low frequencies. Therefore, the ideal horn is one made of non-resonant material having a hard smooth inner surface."

BOOK ON WIDE RANGE

● A booklet of considerable beauty has been issued by Electric Research Products, Inc., on Western Electric wide range reproduction. It tells the story of the development of this equipment, and very decoratively illustrates the text with photographs which, while rather subtle in import, nevertheless have obvious pictorial appeal. In addition it tells what wide range reproduction means to the theatre patron and, as an installation problem, to the exhibitor. The booklet contains 13 numbered pages, in addition to the covers, and is handsomely printed on enamel stock.

SOUND TUBES

● The line of the recently organized Amplex Electronic Products, Inc., has now been extended to include all tubes of the types required for theatre reproduction. In addition to 264-A and 205-D amplifier tubes, the line includes exciter lamps of special types as well as of the four common types; charger bulbs, photoelectric cells (caesium argon gas filled type) designed especially for use with Western Electric equipment, and also p. e. cells for use with Photophone, Pacent and Powers portable systems.

WHITE BOWL LAMP

● An incandescent lamp of white bowl type, but with the enamel on the inside of the bulb instead of on the outside (where some maintenance engineers declare it collects dust), has been developed by the Hygrade Sylvania Corporation. These lamps, for general illumination use, may be procured for all voltages in wattages from 150 to 1,500.

Accounting Systems

BOOKKEEPING systems taking into consideration specific requirements of the theatre have been developed to care for the operation of motion picture houses. These may be had either in loose leaf form or in solid book form covering an entire year's operation. These systems are designed to cover fully receipts and disbursements, film used, tickets sold, etc., and enable the exhibitor to check with promptness and accuracy his daily, weekly business or the business for the year. Prices range from $1.50 to $7.50.

Acoustical Products and Engineering

PROPER acoustics is today a subject of outstanding importance in motion picture theatres. The introduction of sound films has necessitated the establishment of a more exact standard of acoustics than was necessary when motion picture theatres simply had the acoustical problem involved in orchestral and incidental music, because speech demands a more exact acoustical condition than music. In addition, the use of sound films made possible a range of volume never before possible, and made it necessary as well to reproduce carefully every shade and inflection of the human voice.

An auditorium that is faulty in acoustical properties is incapable of being used with any degree of satisfaction for sound films. Due also to the limitations of the recording and reproducing apparatus it is essential that the acoustical properties of the theatre in which sound films are reproduced shall aid in the quality of the reproduction rather than introduce added distortion and confusion. The problem of acoustics in auditoriums has been reduced to a science, and proper acoustics may be provided in new theatres or in existing theatres. Extensive research has produced types of interior finish which combine the desirable acoustical characteristics with excellent decorative possibilities.

The problem of acoustics in theatres has resulted in special consideration of them by certain manufacturers who have established special departments, headed by experts, to cooperate with theatre owners and architects in the acoustical treatment of theatre buildings.

Adapters, Mazda

THE Mazda lamp adapter is a device for converting a projector using the carbon arc to the use of Mazda projection lamps. It can be installed in any carbon arc housing by fastening it to the lower carbon jaw. It will operate for both pictures and stereoptican slides. The device consists of a bracket, an adjustable arm and reflector located behind the lamp. Prices range from $10 up.

Addressing and Duplicating Machines

IN machines of this type for the automatic addressing of house organs, programs, special promotional letters and other literature, as well as sales letters, there are two methods employed in making stencils. One is known as the typewriteable address card system which may be prepared on a typewriter, and the other is the embossing of names and addresses on metal plates. Exhibitors will find that addressing machines may be purchased on time, and will be given demonstrations without cost or obligation.

Advertising Novelties

THE thing to be accomplished through the use of advertising novelties, of one type or another is the chief consideration in their selection. Among the popular novelties, however, which have been used by theatres for stimulating matinee business, building up juvenile performances or bolstering business on week nights are balloons, thermometers on which are imprinted pictures of stars, buttons, badges, pennants, confections, toys, etc. A popular children's matinee stunt can be obtained by giving away a variety of novelty toys. These can be had in boxes containing 100 toys ranging in value from 5c to 15c at a cost of $3.00.

Air Conditioning and Cooling Equipment

AIR CONDITIONING in the theatre has already arrived at a degree of importance making it one of the necessary adjuncts of the modern motion picture theatre. Because in the theatre people are closely associated physically in great numbers, and for the purpose of realizing enjoyment, the atmospheric conditions of the auditorium especially must not be dependent upon the weather or on any other chance factor. Enjoyment of the entertainment is closely connected with comfort, and the popularity of the theatre is of course influenced by its effect upon health.

Air conditioning does not only mean facilities for cooling a theatre during the hot months, but involves distribution of fresh, clean air at proper temperatures and pressures, and without drafts in the breathing zone. This may mean that the system should be capable of functioning in connection with the heating apparatus as well as with the cooling facilities.

Local conditions influence to some extent the kind of an air conditioning system required in any specific theatre. Some could achieve some measure of good air conditions with equipment costing as low as a few thousand dollars. Others require more elaborate apparatus.

The cooling method in the more elaborate apparatus requires a refrigeration chamber, in which the air is drawn through water vapor, the water having been cooled by means of a gas compressor, the refrigeration agent being carbon dioxide or other chemical of similar action.

Arc Regulators

AS THE NAME implies the arc regulator regulates the voltage at the arc through automatic feeding as the carbon is consumed and the gap between the carbons increases. The result of this automatic action is a steady light on the screen pronounced superior to that which it is possible to produce by hand. The arc control, as it is frequently called, feeds the carbons in an even manner.

Batteries

BATTERIES FORM important units of sound reproducers and are generally furnished by the manufacturer with the sound apparatus. Non-synchronous devices do not use them, but synchronous methods must have them in order to eliminate the hum of the alternating current. Any standard make of batteries can be used, but it is always best to use the make furnished or recommended by the manufacturer of the sound apparatus.

Another important use of batteries in motion picture theatres is in emergency lighting systems which augment the regular source of light power as a safeguard against breakdown of the local system. They are installed for instant service upon such a breakdown, being placed in operation automatically. Besides giving the necessary power for lighting, they are capable also of affording the projector motors power for some time. Prices depend on the nature of the installation.

Canopies, Theatre

USE OF ARTISTIC canopies by motion picture theatres is general. Canopies serve a number of practical purposes. They offer theatres an excellent advertising medium while giving to the house an attractive and inviting entrance. During inclement weather they offer protection to waiting patrons.

Canopies are usually constructed of sheet metal and may be obtained in a variety of designs. They are furnished with glass roof or with steel ceiling and metal roof. Numerous interesting standard designs have been developed by marquee manufacturers especially for theatre use. These are easily installed and are shipped to theatres in convenient sections. Suggestions for attractive designs are available. Inquiries should be accompanied by approximate measurements of the front of the building where the canopy is to be used.

Carbons

MOTION PICTURE projection carbons might possibly be considered one of the most staple products in the operation of the moving picture theatre.

There is no factor, indeed, which can claim any more attention in the successful operation of the theatre than the light which is used for projection, and quite a little depends on both the quantity and quality of projector carbons kept on hand in the projection booth.

Modern projection demands the best in quality in projection carbons today, and this demand is being met by the carbon manufacturers through their scientific and research departments with products that have kept pace with modern progress.

Carpets

BECAUSE of the hard wear to which theatre carpets are subjected it has been found that there is no saving in the selection of cheap carpets. Generally, floor coverings and carpets should give an impression of stability and foundation upon which one may walk with security. A carpet that is fuzzy, light in color and overdecorated has a tendency to give the impression that it is not resting—but rather floating. Obviously this is an unfavorable impression. Carpet padding used under the carpet not only provides a softer and more comfortable feeling to the foot but reduces friction and adds many years to the life of the carpet by keeping it away from direct contact with the hard floor.

Carpets also should be selected with a view to the acoustics of the theatre.

Carpet Cushioning

IN THEATRES, where continuous coming and going of patrons subjects the carpets in aisles, stairs and foyers to unusual wear a cushioning under the carpets has been found to add many years to their life. In addition to this practical advantage carpet cushioning gives a delightful sensation of richness and luxury which is important in creating a desirable atmosphere in the theatre. Carpet cushioning is a product made of finely combed, tufted vegetable fibre interlaced through a burlap backing or of animal hair felted under pressure. It is made in thicknesses varying from ¼ to ¾ of an inch. Carpet cushioning also has a bearing upon acoustics.

Chairs, Theatre

TO EQUIP a theatre properly, the first requirement is a thorough understanding of the uses to which the building is to be put. Having determined that, a seating diagram or layout should be made to insure the maximum seating capacity consistent with comfort, safety, facility of entrance and exit, compliance with local or state building requirements, proper sight lines, elevations and other mechanical adaptations and adjustments

The arrangement and width of aisles and passageways should be such that transient patrons may move about with a minimum of disturbance to those who are seated. For this reason, the number of seats in each row between aisles should be kept as low as is possible and consistent with the desired seating capacity. It is well to have not more than ten or twelve seats in a row between each aisle, although this number may, if necessary, be increased slightly. Many theatres, however, have established a maximum of fourteen seats.

The distance between rows varies between 30 and 36 inches. Experience has demonstrated that this distance is necessary to accommodate all sizes of patrons, and to facilitate entering and leaving the center seats of a row while others are seated.

In planning the seats for a theatre, it is a safe policy to plan for the accommodation of persons who are above the average in size, since seating that is too large does not produce discomfort. In the larger theatres, therefore the majority of the seats are 20 inches wide with an occasional 19-inch chair to fill in. An exception to this ruling is the seating for loges, which frequently is as much as 24 inches wide.

The placing of chairs in rows and the arrangement of the aisles, to make ingress and egress as easy, speedy and safe as possible and to conform in every way with the building and fire ordinance of each community, is another important point requiring careful thought and planning.

Talking pictures have injected another element into the problem of seating for higher efficiency, i. e., acoustics. The acoustical properties of the theatre chair are now very important, and for sound-equipped houses upholstered seats have become a necessity due to their sound-absorbent quality. Veneer backs and seats are likely to induce sound reverberation of obnoxious character and may easily mar an otherwise perfect acoustical condition. Therefore, in the selection of seating facilities, the subject of acoustics must now be given most serious consideration.

Chair Covers

IN ADDITION to giving a pleasing and inviting appearance to the auditorium, chair covers serve the practical purpose of coolness and sanitation. An interior otherwise drab may be transformed into a cool, clean, cheerful looking place through their use.

There are several things that should be borne in mind in connection with the use of chair covers. It should be remembered that auditorium and balcony chairs as a rule require two distinct and different styles of covers. The auditorium chair should be equipped with a cover which covers the entire chair back while the balcony chair need only have a quarter back. This is because of the slope on which balcony chairs are placed.

Working from blue prints provides the most satisfactory way of assuring a perfect fit of the cover for each chair.

Chair pads for veneer seats are also obtainable, and there are also special chair materials which are intended to be used as aids to acoustics.

Chair Fastening Cement

CEMENT of this kind is for firmly attaching into the floor the metal pieces to which the theatre chair is bolted. Into a hole made in the floor, the metal piece itself, or bolt for its attachment, is inserted, then around it is poured the melted cement. In about ten minutes this cement hardens and holds the metal piece or bolt firmly in place.

When used in reseating, the old metal piece or bolt is removed, a new one inserted and the cement poured around it. Such cement can be procured for around $7.50 per 12-pound can.

Change Makers

SPEED AND ACCURACY are obtained at the box office through the use of coin changing machines which in addition to their time saving facilities offer a valuable protection against annoying mistakes in making change to patrons. With the coin changing machines a light touch at the keyboard is all that is necessary to deliver the correct number of coins to the patron who easily scoops them up from a cup at the side of the change maker. Coins may be delivered either from the right or left side and these automatic cashiers as developed for theatres have been improved in recent months until now they are available in sizes which occupy only about 81 square inches of space in the box office.

In the handling of crowds the coin changer plays a particularly important part in reducing to a minimum delay at the ticket window, and some are equipped with safety locks to prevent short changing when a channel is empty. Fumbling of coins and the dropping of them is also eliminated.

Changeable Sign Letters

CHANGEABLE SIGN LETTERS are widely used by theatres in the marquee and have proved especially popular, because of the flexible manner in which they permit billing of a current or coming attraction. Changeable sign letters are generally made of cast aluminum with the letter part cut out. When used on the marquee these letters can be moved to make an attractive announcement. They are obtainable in large and small sizes and, in addition, numerals of the same character are also available.

Cleaning Compounds

THEATRE REMODELING and rejuvenation go hand in hand with a general clean-up, to which houses are periodically subjected. In this connection cleaning compounds are available for use, not only for the exterior of the house, but for cleaning painted surfaces, marble, tile, terrazzo and mosaic. These latter materials, much in use in theatre buildings, may be brought back to a pleasing state of newness through the use of proper detergents.

Composition Flooring

MANY PARTS of a theatre especially call for a floor covering other than woven materials, and often composition flooring may adequately take the place of expensive tiles, terrazzo, etc. Indeed, in some of the most elegant theatres, the new types of composition flooring, which is now made in raised sections and patterns suggestive of tile and other kinds of mineral flooring, have been effectively adopted.

Composition flooring is made by a number of companies specializing in this product, and all have their own processes. It may be said, however, that the basic materials are cork or rubber, and natural gums. For the coloring is added color pigments according to the design. The resulting mass is attached to burlap backing. Composition flooring comes in varying thicknesses, depending on the use to which it is to be put, and it may be especially designed.

Condensers (Lenses)

CONDENSERS are single glass lenses, unmounted. They are made in various diameters from 2¼ inches to 8 inches in diameter; the 4½ inches diameter and the 8 inches diameter being used mostly in motion picture work. The condenser is located in the front end of the lamphouse to gather the rays of light from the light source, and bend them, or condense them into a spot of light on the aperture. They are made in different shapes, some being Plano Convex some Meniscus or Moon shape and others Bi-Convex.

Condenser breakage and trouble has been greatly reduced through the perfection and development of heat resisting glass which is tempered and processed to withstand extreme changes of temperature. This, it is declared, has been accomplished without any sacrifice of light on the screen and without impairment of photographic values.

Focal lengths for motion picture work are usually 6½-7½-8½ and 9½ inches; 5 inches, 6 inches and 8 inches diameter condensers are usually used for spotlight projection.

Within recent years there has been a development of what is known as the Parabolic condenser, which has made possible the gathering of more light, and a sharp, concentrated spot on the aperture of the picture machine. These Parabolic condensers have been developed for regular arc projection, high intensity arc projection, and mazda projection. They are a little more expensive than the regular type of condenser, but the results obtained are well worth the price. Prices from $1.50 to $12.

Curtain Control Machines

FEW THINGS leave a finer impression on the theatre audience than the smooth and silent opening and closing of the curtain. This is accomplished by curtain control machines which operate automatically. The curtain can be controlled from the booth or from back stage by the simple process of pressing a button.

Curtain control equipment consists of track equipped with cable and snaps to which the curtain is fastened. In opening and closing the curtain may be stopped at any desired point across the stage and may also be reversed at will.

The motor for operating the curtain is usually placed on the stage or it may be placed in the grids or mounted on a platform. This permits the machine, track and curtains to be flied in addition to open from the center.

Theatres of all sizes are now employing automatic curtain control equipment and mechanism of this type has been developed to a high grade of efficiency, contributing immeasurably to audience enjoyment of the program. The price of curtain control machines is around $225 with the track selling at approximately $3 per foot.

A type of curtain control machine specially designed for small theatres with tracks up to 40 feet in length, has been put on the market at a price considerably lower than that of the larger machines.

Curtain Tracks

THE TYPE OF curtain track installed is important for several reasons. It cannot be a makeshift affair, for if it is it may ruin an otherwise good program. Naturally, it must be noiseless and must function smoothly and with little or no effort. A moving curtain attracts attention, therefore that motion must not be accompanied by vibration.

Dimmers

THE BEAUTIFUL lighting effects achieved in motion picture theatres is accomplished through dimmers which are capable of complete illumination control making possible soft changes and color blending of lights to create a restful and pleasing atmosphere. Dimmers are used by small theatres as well as the large motion picture palaces. They are usually placed at the side of the stage. In instances of smaller installations the dimmer may be operated by the projectionist from the booth.

The magical effect of lighting control and blending as achieved with dimmers is one of the outstanding features of the modern theatre today. On the stage and throughout the theatre dimmers give producers and managers one of their most effective means of creating marvelous effects which unquestionably are important factors at the box office.

Drinking Fountains

EIGHTEEN drinking fountains about evenly divided between the wall and pedestal type are installed in just one metropolitan theatre alone. While the house is one of the country's largest houses, the drinking water facilities provided easily emphasize the importance of this feature in any theatre.

Drinking fountains should be placed as conveniently as possible for the patron entering and leaving the theatre. In small houses at either end of foyer is a place frequently used. Whether the wall or pedestal type fountain is used depends upon space available, the wall type being used where space conditions are more limited. The wall type is designed with special decorative and illuminating features.

In the finer theatres drinking fountains form an integral part of the decorative scheme of the theatre, being designed in harmony with the balance of the surroundings and in conformity with the architectural treatment of the house.

Earphones

EARPHONES consist of sound receivers attached to head bands and means for connection of the receivers to the main sound system of a theatre so that persons who are hard of hearing may hear the sounds of the picture as well as a normal person. These systems for the hard-of-hearing have made the talking picture as much of a source of entertainment to the person with impaired hearing as the silent picture was before, and through the device, the partially deaf person has been retained as a patron of the motion picture theatre.

Electric Measuring Instruments

THE DEVELOPMENT and improvement in theatre lighting and projection have thrown onto the shoulders of the electrician, as well as the projectionist, many responsibilities. At their command are factors which make or break the show. With enormous switchboards to control, emergency lighting plants, motors, generators, arcs, dimmers, transverters, magnetic appliances and many other involved and sensitive electrical instruments, it devolves on the theatre to provide adequate equipment for their correct operation. In the list of necessary measuring instruments are ammeters, voltmeters, vacuum tube testers and the like. All these and others tend toward improving lighting.

Film Rewinders

THIS DEVICE is used for rewinding films after they are run through the projectors, and are made in two general patterns, the bench and fire-proof enclosed type. The bench or open rewind is made in one piece types with the dummy and geared end complete in one unit, and others are made so that they can be clamped to a bench or shelf, while some are permanently fastened by means of bolts. Some are made with plain bearings and some have their spindles mounted on ball bearings.

The enclosed rewinds are made in various patterns, both hand drive and motor drive models. The motor drive type is generally automatic in its operation, stopping at the end of the film or should the film break. Some are made with plain bearings and some have their spindles mounted on ball bearings. Some motor drive types also have multiple speed ranges and accommodate either one- or two-thousand-foot reels. One type recently brought on the market also has a detachable grinding and polishing attachment for aiding the operator in keeping his equipment in first class shape as well as keeping his arc lamp in good working order.

Fire Prevention for Projectors

IMPORTANT equipment has been developed which it is said definitely prevents a film fire in the projection machine. This equipment is a safety control device, that is easily installed and which is operated on the regular line voltage. The main control unit and dowser are mounted on the cone of the lamphouse and act as the main light cut off, taking the place of the regular dowser. The dowser is operated from five distinct points of contact, covering every avenue through which a fire could start in the projector while it is in operation or at a standstill with the film in it. All contact points are very sensitive, and the dowser is instantaneous in its action, yet does not depend upon springs to actuate it.

Furniture, Theatre

A NUMBER OF factors should guide the exhibitor in the selection of his furniture. Comfort and restfulness are among the first considerations. Upholstering materials offer a splendid opportunity for accents in the color scheme of the room. Over-elaborateness and that which breathes of the gaudy should generally be avoided.

All furniture depends upon the finish. A glassy varnish finish on any piece cheapens the quality of the framework. It scratches easily and shows dust more readily. A soft finish is always desirable, and this holds particularly true of gold furniture, which looks cheap unless nicely toned down.

Furniture for the men's room should always be of a heavy type, giving a manly and clubby appearance. Leather upholstering is quite proper. Women's rest room should be dainty and more genteel. Cane furniture is appropriate here.

Generators, Motor

THIS ELECTRICAL device is designed to produce direct current for the arc lamp on the projection machine, spotlights or double dissolving stereopticon. It consists of an alternating current motor, directly connected on a shaft to a direct current generator. Motor generators are made for every current requirement to deliver amperages from 20 amperes to 800 amperes.

There are 20 and 30 ampere outfits for reflecting arc lamps; 40, 60 and 80 ampere outfits for the ordinary arcs, and 80, 100, 150 ampere and larger generators for use with high intensity lamps.

Motor generators are made in two types, the series generators and the multiple arc generators.

It is so designed that for the period of time needed to warm up the second picture machine arc, preparatory to changing from one picture machine to the other, it will carry both arc lamps at the same amperage without danger of losing the light on the arc lamp on the running picture machine.

Multiple arc generators are designed and built to generate direct current for many arcs. They are used in the motion picture booths where there are two arcs on the picture machines, one or more spotlights and a double dissolving stereopticon and effect machine. The multiple arc generator correctly built, will carry the entire battery or arc lamps and various amperages. The variance in amperage is controlled by the necessary rheostats.

Hand Driers

WHAT IS KNOWN as the sanitary hand drier for the lavatories of theatres is an electrically operated blower type of drier, through which a current of warm air evaporates the water on the hands. Driers of this type are built of cast iron with a heavy white porcelain finish with the metal parts of nickel plate. These driers stand about 46 inches high with full 360-degree swivel nozzle and are operated by a foot lever or automatic cut-off push button which turns the switch on and off.

Hardware, Stage

WITH THE GROWING popularity in theatres of presentation acts a need is apparent for equipment to meet the varied physical requirements in the way of stage hardware to accomplish this purpose. The subject of stage hardware takes in many items, large and small, which are equipment essentials in the stage that is to be prepared to house a variety of acts or talent.

Under the heading of stage hardware are included such items as blocks and pulleys of all types, counterweights and arbors, belay pins, cleats, curtain tracks, keystones and corners, pin rails, pin wire, rope, manila and wire, rope locks, sand bags, smoke pocket stage screws, trim clamps, winches, carriers for extra-large screens and horns. Steel curtains and counterweight rigging are also important items of the equipment in the modern stage.

Heating Systems

THERE ARE A number of types and arrangements of theatre heating systems, each designed to fit the individual building. One of the systems is known as the fuel-to-air method whereby the transmission of the heating effect from the fuel is obtained without the intermediate processes of transmission through piping and radiators. The volumes of outdoor air entering the system are heated quickly and uniformly, producing comfortable heating and invigorating ventilation in all seasons of the year. The heating units most generally used to warm the incoming air are commonly known as unit heat generators.

Horn Lifts and Horn Towers

A HORN LIFT is an automatically controlled electric driven elevator used to raise and lower sound horns to their proper places behind the screen. They operate on the hydraulic, cable and drum and screw lift principle, and when the stage is needed for acts, the lift lowers the horn down under the stage. The portion of the stage flooring directly above the lift is attached to the lift, becoming a part of it, and any stage setup located over the lift goes up with it and is ready for use the instant the lift returns to the low level.

Horn towers are structural steel towers on which the horns are fastened. These towers are generally on rubber-tired, ball bearing casters so that they may be moved about silently to properly locate the horns behind the screen. When the horns are not in use the towers can be pushed out of the way.

Lamps, Exciter

THE PURPOSE of exciter lamps is to supply the light energy which actuates the photoelectric cell. It is located in the sound head in such adjustment that its beam of light rides upon the sound track, transmitted or interrupted according to the variations of the track. It is a basic element in the mechanism of sound-on-film reproduction and should be durable and precisely adapted to the particular design of the apparatus used.

Lamps, Exciter
Story

IT IS VERY encouraging, indeed, to note the many recent improvements in the high intensity lamp for moving picture propection.

With playhouses of every increasing seating capacity and consequent increase of projection range or "throw," the high intensity lamp has rapidly become a necessity with very few alternatives for light source in the larger houses.

The high intensity lamp, just a few years ago, while considered a necessity in the larger houses, was also looked upon as a rather troublesome piece of apparatus to be gotten along with because there was nothing else that could serve its purpose. But today the high intensity lamp has been perfected in such measure that it is no longer troublesome or intricate from an operating standpoint, and gives satisfactory results.

Lamps, Incandescent, Projection

THIS TERM may be confusing as there are lamps for motion picture projection as well as lamps for spotlight, searchlight, floodlight, and stereopticon projection. Some are quite different, and each should be used in the service it is designed for.

There are two lamps made especially for theatre projection with professional apparatus. The 900 watt, 30 ampere, 30 volt lamp and the 600 watt, 20 ampere, 30 volt lamp. They cannot be used on the ordinary lighting circuit without a regulator or transformer to change the current to the correct amperage and voltage.

For portable projectors such as are generally classed as "amateur" there are several types of projection lamps in very wide use. There are the 50, 100 and 200 watt lamps for use on 115 volt circuits and the 200 and 250 watt, 50 volt lamps which are operated with a regulator.

All of these lamps are designed to project the most possible light on the screen. The 900 watt lamp produces enough light to work efficiently on throws up to 100 feet. The 600 watt lamp is used for throws shorter than 80 feet. The other lamps are for short throw work, generally with 16-mm. film.

Other lamps designed for spotlight service can be had in wattages of from 100 watts to 10,000 watts for use on 115 volt lines. The 100 and 200 watt sizes are all standard and are carried in stock. There is a standard lamp of 1,000 watts for use on 115 volt lines for motion picture projection. It is not, however, as efficient as the 30 volt type for motion picture work and is generally used for non-theatrical service.

Lamps, Mazda

THE USE of the Mazda lamp has broadened in recent years, and today these lamps are used in projectors in the theatres and on stages of the studios. It has been said, and perhaps rightly, that light sells the show. Especially is this true in the cities where scores of theatres are vying with each other for patronage. In the display signs, in the strip signs, in the marquise, in the lobby and in the theatre proper, the Mazda lamp has made the White Way, whether in the metropolitan centers or in the small towns, whiter. It is being used in the studio as well as theatre. Durable colored lamps may now be purchased with coloring on the inside, permitting the lamps to be washed.

Lamps, Reflector Arc

A CARBON arc lamp for motion picture projection using a reflector for projecting the light through the aperture of the picture machine.

The complete lamp contains as a part of the unit an automatic arc control adjusted to operate at a variance of a fraction of a volt at the arc. The advantage of the reflecting arc lamp is that it will operate at from 20 to 25 per cent of the electrical current necessary to operate the old style arc lamp. The carbons used are much smaller in size, making an additional saving. The reflector arc is now accepted as a necessity by progressive exhibitors, because, in addition to saving electric current, it produces a flat even field of bright crisp white light which is very desirable in motion picture projection.

Lenses

FOR MOTION PICTURE theatre service there are projection lenses and condensing lenses. The latter are also used in projection but are placed in the lamphouse and condense the rays to a spot on the aperture. Projection lenses are objective lenses placed in the projector head.

The prime requirement of a projection lens is to give a bright, well defined picture on the screen without any distortion or color rays. These lenses are made in four sizes: Eighth, quarter, half and three-quarters (diameters, respectively, of 1 11/16, 1 5/16, 2 25/32 and 3¼ inches).

The one-eighth and one-quarter sizes are furnished in equivalent focii of two inches E. F., to eight inches E. F. The half-size is furnished in equivalent focii of four and

Lighting Control Equipment

THE MODERN theatre with a well balanced and effective lighing system, has made many demands on the manufacturers of lighting control equipment. Elaborate color effects must be possible and to change the lighting and gradually merge the light from one color to another without attracting the audiences a very flexible control system is required. Even the small control systems permit the operator to produce hundreds of color shades. Generally each color group has its own master control which is cross-interlocked with the ground master wheel device. Efficient control systems are available for every size house, no matter how small or how large.

Lighting Fixtures and Decorative Lighting

WHILE lighting fixtures constitute one of the outstanding features of the theatre today their style and application are obviously best determined by the individual treatment of the theatre and its requirements. Lighting and Power Plants

EMERGENCY lighting plants are equipment designed to furnish power for supplying illumination and operating the show in the event of a failure of the local power supply. It is said that the financial loss suffered by admissions returned by a theatre through only one power failure a year would more than compensate for the cost of equipment of this type. In addition to financial loss, a power failure during a performance frequently results in loss of life and property through the resultant panic.

Emergency lighting plants are made in several types such as the gasoline engine type, water turbine type, motor generator and battery type. In the case of the motor generator type several sources of power are provided to meet every contingency, which, together, form an interlocking type of protection.

The first source of power for the emergency lights of the theatre is the regular power supply, either from central station lines or from private generating plant. In the case of the private electric plant, if it is automatically operated, it can be so installed with an automatic transfer switch that the instant the regular supply of current fails, the private electric plant is automatically started. The electric plant then supplies the electrical needs of the theatre to the extent of its capacity. This it continues to do for as long as the regular supply is shut off. When this service is again resumed, the plant automatically stops.

The second source for the emergency, exit or hazard line circuits, is a special heavy duty glass jar storage battery, which is automatically kept charged by a motor generator set or rectifier. The capacity of the plant depends upon the total necessary load and the length of time protection is desired. The normal alternating current is fed through the transfer switch direct to the lighting lines and in the event of power failure, the batteries to the lighting lines. The batteries than supply the necessary power until the normal service is resumed, or until the batteries are discharged.

In some states the emergency, exit and hazard light circuits must be of a lower voltage than that of the normal power supply lines. In such cases, a transformer is used to step-down the supply line voltage to that of the emergency circuit voltage.

The third source of supply for the emergency circuits is the motor generator set itself. In case the A.C. transformer circuit, which normally feeds the 32-volt lights, should fail the motor generator set is operated from the man power supply line and connected to the emergency exit light circuits through its battery circuit. The battery will carry the lights only as long as necessary to start the motor generator set. After the motor generator is started the battery floats on the line.

The heavy-duty storage battery is kept continuously charged by means of a motor generator set, which is operated from the regular power lines, on an individual circuit separate from the emergency circuits.

Lights, Spot

ARE MADE in arc and incandescent types for use on stage—in the booth—in cove lighting, and for head spotting. Most spotlights on the market can be used for spot lighting and for full flood. The arc types are made in sizes of 3 ampere up to 150 ampere. They come complete with stand and attachment cord and connecter. Within the last year, the high intensity spot has appeared. It is an adaptation of the high intensity lamp to spot and flood lighting.

The incandescent spotlights are in sizes of from 250 watt to 2,000 watt. The sizes usually used are 250, 400, 500 and 1,000 watt.

The small head spots of 250 watts are used for cove lighting or spotting the head of a singer or organist. The incandescent spotlights come either with floor standard or pipe hangers for border lighting batons.

In stage work spotlights are frequently banked one above the other on a stand and used for flood-lighting from the wings. Prices range from $12 to $500.

AN ATTRACTIVE lobby is a boon to business. To conform to the beauty in lobby decoration, colorful and attractive lobby displays have been created. Automatic poster displays in polished bronze are constructed for convenient display of standard stills and photographs, featuring current and coming attractions. LOBBY ADVERTISING is an obviously effective business stimulant and in this connection the use of lobby display frames easily ranks first in appearance. With the effective display frames now available it is possible not only to obtain a maximum advertising value from their use but also to add materially to the appearance of the lobby. The front of the theatre may now be "dressed up" in excellent fashion with these frames. In the case of new theatres it is common practice to design lobby frames in conformity with the architectural style of the house.

ASIDE from detail considerations, the important thing to bear in mind in the purchase of a theatre organ is whether or not the instrument is designed and built to meet theatre requirements. Demands upon an organ to be used in a theatre and in a church, for example, are obviously at variance. The result is that organs for theatres are built along exacting lines, expressly for the work they are intended to perform.

Perfumes and Perfumers

DISAGREEABLE odors are unfortunately a usual concomitant of crowds, particularly in such compact enclosures as the motion picture auditorium. These odors may be effectively eliminated by the use of highly aromatic perfumes, method of diffusion is the simple one of which are diffused throughout the air. One placing the perfume in decorative cones, resembling a vase, at various places along the walls. These cones are made of clay and readily absorb the perfume, which may be said to saturate the cones, and the odor radiates from the latter to quite a large area beyond.

Another widely used method is to spray the air with a perfume at suitable intervals.

A trifle less simple and perhaps more effective method is that of placing perfume in a disseminator located at the ventilating fan so that the evaporated liquid or solidified perfume will carry its fragrance through the auditorium along with the fresh air.

Plastic Paint

PLASTIC PAINT is extensively used for decorating auditorium walls, lobbies and foyers of theatres. With this paint almost any sort of rough texture can be developed from the most refined stipple to the shaggiest Spanish palm finish. Sand swirl, two-tone and other effects can also be obtained in a number of colors and color combinations.

Plastic paint comes in the form of a white powder. Before application it is mixed with water; sometimes, also, with coloring matter. It may be tinted with dry colors before application, or the plastic paint may be sized and then glazed with an oil glaze tinted with oil colors. It may be applied on any type of surface and when thus properly applied and treated it can be washed from time to time with soap and water.

Plumbing Fixtures

EVERY PART of the theatre should be in keeping with the general architectural beauty of the theatre. Also, those parts of construction which are under cover of plaster and other exterior coverings must meet the requirements of building codes. The value of hidden fittings of high quality cannot be too strongly stressed as a factor in efficient and economical theatre operations. Included in these specifications are plumbing fixtures, both exposed and concealed.

Plumbing fixtures play an important part, both in the decorating scheme of a theatre and the cost of insurance. They should, therefore, be investigated by the theatre owner, remembering that they may be had in both white and in colors, and with various distinguishing sanitary features.

Portable Projectors

PORTABLE PROJECTORS are motion picture projection machines which are designed to be set up only temporarily and not for permanent installation in a regular theatre, as a rule, although used there. They are particularly adapted for use in schools, clubs, etc., and may be obtained for installation in connection with leading makes of sound equipment or with sound apparatus built in. There is a model with a heavy pedestal for permanent installation.

Semi-portable projectors are standard motion picture machines which may be utilized for either temporary or permanent installations. That is to say, these machines, while sturdily constructed, are comparatively light in weight and may be moved from room to room or from one building to another. Specially designed carrying cases are also provided at slight additonal cost for convenience in transporting for longer distances. For permanent installations, the model with the heavy pedestal no doubt has its advantages. Sound apparatus specially constructed for portable machines is available. Also available are sound-on-film unit projectors of portable type for both 35-mm. and 16 mm. film.

Poster Projectors

THESE MACHINES are projectors operated similarly to steropticons, except that instead of employing transparent slides, matter printed on opaque surfaces can be projected upon a screen. They are used in the making of posters for lobby displays and similar purposes. The artist projects a drawing or photograph from a press sheet or other prepared advertising matter, upon the surface on which he is to make his own drawing, controlling the image size by moving the projector nearer to or farther from the objective. The system of mirrors and lenses in the projector gives an image of the same direction and proportions as those of the original. The artist then merely traces along the projected lines, filling in the colors as indicated.

Poster projectors usually allow the use of original subjects as large as six or seven inches long by five or six inches high. Subjects larger than that can be projected and copied in sections.

Projection Booths and Equipment

THE PROJECTION room, or booth, because of the fact that it is one of the nerve centers of the motion picture theatre, is becoming standardized. Not in size, naturally, but in general construction, and the high standard of equipment, etc. The projection booth, because of the very nature of the purpose it serves, must be fireproof and ideally ventilated. Though standardized in the general meaning of the word, the booth, in its placement, construction and equipment, should have individual treatment for each theatre. The skilled projection engineer should be consulted on this vital phase of motion picture presentation.

There are many things to keep in mind in the purchase of projection room equipment. Certain parts of this equipment must conform to the building codes, it must be practical, it must satisfy the projectionist and it must lend itself to better projection. It is wise in a majority of instances to consult a skilled projectionist before purchasing this equipment, for his knowledge of completeness and product is broad. The projection booth today is an efficiency room with an expert in charge, and the equipment purchaser should be selected with that in mind.

The design and layout of the projection room should have the careful attention of the architect or builder at the time the plans for the theatre are being prepared. The co-operation of projection machine manufacturers or their distributors can profitably be called into use in the planning of a projection room and in considering its equipment. A number of instances are known where the design of the projection room, relegated to last-minute consideration by the architect or owner, has necessitated expensive remodeling when it has been found that beams and other constructional features made proper projection impossible.

The desirable projection room may vary in size but to acommodate two projectors, it should be at least 15 feet by 10 feet, with 12 foot ceiling. This size will also care for a spotlight and slide dissolver. By all means toilet facilities should be provided and a shower bath is highly desirable.

For construction, a floor of 6 inch cement slab is recommended with 4 inch tile wall. Doors, windows and casings should be of steel. There should be two entrances to the booth. A room adjacent to the booth, at least 8 by 8 and well ventilated should be provided for the generator.

It is important that in the event of fire the flame or smoke be kept out of the auditorium and for this reason the aperture on the front wall of the booth should be lined with steel and fitted with steel covers which will automatically drop when a fusible link melts that is over each projector, releasing the aperture covers.

Projection Machines

PROJECTORS HERE referred to are the standard non-portable machines designed for permanent installation, usually in theatres. It is the expressed belief of theatre owners and projectionists that practically ideal projection is possible with equipment available at present, provided it is in the hands of a competent operator. Modern projection machines are the result of many years of improvement and development to meet the ever-growing requirements for the best possible screen results.

Noticeable in the latest developments are the efforts of the manufacturers to keep abreast of the exacting requirements for projection in conjunction with sound reproduction. A type of shutter designed to eliminate the heat from the film and to provide air currents tending to draw dust and dirt from the film, are among the latest developments.

All late model standard projectors are either constructed specially for sound picture projection or are readily adapted to any make or model of sound apparatus, either for sound-on-disc or sound-on-film. The latter method, due to greater thickness and density of film requires the use of much more amperage at the arc and this factor has been met with lamps and lamphouses of greater illuminative output capacitv. Also the use of the perforated sound screen has to a very great extent added to the necessity of greater illumination. Moving picture projectors are now constructed more acurately and sturdily than ever before due to the more exacting requirements of talking picture projection and greater area of picture surfaces.

CONTINENTAL ELECTRIC CO.

While thousands of dollars are frequently spent in many other departments of the theatre an apparent indifference to the importance of the best possible projection has been shown by too many theatre owners in the past. Fortunately, this attitude is undergoing a very marked change and projection is beginning to receive due attention.

The motion picture theatre, despite the many trimmings connected with its construction today, offers to the public as its chief attraction the film story on the screen. Even sound has not made clarity of image less important. That the projected image should be as bright and steady as it is possible to produce by modern machinery and engineering skill goes without saying.

One of the handicaps to the securing of proper projection in the past has been in the delay given this phase of the theatre at the time plans for the house are made. In a measure responsibility for this may be placed with the architect who, in his desire to create a palace of beauty and grandeur has apparently failed to consider that such facilities are without purpose unless the thing which the public pays its money to see—the picture on the screen—is of a quality to produce the highest type of entertainment.

It is not the desire nor the intention here to go into any technical details concerning projection machines. It is rather aimed in these columns to impress upon the exhibitor who is not already alive to the fact that projection in his theatre should have his keenest attention. The picture is the main attraction practically always and any skimping in its quality ultimately will be reflected in decreased receipts.

Public Address Systems

PUBLIC ADDRESS SYSTEMS provide a means of electrically amplifying the voice. The microphone picks up the ing to the original sound waves, these "words" are carried through amplifiers to the speakers, where they are transformed into their original physical form as sound waves, only now of much greater intensity than when merely created by the human vocal mechanism. Public address systems are used principally in the theatre for announcements, though it is adaptable to many related purposes. Microphonic attachment may be made at several points in the system, making its function available to the manager in his office as well as backstage.

AN IMPORTANT item of projection equipment is the Rheostat. A rheostat may be described as a resistor provided with means for varying resistance (opposition). The resistance may be varied by having a contact lever or slider moved over a number of stationary buttons or segments between which sections of the rheostat are connected, by compressing a number of carbon or graphite disc or parts, by using a number of levers or knife-switches for cutting in and out resistance.

Safes, Box Office

THIS IS A SAFE anchored inside the box office into which the cashier may drop silver coins and bills as received from patrons beyond what is needed for purposes of making change. This type of safe has been developed as a result of the many "stick-ups" of theatre box offices in which the robber has obtained receipts running into several thousand dollars. It is widely used in several other trades, the idea, in brief, being that with this type of safe in the box office a theatre is likely to lose only the amount which it is keeping exposed for making change.

Box office safes are made of steel and provided with a slot into which surplus receipts are placed as received, or are equipped with a chute through which the surplus receipts may be dropped. Safes of this type usually make possible the lowest rates of burglary insurance.

Screens

THERE ARE THREE types of screens for motion picture projection, metallic surfaced, white surfaced and beaded surfaced. Sound screens are perforated to permit the issuance of the sound waves from the horns behind.

The metallic surfaced screens are built in various finishes, from a smooth surface to a heavy pebbled surface. The smooth surfaced screen has perpendicular reflective characteristics, while the heavy pebbled surfaces somewhat diffuse the light. In wide houses, the best image is obtained on the latter type. Metallic surfaces, as a rule, are built to fit the requirements of each house.

Flat white or diffusing type screens in most cases are used with high intensity projection. Screen surfaces are made to meet the requirements of mazda, reflecting arc, regular arc and high intensity projection. Prices of screen range from 50 cents to $2 per square foot.

Screens for sound pictures are used with most sound apparatus. They differ from silent screens in that they are porous. When the horns are located behind the screen, a tightly woven canvas would retard or muffle the sound. These screens are perforated or otherwise made porous. Some are coated with a silver finish and are constructed to lace into a frame.

Screen Frames

AFTER ALL, THE picture's the thing, and without stability and solidity of the screen frame the picture is being shown at a disadvantage to both theatre owner and projectionists, to say nothing of the patron. Billowing of the screen is a blow to good projection. Now, too, there is the added element of the steel frame as another form of equipment development.

Screen Masks

LARGER SCREENS HAVE come into rather general vogue recently, due to the elaborate type of productions now being produced which, with the use of special lenses have enabled theatres to present outstanding scenes with greater effect and scope. The many opportunities to use the full screen to give added value to important scenes have brought about the development of the screen modifier, or mask which, automatically operated, permits framing of the screen at any desired size. The screen modifier, or mask, was first used in connection with sound-on-film to compensate for the sound on the edge of the film. This equipment is now being used in many other ways, especially in achieving ingenious opportunities for titles, announcements and special trailers.

Screen Resurfacing

TO INSURE proper screen illumination without increasing power consumption or incurring the risk of glare, the screen surface should be kept as reflective as possible. In spite of regular cleaning routine, however, screens gradually get soiled, and in instances in which it is not felt that a new screen is warranted, one has recourse to resurfacing.

When the screen surface was solid, resurfacing presented only the problems represented by the necessity for uniform whiteness and proper reflection and diffusion. The sound screen, however, is perforated (except in rare instances in which the horns may be located elsewhere than behind the screen), and in resurfacing means must be employed to keep the perforations free of the new material. A vacuum cleaner has been used successfully for this purpose.

Exhibitors have used a flat white paint to resurface their screens. However, due to the greater necessity today for an immaculate screen, the practice of resurfacing is increasing, and as a result specific materials and expert methods are available. One of these materials is sprayed on, after the screen is washed, and is of such character that it does not clog the perforations, and that it restores to the screen a high reflective power. One of the characteristics cited in a resurfacing material now on the market is its penetrability, causing it to permeate the texture of the screen fabric, restoring its original tightness.

Shutters, Metal Fireproof

THE PORT SHUTTER is made entirely of metal with a metal sliding suspended on a cord in which is connected a fusible link. In case of fire, the fusible links melts and the fire shutter automatically drops over the port hole in the booth. They are made to fit standard openings, such as projection port holes, stereopticon port holes and spotlight port holes. Prices range from $9 to $25.

Signs, Directional

TAKE THE CASE of a patron who comes from the auditorium and asks for directions. If the theatre owner has had this experience he realizes the embarrassment and other inconvenience. The patron is paying his way into the theatre and he deserves every consideration. The modern theatre today is equipping itself with the directional sign. Every business building is doing likewise.

Signs may be considered in two general groups—those that are illuminated and those which are etched on metal or wood without illumination. The illuminated signs, which are highly artistic in finish and construction, are made to read either from one side or both. The lettering in the signs is chipped into the glass and silvered, making it easy to read in daylight. The letters glow in a soft greenish color. Illumination is accomplished with 25-watt showcase lamps. Signs are fitted with lamps, cord and plug ready for attaching to light socket.

Signs—Electric

MOTION PICTURE theatres are dealers in the use of electrical advertising, the usual electric signs at some of the metropolitan houses being the most elaborate of their kind. Since the sign must necessarily be made with consideration for the size of the theatre facade and facilities for anchoring it, the matter is usually given individual consideration, and sketches prepared for the specific building to which the sign is to be fastened.

Sound Equipment, Complete

MUSIC and sound reproducing devices are of two types, synchronous and non-synchronous. The latter use phonograph records, which are cued to the picture. The majority of these machines, which have from two to four discs for the records, are operated from the pit or other location in view of the screen. The synchronous type, however, is operated from the projection booth, employing disc records or film recordings made in conjunction with the picture

Among the developments in motion picture sound is the increase in the employment of the sound-on-film method of reproductoin. Experiment has eradicated many of the disadvantages of this method and increased its advantages.

Sound Equipment Accessories

ACCESSORIES for music and sound reproducing devices are many and varied. This comparatively new phase of the motion picture business has brought new demands upon the theatre. In the word "theatre" are included the exhibitor and the projectionist. These new phases of theatre operation must be studied, and included in the product necessary to operation of such equipment are: Pick-ups, motors, needle cups and covers, automatic stops, headsets, turntables, volume controls (rheostats), electric filter, amplifiers, (power packs), radio tubes, loud speaker units, speakers (magnetic or electro-dynamic), horns (exponential), rotometers, stroboscopic discs, cabinets and cabinet hardware. A well balanced set is imperative and for such a set there are equipment requirements which cannot be overlooked.

There has also been brought out a rectifying device for use with the exciter lamp on the projector. This device eliminates the use of batteries or rectifiers for supplying D. C. current to the filament of the lamp. It consists of a transformer, chokes and condensers, and uses Argon gas tubes for the rectifying unit.

Speakers and Horns

HORNS AND SPEAKERS used in sound installations are air columns with a belled outlet, or magnetic or electro-dynamic cones (in baffles or horns), used to project the sound waves created by the amplified electrical pulsations. They are attached to amplifiers and usually number two or more, depending on the size of the theatre.

Syncrofilm

SOUND EQUIPMENT

EXCLUSIVE with Syncrofilm is the optical system which throws four times the usual amount of light through the sound track. It has been widely, but never successfully, imitated. It places Syncrofilm in a class by itself. It brings out the smallest overtones at all frequencies, producing a naturalness of sound that is perfect.

There you have the cause of Syncrofilm's world-wide and growing reputation as a box-office producer. Every owner of Syncrofilm has been satisfied, and you know there's only one thing that satisfies a showman—good gate receipts. Every theatre that installed Syncrofilm immediately became a better earner. We guarantee that you will get your money back if you aren't satisfied.

Give Syncrofilm a tryout. Or ask us for the address of the nearest installation. Hear Syncrofilm deliver pure, true natural tone under actual working conditions. Talk with the owner. Apply any test you choose. We are not afraid. Name your projection machines by make and model. Let us tell you how little Syncrofilm costs.

Temperature Control Apparatus

TEMPERATURE control apparatus are devices for automatically controlling the temperature of the auditorium, organ chambers or any part of the theatre where a uniform heat must be maintained. In a control for an auditorium the device is a small thermostat, which actuates a valve on an air-line, which in turn operates the shutters in the air ducts. In the average size theatre several of these will be located at various places and each will operate independently of the other, thus relieving hot or cold spots in any one section. Controls for organ chambers turn on or off electric heaters and also work on the thermostatic principle.

Tickets are made for use with ticket issuing machines and are consecutively numbered. This enables accurate check of tickets sold for each day. Stock tickets may be obtained for 50 cents a roll. Specitl printed roll or center hole folded tickets range in price from $8 for 10,000 to $158 for a million. The admission price must be printed on each ticket, by order of the government.

Ticket Booths

KEEPING PACE with advancement in theatre design the box office has been developed from a rather unsightly necessity to a thing of beauty, modernly equipped for speedy and accurate sale of tickets. It is usually designed in harmony with the design of the theatre.

Ticket Choppers

A MACHINE FOR punching tickets dropped in box as patron enters theatre. The ticket chopper guards against the resale of tickets. Mutilation of the ticket consists of perforations made on the ticket, which, however, is done in a manner that does not prevent acurately checking results. Ticket choppers are made in several wood and metal finishes, and are operated by electricity, or hand and foot. Prices range from $75 to $250.

Upholstery Material

USE OF SOUND absorbing upholstering on theatre seats has come into popular demand since the advent of sound pictures. A popular fabric used in this connection is mohair, which combines beauty with important sound properties. Upholstering material of this nature may be obtained in a variety of colors and executed in interesting patterns and designs. It is claimed for this material that it will not fade, does not mat down, and can be kept fresh and clean with little effort. Use of mohair for upholstering is said to produce a marked elimination of reverberations in the theatre auditorium.

Usher Signal Systems

THE USHER SIGNAL SYSTEM provides a sending station at each aisle, equipped with numeral push buttons that give any total of seats that aisle might have. The usher registers on this station the number of vacant seats available, which information is transmitted to the floor or head usher, depending on the size of the theatre. In the larger houses the floor usher relays the information to the head usher. The head usher sends total of all aisles and floors to the doorman who directs the people to the different sections of the house where the vacant seats are waiting.

Ventilators

PROPER DISTRIBUTION of air in the theatre is an important feature of correct ventilation. One of the methods of achieving this is through the use of ventilators located in the auditorium floor. Air brought into the theatre is distributed in this manner to all parts of the house. Ventilators of this type which are generally known as mushroom ventilators, may be adjusted to permit the desired amount of air entering the auditorium.

PLANNING THE THEATRE

was established to give the theatre owner and manager practical advice in precisely those problems which have come to the front as a result of current efforts to end the worn-out, run-down condition that overtook thousands of theatre properties during the depression. Planning the Theatre is conducted by a licensed architect, Peter M. Hulsken, member of the American Institute of Architects, who has had extensive experience in designing motion picture theatres. Especially is he well versed in the types of theatres adapted to small towns and outlying sections of cities. He will give your inquiry his personal attention. Merely address it to

ACOUSTIC REQUIREMENTS FOR EXTENDED FREQUENCY REPRODUCTION

By J. E. VOLKMANN

Treatment of new equipment demands, explained by a member of the RCA Victor acoustics engineering service staff

WHAT IS extended frequency sound, and what are the general acoustic requirements imposed on the theatre equipped to reproduce such sound?

These are natural questions asked by theatre owner and exhibitor. The performance of the latest types of sound-reproducing equipments is a step closer to ideal or perfect sound reproduction and has been brought about by (1) an extended frequency range, (2) an extended volume range, (3) a reduction in distortion, and (4) to a limited degree, an improvement in "sound perspective"—that is, in the illusion of sound as originating at the screen.

These improvements in equipment result in a more faithful reproduction of the original sound, thereby enhancing the quality, naturalness and intelligibility of the sounds reproduced at the loudspeakers. To reproduce a faithful likeness of the original sound at the ear, of course, involves the acoustics of the theatre auditorium.

The acoustic requirements of the theatre equipped with "high fidelity sound" (or however it may be termed) are not radically different from those employed in the past. The same principles and precautions are observed as in all good room acoustic design. The requirements for good acoustics have been defined by the late Professor Wallace Clement Sabine, and in more recent years by Professor F. R. Watson. The following is quoted from Professor Sabine:

"In order that hearing may be good in any auditorium, it is necessary that the sound should be sufficiently loud, that the simultaneous components of a complex sound should maintain their proper relative intensities; and that the successive sounds in rapidly moving articulation, either of speech or music should be clear and distinct, free from each other and extraneous noises. These three are the necessary, as they are the entirely sufficient, conditions for good hearing."

These acoustic conditions hold for any auditorium, whether the sound therein is original or reproduced. However, to meet these conditions in the case of reproduced sound, a lower reverberation period (the time it takes for an ordinary sound to die out) is required than in the case of original sound, because the loudness upon which reverberation is dependent may be made greater for the reproduced sound in order to realize maximum intelligibility of speech.

It should here be pointed out that the naturalness and intelligibility of speech-sounds depend greatly on their loudness, and for this reason some sound reproducing equipments furnish a remote volume control which may be installed at a convenient observation point in the auditorium and which may be operated as required to give the optimum level and hence the greatest fidelity of sound.

LET US CONSIDER some of the most common acoustic defects, how they affect the acoustic conditions of auditoriums, their relation to high fidelity sound and methods of remedy and prevention. These acoustic defects are reverberation, echo, resonance, poor distribution (dead and loud spots), and noise.

REVERBERATION

Reverberation, which is the "hanging on" effect of the residual sound in the auditorium, depends directly on the size of the auditorium and loudness of sound, and inversely on the amount of sound absorption within the auditorium. If the reverberation period is too long, speech and music become blurred due to the overlapping of successive syllables and notes. For good acoustics the reverberation period should be short. This means the auditorium should contain sufficient sound-absorbing materials and not be any greater in size than necessary.

Experience indicates that the problem of reverberation, which ordinarily is the worst offender, is not seriously intensified in the case of high-fidelity reproduction, especially if directional loudspeakers are used which practically confine their radiation within the seating area. However, due to the extension of the low frequency range of the new reproducing equipments, greater precaution should be observed in choosing sound absorption materials and treatment which will efficiently absorb low frequencies. Most material companies and sound engineers today are prepared to make the necessary calculations on reverberation for a range of frequencies, instead of only for the pitch 512 (Middle C), which has been the custom in the past.

The choice of an efficient material will insure a proper frequency balance in the auditorium. Some materials, like hairfelt, have a selective absorption characteristic and absorb a particular range of frequencies better than others. The use of such materials in the past has often made it necessary to alter the response characteristics of the sound equipment with a resultant impairment in quality. The use of upholstered seats to minimize the change in reverberation due to changes in audience absorption is desirable.

Another factor which enters in, due to high frequency extension, is the absorption of sound by the air—the dryer the air the greater the absorption. Thus theatres with controlled humidity will give the greatest uniformity in performance. This factor would be most noticeable in reverberant auditoriums.

ECHO

Echo consists of a distinct repetition, sometimes several rapid repetitions, of the original sound. Echo is most often en- countered in large auditoriums, particularly those with large curved ceilings and walls or other surfaces which are sufficiently remote to cause a definite time interval between the original and reflected sounds. Echoes are very annoying and their effect, like reverberation, is to blur speech and music. A multiple or flutter echo (several distinct repetitions) is most often caused by parallel walls with smooth hard surfaces. Echo can be detected easily by making a sharp report, such as a "hand-clap." If a serious repetition of the report can be heard in any part of the seating areas when such a report is made on the stage, it would pay the exhibitor, in general, to have an investigation made by a competent engineer and the offending surfaces treated.

With the extension of the high frequency range, the problem of echo and sound concentration is somewhat intensified because the high frequencies or high-pitched notes are more easily reflected by small smooth surfaces on account of their small wave length.

However, the high frequency echoes from these small surfaces are highly localized and may be easily eliminated by the usual methods—that is, by means of very light drapes or other sound absorbing materials, or by coffering or otherwise breaking up the regularity of the offending surfaces, thereby dispersing or scattering the sound striking them.

Since directional loudspeakers are generally used with sound equipments, the offending surfaces causing echo are usually the rear walls and corners of the auditorium, or large projections from the ceiling and side walls, having a concave curvature or other shape, which tends to locally concentrate or direct the sound.

RESONANCE

The phenomena of resonance, or the ability to vibrate best at certain frequencies may occur in structures or in the air in rooms. Everyone, no doubt, at some time or other, has noticed the tendency of certain notes to be overemphasized in a powerfully resonant room, such as in a small tiled room or marble alcove.

Structural resonance usually is not harmful unless the resonant body is mechanically coupled close to the source of sound. For this reason, loudspeakers are suspended freely.

Resonance is sometimes a virtue; for example, the resonance of wood paneling in an auditorium is often a factor which improves the excellence of rooms, especially for music. But this appears to be because the resonance does not occur at any one frequency, but rather over many different frequencies—that is, the individual panels have many resonance frequencies and do not all tune to the same fundamental resonance frequency. Again, the virtue of a resonant floor under an orchestra is well recognized.

Resonance in air chambers such as the rear orchestra section under a balcony, alcoves, foyers, and even the auditorium itself, does not occur very often unless

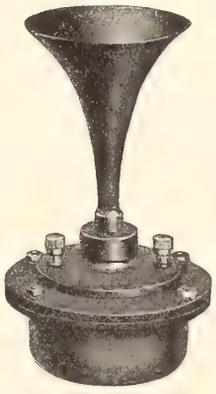
BROAD-BAND

Announcing the first of a new line of RACON receivers designed to cover the broad audio spectrum, from 30 to 12,000 cycles.



Illustrated: DYNAMIC HIGH-FREQUENCY LOUDSPEAKER. An efficient and precision-built unit. Will reproduce faithfully all components present in the source from 3000 to 12,000 cycles, uniformly, without peakiness, shrillness or over-accentuation. This unit is not a modification of a low-frequency unit nor is it intended to introduce "psychological highs" that are not present in the source. It is a true high-frequency loudspeaker.
Supplied with horn, in one assembly, as shown. May be used in conjunction with a suitable low-frequency speaker of either the horn or cone type and the RACON Filter Network, which divides transmission at 3000 cycles for wide-range, high fidelity reproduction. Six volt or 110 volt field. 15 ohm voice coil impedance. Weight 3 lbs. Also available special tube rectifier field exciter for one or two units.

such chambers are bare of furnishings and have hard reflecting surfaces (usually parallel). To eliminate such resonance conditions on the stage, as well as to help reduce reverberation on the stage and the transmission of sound from stage to auditorium, absorbing material should be draped in the region around the loudspeakers.

POOR DISTRIBUTION

With the exception of the high-frequency sound concentrations already discussed, poor distribution of sound, the loud and dead spots due to the shape of an auditorium) can in most, though not all cases, be overcome by directional loudspeakers.

In those theatres which present stage shows as well as sound movies, the problem of poor distribution and inadequate loudness in remote seating areas can be solved, in general, only by sound re-enforcement. Suitable sound re-enforcement equipment of true naturalness is available today which increases the scope of musician and stage artist, thus delivering their joy and harmony to all the audience. The same acoustic conditions should obtain in the auditorium for sound re-enforcement equipment as for reproducing equipment.

NOISE

Noise may be defined as those sounds which are unpleasant and annoying—either of foreign origin or otherwise. Noise is undesirable, not only because it detracts from the enjoyment of the entertainment offered, but because it has a masking and a frequency discrimination effect on the desirable sounds which, therefore, require added loudness (or power) and even changed frequency characteristics to override the noise. Loud noises may also seriously limit the usable volume range of sound, thereby preventing a full realization of naturalness.

A theatre with good acoustics has its walls insulated against the transmission of outside noises into the auditorium. The transmission of sound is of two kinds—(a) aerial, and (b) structural. Small openings due to doors, windows, port holes, etc., transmit sound to a great degree. Thus, all the joints between walls, doors, windows, etc., should be made as air-tight as possible.

Transmission of sound through structures, such as the noise from vibrating motors and machinery, can be minimized by using (1) massive walls and floors, and (2) by separating all vibrating bodies from their supporting structures with sound insulating materials, such as cork, lead, and rubber.

Massive walls are not always necessary to obtain sufficient sound insulation. A double wall of fairly light construction will give good sound insulation provided the two walls are not closely coupled mechanically by nails or cross members—that is, provided the walls are kept insulated or separated from each other.

The absorption treatment of the walls and ceiling inside the projection room, which has heretofore been neglected, is very desirable. Such treatment would result in the (a) reduction of noise in the booth, (b) reduction of noise transmitted to auditorium, (c) increased efficiency of those working in the booth, and (d) possibility of better control of the volume by the projectionist because of the improved hearing conditions in the projection room.

THE FOLLOWING recommendations on the acoustic treatment, which will give the theatre owner or exhibitor the best performance from his sound equipment, are offered merely as a guide. The services of a qualified engineer should be relied upon for the exact specifications relative to the proper type, amount and location of absorbing material, size and shape of auditorium, and type and amount of sound insulation.

GUIDE TO REMEDIES

(1) All chairs should be of the heavily upholstered type.

(2) Heavily padded carpeting should be used in all aisles and corridors.

(3) The rear wall should be diffusively reflective (coffered) or lined with an efficient type of sound-absorbing material.

(4) Curved surfaces should be avoided as much as possible. If employed they should be coffered or treated with sound-absorbing material and their radii of curvature should be as great as possible.

(5) Large unbroken surface areas, except when used for beneficial reflection, such as reflection from the splayed ceiling and walls at the proscenium, should be avoided.

(6) Long narrow auditorium, high ceilings, and excessively long and low balcony overhangs, should be avoided.

(7) The cubical content of the auditorium should be made as small as possible, compatible with the seating capacity and architectural design.

(8) A rising slope in the orchestra floor should be used to give unobstructed "sound" lines as well as "sight" lines.

(9) All auditorium walls should be treated with sufficient sound insulation to avoid the transmission of outside noises into the auditorium.

(10) The projection room should be lined with absorbing material and its walls sound insulated.

(11) All machinery and ventilating noises should be isolated from the auditorium.

The foregoing treatment will, in most cases, be sufficient for small-sized auditoriums of the balcony type.

Small-sized auditoriums of the single-floor type, and moderate-sized auditoriums of the balcony type, in general, will require acoustic treatment of the side walls with sound-absorbing material of a moderate absorption coefficient.

Moderate-sized single-floor houses and large size balcony houses, in general, will require side wall treatment with a highly efficient absorbing material.

Auditoriums larger than these should have acoustic treatment at ceiling too.

MAKE YOUR EQUIPMENT FIT; YOUR BUSINESS DEMANDS IT

DURING THE LAST couple of years of our very depressed depression, many thousands of exhibitors were compelled to trim overhead expense to the bone, avoiding every purchase that did not seem to them absolutely necessary. We all knew that and felt inclined to place small blame for it, so long as no injury be worked upon the bone itself. But there lies the difficulty, for many did cut not only to the bone, but into the sustaining structure itself by permitting their projection equipment not only to get more or less out-of-date, but also to fall into varying stages of disrepair, which unfortunate state of affairs is right now present in very many theatres.

You, I, and everyone else now recognize the fact that when projection equipment is not kept right up-to-date, especially unless it be kept in as nearly as possible a perfect state of repair, both visual effects and sound are in the very nature of things going to suffer. Neither will have the perfection or the snap and pep it might and should have. The entertainment and amusement values contained in the films cannot and will not be placed before audiences at their full values. That being true, it means that your out-of-repair equipment cannot be made to produce results that will bring you the patronage you should and might have. It means loss at your box office.

In considering this matter, do not forget that when a patron leaves your theatre he or she will feel like coming again and soon, exactly in proportion to how excellent he or she has found the entertainment to be. That is sound reasoning, is it not? Suppose you have some outstanding production. The films contain a mixture of strong appeals capable of pleasing your audiences immensely, sending them home in a satisfied frame of mind that makes them patrons of the motion picture and friends of your theatre.

The films, let us say, contain that possibility, but unfortunately you have permitted the light source apparatus to get into bad condition, so that the projectionist finds it impossible to keep shadows off the screen, or a carbon breaks, stopping the show, of course, because of the roughened, pitted carbon jaw contacts, which should have been but were not replaced by new ones. The projector mechanism gears and shaft bearings are worn so that the shutter has back-lash, setting up faint travel ghost and thus making the eyes of patrons uncomfortable. The intermittent sprocket is worn so that the picture is not quite steady. The old batteries are weak or (and) the exciter lamp filament is not quite straight.

Any one of a dozen possible other things may not be in the pink of condition, so that the sound is unsatisfactory, and possibly rather terrible. Do your patrons then go forth with as keen a desire to return as they would had your projectionist been able to place before them a picture projected as it was intended to be?

Praise be, conditions are now generally admitted to be decidedly on the up-grade. How steep that grade will be and therefore how fast we will be able to climb out of the hole will largely depend upon the speed with which business is created by buying and buying now. It takes a certain amount of faith to dig in and spend out of our shrunken money bags, but if the spending seems likely to help us individually in one or more ways, surely it would be rather stupid not to do it.

Buying now will help every exhibitor in two ways. First of all, the replacement of out-of-date projection equipment, or the putting of present out-of-repair equipment in proper operating condition, will certainly enable the projectionist to present a better show, and certainly better shows are what will bring the public to the box office. Secondly, buying equipment or equipment parts now helps business in general and the country as a whole. Take inventory, see just what is needed, then be NRA—buy now to make your theatre fit for the job it has got to do!

DISTORTION PROBLEM

W. M. RUSSEL of the Southern Coal and Coke Company of Boothton, Ala., has a troublesome problem which he describes as follows:

"Have kept up closely with your department in BETTER THEATRES for a number of years while operating a silent film theatre for the Welfare Department of the company. I am at present expecting to install sound pictures, as we are unable to get the silent product. Have been closed on that account.

"Am up against the proposition of enlarging the projection room, which heretofore has had to accommodate only one projector. The room is in the center of the balcony, where we accommodate our colored men and their families. Behind the projection room is waste space which we need badly, as fully 65% of our attendance will be colored.

"It has occurred to me that a better arrangement could be had by moving the projection room over against the left wall, where we could make it 10 x 10 feet in dimensions. This would, however, throw the projectors, possibly, 10 to 12 feet off center with screen. As against this we could give it ample ventilation, and would have the center space for seating. A larger projection room where the one now is, is impossible.

"Our theatre is not a commercial one. It is run wholly for the benefit of employees of the Southern Coal and Coke Company.

We know very little about such matters and need your help."

Were you to move the projection room as suggested and project to a centrally located screen you would get heavy side distortion. You have not advised me as to how many feet above the screen your lens now is, but whatever it may be, it would add vertical distortion to side distortion. It would be very much better to move the screen itself over to the left wall if you move the projection room.

The plan you sketched is not very complete. You have not told me what the width of your picture is (and in considering such a matter that point is of importance), or why it is not possible to hang the projection room from the ceiling against the rear wall, leaving room under it for seats. The latter is not a thing I would commend, as it increases the projection angle, hence vertical distortion, but that it is far better than a mixture of vertical and horizontal distortion. A still better scheme (assuming it to be practicable) would be to locate the projection room outside the rear auditorium wall. If there is an adjoining building the necessary space for it might be arranged.

If the above plan is impracticable, however, then why not do this: Run the balcony aisle straight back to the rear wall. If, as seems likely, it runs to an exit, then run a cross aisle along the rear wall from the aisle to the door and locate the projection room with its back wall against this cross aisle. That would give you a longer projection distance and thus reduce the distortion. Then move the screen over as far as the stage will permit to the left —not to exceed 10 feet, however.

This screen arrangement would at first seem a bit strange, but as soon as you had run a few shows and your people had got accustomed to it, I do not think they would mind it at all. The lengthened projection distance and screen location, plus the fact that a 10- or, at most a 12-foot wide picture would be sufficient in your theatre, would appreciably minimize the distortion. In addition you could get an aperture plate from the manufacturer of your projector, and file it to make the side and bottom and top parallel on the screen.

ILLUMINATION AT THE SCREEN

R. V. KING, house manager of the Latonia theatre in Oil City, Pa., shows a spirit of true co-operation in the following letter:

"Our local power company is demonstrating to its large customers the value of various light bulbs and lighting systems. Their equipment consists of a wattmeter, a Weston photronic foot-candle meter, and various bulbs, etc. Their demonstrator here is a young college graduate and very well informed. After his regular demonstration be asked permission to look over the equipment, and of course I was very glad to show him. It is not too often that the fellows who make the wheels go 'round get much attention. After his inspection he offered the use of his equipment for any purpose, and we accepted his offer.

"After further discussion we decided to check the screen illumination, and I am sending you a copy of the results. The tests were made at the surface of the screen with the projector running without film. We were not certain as to the procedure you follow in your tests, and so selected this as the most convenient method. Both machines were tested, and the enclosed figures are the average. The machines compare very favorably.

Tabulation of Mr. R. V. King's screen illumination measurements.

"Taking the amount of light reflected toward the center of the house as 100%, the seats at the side of the house get about 96%.

"The machines are Motiograph DeLuxe on Western Electric bases. Peerless lamps drawing 65 amperes. Throw 128 feet, projection angle 18 degrees. Screen is perforated and was coated with Artone Nu-Life about eight months ago. Needs it again.

"Incidentally I checked the machines for speed by letting the light on the screen from both machines at once while running up to speed. I was rewarded with a flicker which appeared and disappeared about every two seconds, thus showing the machines to be very closely synchronized."

The screen illumination is remarkably even, evidence of two things: (a) all of the beam from the projector aperture is entering the projection lens, and (b) the optical train is composed of the right elements, which are correctly adjusted with relation to each other.

GLASS THAT REFLECTS HEAT

ORVAL E. SELLERS of the Hower Trade School in Akron, Ohio, writes, "Although I have read your columns since the beginning of their publication, and have your Bluebooks, I have never before had to ask questions. Your material is written in such plain, easy-to-understand fashion that it may always be assimilated without necessity for questions.

"I am stumped now, however. In our school system we have about 50 Acme portable 35-mm. silent projectors. In front of the aperture of each is a gold glass screen that automatically rises out of the way when the projection speed reaches almost normal. Its purpose is to permit stopping the projector at any desired point, keeping any particular scene upon the screen indefinitely for the purpose of lecturing upon it. It in fact takes the heat out of the light. Now here is my question:

"What is in the glass that is different from other types of glass? Is it only the royalty that causes its high price for this small bit of glass—$10 for a piece 1.5 inches in diameter? Why cannot it be made colorless, instead of tinted yellow? Where may I obtain information concerning this glass?"

The International Projector Corporation has the exclusive right to manufacture this product in the United States and Canada. The process of manufacture is well covered by patents and the license fee is pretty stiff. That, of couse, adds very materially to the cost.

The material used is pure gold. The process of incorporating the gold in the glass is very intricate, resulting in many rejections. It is applied to heat-resisting glass in a vacuum, by means of a high frequency ionic bombardment. After the gold is applied, galvonometer tests are made to determine the efficiency of each piece of finished product, all of which tends to make the manufacture of it expensive.

The heat is neither absorbed nor dissipated. The glass and its gold coating actually reflect back the heat rays, or a very high percentage of them, at the same time passing a high percentage of the light rays. Screens have been made that reflected back as high as 95% of the heat rays, passing well over 50% of the light. They may be made to take care of any heat-light problem.

I am indebted to Herbert Griffin of the International Projector Corporation, for this very lucid explanation of the matter.

TWO METHODS THAT SAVED

L. VANBUSKIRK and E. Kroll, projectionists of the Maltz theatre in Alpena, Mich., thus describe two stunts they have discovered:

"Speaking of W. E. sound equipment and the 110-volt a.c. snap switches on panels of the 42A and 43A amplifiers, it may be found that after a period of time they will cease to shut with a 'snap,' instead sliding into contact when they are turned on. This is caused by dirt and dry switch contacts. Under this condition the contact is not as good as it should be. We have known cases where the switches were discarded and new ones installed, which was wholly unnecessary and represents waste, unless it is found some part of the switch is broken or burned. If inspection shows the switch to be all right except for lack of 'snap,' remove its cover and, using a toothpick as a 'brush,' rub a little vaseline on the contacts, whereupon in all human probability the switch will work just as well as ever. Such lubrication will last a long while."

May I bust in to say that unless the switch blade be smooth, it would be well (provided you can get to it) to polish its surfaces with 00 sandpaper.

"And now another thing: Our sound installation includes 12 Type-13 EPG Philco glass batteries. After three years of use the space beneath the plates was filling up with sediment. In fact, so much was this the case that at the sides it was touching the plates, which soon would produce a short. Not believing the life of the batteries was finished, we concluded to try an experiment.

"Disconnecting them we lifted each jar out of the rack, set it on a suitable pillow to prevent jar, and rocked it back and forth several times, afterward replacing it in the rack.

"We found the sediment settled down to about one-half its former depth. The battery works just as well as ever. We believe this to be a good stunt and advise other projectionists to follow suit when the sediment gets too high in their batteries. We believe we have prolonged the life of the batteries by possibly two years."

You were quite correct in assuming that the sediment touching the battery plates would produce a short, and that such short would ruin the battery cell. Your experiment was 100% okay, though I doubt if you have prolonged the battery life quite as much as you think.

RADIO CITY PROJECTION

RECENTLY THROUGH courtesy of S. L. Rothafel (Roxy), friend daughter and I visited Radio City Music Hall. Arriving at approximately 1.30 p.m., we found every seat in the huge 6,000-seat theatre filled. While waiting for seats we paid a visit to the projection domain and there met and talked with Charles F. Horstman, supervisor of Projection for RKO.

The projection work was excellent all the way through. They are projecting a Magnascope picture measuring 46 feet wide by 35 feet, 5 inches high. It is not only well illuminated, but also, so far as we were able to judge, as sharp as the average screen image clear out to its corners. I congratulate Supervisor Horstman and his associates.

The projection lens is a 3.25 inches. E. F. Cooke Apermax, handled by the Bell and Howell Company. Its "F" value (relation of free diameter to focal length) is 1.9. The projection distance is 190 feet.

The projector aperture is of standard dimensions (.825x600 inches), yet they are using 180 amperes d.c. at 85 arc voltage. The positive carbon is 13.6 Sun Studio. How it was possible to get so much light through such an aperture puzzled me. It seemed the light source would be so large that to concentrate it at the aperture in a spot of standard dimensions would be impossible. I took this matter up with Supervisor Horstman and learned something I did not know.

It seems that the Sun Studio carbon of the kind used has a very hard exterior shell containing a high percentage of graphite to increase carrying capacity. This results in a deep crater with slow burning walls, which retains the high intensity gas ball while the high amperage is concentrated on it, and by reason of the chemicals contained in its gasses the high current density actually does increase the brilliancy of the light source (gas ball) per unit area above—how much above I was unable to ascertain—that of the ordinary high intensity light source.

WHERE IT'S CHILLY AT 90 IN THE SHADE

IN A LETTER from K. Prouse Knox of the Fox Film Corporation, Ltd., Calcutta, India, the following occurs:

"I note you have been having Indian weather in the Big City, but brother, you only had a spell of it, whereas if the temperature drops below 90° here we put mufflers on. Frequently we have it 120 in the shade—only there is no shade. Anyhow I guess that licks your little spasm of 141 in the sun in Central Park. Anyhow, to be in Central Park instead of Calcutta I frequently feel that 150 would not be too much to take in punishment."

SOUND HELPED BY EXCITER CHANGE

LLOYD PEARSON, exhibitor of Petersburg, Ill., has tried an experiment with beneficial results. He writes:

"Dear Mr. Richardson: Recently I was in receipt of a circular from a lamp company offering a different type of exciter lamp, among which was one of 10 volts, 5 amperes capacity.

"Now I have an all-electric equipment, using eliminators. The exciter is 10-volt and supplies as high as 10 amperes. Until a few days ago I was using a 10-volt, 7.5-ampere exciter lamp. I got one of the offered 10-volt, 5-ampere lamps and was much gratified at the improved results. The volume was increased two points on the fader, and I have better sound than before.

"I then installed the 10-volt, 5-ampere lamp in a De Forest equipment, which, as you know, recommends only a 10-volt, 7.5-ampere lamp, with equally fine results. In the case of an old battery outfit there would, of course, be less drain on the battery and at the same time improved results in sound. If you think this bit of information will be of benefit to any exhibitor, please pass it along."

I pass this along without comment, save to thank Friend Pearson for telling us.

NON-INFLAMMABLE SCREEN COATINGS

WHILE THIS writer regards the demand for flame-proofing of screens (other than those coated with a highly inflammable substance such as celluloid) as rank nonsense, save only where such screens are to be used on a stage on which plays or vaudeville acts are shown and therefore much scenery used, still it is demanded, and so long as the demand continues it must be adhered to. It has been reported that certain screen manufacturers are supplying alleged flame-proof samples of screens which it is proposed to install, and that later, in some cases at least, such screens have proved not to be in any degree flame-proof.

If the charges are true such a practice is indeed reprehensible. Should a fire occur and the screen burn, then automatically all insurance would be voided.

I would suggest that the "non-flam" requirement be curtailed to include only (a) screens used upon stages, and (b) screens having a highly inflammable coating. I would further suggest that authorities who demand the installation of flame-proof screens require that screens to be installed within their jurisdiction have at least one strip of the material extend three inches beyond the edge of the screen proper, to the end that that portion of the actual screen may be tested.

of floor to be cleaned by means of a rubber squeegee. The use of an 18- or 20-inch squeegee permits the rapid transfer of this paste on to the adjoining section of floor to be cleaned and leaves very little material behind to be removed by rinsing. Now use another mop and clean water, rinse the floor with clean water; then with the mop wrung dry, go over the floor, picking up remaining detergent, soap and water. Continue this rinsing until the floor is clean, free from dirt and any remaining detergent and soap film.

The same process is followed on that area of floor that received the cleaning paste from the first section. Small amounts of cleaning powder are added from time to time as needed or necessary to replace that quantity left on the floor by the squeegee.

The mop used in the rinsing process should be kept specially for that purpose, and the rinsing water should be changed frequently.

It follows that by these successive steps in cleaning a floor that a minimum of material is used. Just enough water is added from time to time to keep the paste fluid and working easily under the mop or brush.

If the size of the floor to be mopped is substantial, it will be much more economical to have a crew of two men work on this cleaning program. Number 1 janitor sweeps the floor, then just as soon as he has sufficiently swept, number 2 janitor starts the wetting and mopping process. Then number 1 janitor starts with the clean mop and water on the rinsing process and completes the final part of the cleaning program.

THE CLEANING OF CARPETS

PARTICULARLY since the advent of talking pictures, carpets have become a common maintenance problem to practically all theatres. The installation of carpet represents a substantial investment in money, and any care or maintenance that can prolong the life of carpet is very much worth while.

Probably the most important factor in determining the life of carpet, next to the selection of the right quality initially to be laid in the theatre, is the daily cleaning that is given the carpet.

From the theatre manager's standpoint, the most satisfactory method to clean carpet is by vacuum. Brushing or sweeping with a corn broom is not desirable. If a broom must be used, don't permit the carpets to be swept hard with a digging motion of the broom; insist that it be swept lightly in the direction of the pile. Such sweeping causes the broom straws to split and form miniature barbs, which are very sharp. These barbs catch in the threads of the carpet. By breaking this surface yarn of the carpet the corn broom materially damages the carpet.

If because of lack of equipment the carpet must be swept with a corn broom, it should be done carefully. To remove the dirt and grit that has worked into the carpet, it is good practice to resort to the use of the old-fashioned wire or wicker carpet beater. By beating the carpet lightly —not hard enough to raise a cloud of dust—with the beater, much of the grit and dirt is brought to the surface. It can then be removed by light sweeping.

A good make of carpet sweeper (large size) is a great help in caring for carpets. Its frequent use removes surface dirt very satisfactorily. Unless a carpet sweeper is used frequently it accomplishes very little, as it cannot remove dirt imbedded in a carpet.

A good vacuum cleaner is a worthy investment if there is a reasonable quantity of carpet installed in the theatre. The vacuum cleaner should be used daily on all aisles, foyers and stepping where traffic during the day has justified the cleaning.

Unless the accumulation of grit and dirt is removed from the carpet, continual traffic on the carpet will work the grit and dirt down through the pile to the back of the carpet. Continued traffic then causes the gritty substances to cut the threads and in that way the wearing out process is hastened.

New carpets of the pile variety will shed sometimes for several months after they have been laid. This is not of great importance and does not generally indicate any defect in the manufacture of the carpet. This shedding is caused by the many short fibres that remain in the tufts of the carpet after it was clipped to give its tufts a uniform height and thereby a smoother and more regular appearance.

In smaller theatres, where the units of carpet are not excessively large, and where the expense of labor to remove the carpet and restretch it and lay it again is not prohibitive, it is recommended as good practice to have it cleaned by a reputable cleaning establishment—if possible, once each year. Up to the present time there is no process for cleaning the carpet without removing it from the floor that can be generally recommended.

Grease spots rot the fabric of carpets, therefore grease spots should be removed immediately. Such spots usually occur about doors and result from carelessness while lubricating door checks, door check arms and hinges. If these spots are taken care of immediately they can generally be removed with carbon tetrachloride. This should be applied with a soft, clean cloth. Take up the grease or oil as it is dissolved with a very absorbent, clean cloth, or a clean blotter.

Small, dirty spots (not grease or oil), such as chocolate or candy, may be removed by sponging with warm water and a neutral soap suds. Care must be taken to continue to rinse with clean, warm water until all soap is removed. Use as little water as possible; do not saturate the carpet.

All carpet, regardless of quality, should be laid on padding at least one-quarter inch thick. Generally one-half inch is much more satisfactory.

Chewing gum must be removed from carpets daily. Most of the commercial chemical cleaner companies manufacture a solvent for chewing gum. Some such fluid should be procured. The easiest way to remove gum spots from carpets is to put some of the gum solvent fluid in a good-sized clean oil squirt can. The janitor then takes this can and goes over the carpet putting a few drops around the edge of each gum spot. After he has covered all the spots, the discs of gum may literally be picked up off the carpet with the aid of a dull putty knife or a round-nosed knife similar to a table knife.

INSTRUCTING THE JANITORS

IN CONCLUDING, experience has definitely shown that the average run of janitors do not take the painstaking care as outlined here. Janitor forces must have definite instructions and explanations of the processes and systems required in caring for a theatre. Some times this reaches them through a very intelligent chief janitor, who takes his responsibilities seriously, but it is to be expected that it should come from the manager.

There is nothing that impresses a worker so much as to have the "boss" interested in his work and know what he is doing. The results to be accomplished by a word or a criticism from the manager cannot be replaced by the most careful supervision of any other employee of the theatre.

The manager is the guiding force, the motivating energy for the entire theatre. His personality soon becomes the personality of the theatre. As manager, don't delegate too much authority.

Run your theatre with your brains, your energy and your showmanship; don't feel or be above the humblest detail necessary in the operation of your theatre.

Postponed

On account of space conditions enforced by the equipment requirements of a Buyers Number, the fourth article in the series, "Constructing Theatre Advertising," has been postponed until the November 18th issue of BETTER THEATRES. The article is the first dealing directly with layout and involves a large amount of illustrative material. Also because of space conditions, it has been necessary to omit an editorial cross-index to previous issues.

ing into high-frequency units. In this class of installation the combination consists of two dynamic type units and high-frequency unit, all mounted on an 8 x 11-foot flat baffle. The baffle is mounted so that center line of the two low-frequency units is approximately two-thirds of the picture height in order to obtain the proper illusion.

AIR CONDITIONING

Ventilation and temperature control in the Midtown is effected by means of a blower system forcing fresh air from points on both sides of the forward wall, with sufficient pressure to pull the air back over the heads of patrons, the air descending to the breathing zone and being drawn off at the floor. In winter the heated air is introduced through grilles. The lobby is heated by a unit heater.

ACOUSTICS

The rear portion of the ceiling, and the rear wall of the auditorium are surfaced with acoustic plaster. In addition, the chairs are fully upholstered, and the aisles are carpeted.

Auditorium illumination is semi-indirect, with three-color effects on a dimmer system. The exterior is floodlighted at night from projectors located on the roof of the marquee.

DESIGN

The entire theatre is of modern design. The facade is modernistic, employing metal and luminants in a pattern of geometric harmonies (see accompanying pictures). The terra cotta facing of the facade is in pearl, red and black, with decorative figures of terra cotta 9 feet high, embellished with aluminum. The marquee is done in red and black with polished steel embellishments and neon lighting effects, the latter especially entering into the luminous pattern at night. The soffit of the marquee is also decoratively treated with neon lighting. The base of the building is of black marble.

The vestibule walls are done in Formica with horizontal band effects. The base is of black marble, while the ceiling is tinted and trimmed in aluminum.

The lobby walls are of wood with aluminum bands. The ceiling is done in plaster and formed to receive indirect lighting sources extending almost the full length of the room. The floor is carpeted in vivid colors, and furniture has been added in the same spirit.

On either side of the lobby are stairs leading to a mezzanine level which admits patrons to the auditorium. That portion of the lobby between the stairs leads to the area beneath the stadium used for the manager's office, apparel room and space for unit heaters and blowers. The lounge and retiring rooms are located on the mezzanine level.

The mezzanine lounge is treated in Salubra wall covering of modern design, colored in cream, black and silver. The ceiling is finished in a painted red and silver pattern. The floor is covered with carpeting of the same design as that used throughout the theatre.

The auditorium is decoratively simple in a scheme of modern elements. The colors consist in various shades of blue-green, dark blues and silvers. The entire wainscoting is of deep blue leather capped with aluminum bands. At the side walls the lighting fixtures have been made a part of the entire decorative plan (see accompanying pictures). The chairs have seats of blue leather and backs of blue-green mohair. The end standards are etched in a pattern of modern design and finished in blue and silver.

Air Conditioning—and Management

ment in a theatre, and no exhaust fans and no gravity vents through which delivered air can escape, and little uncontrolled leakage from the auditorium, air distribution becomes a very difficult and serious problem. Fans used in theatres are not generally designed to work against much pressure. Under such conditions a pressure equal to that of the fan would be built up inside the auditorium and the fan would only labor against its own created pressure, thereby accomplishing practically nothing from a ventilation standpoint. There are such installations, and many times conditions can be materially improved, by opening aisle doors at the rear of the auditorium, or an emergency exit door in the top of the balcony.

Theatre managers must get all the results possible out of their equipment. An understanding of ventilation and air condition will enable them to do this. A theatre manager must have some means of positively determining whether or not that which has been done has improved the condition. An understanding of the charts covered in this series provides that measure of results.

Finally, your recommendations for improvements to the ventilating system must be based upon conditions that now exist. Conditions as they now exist can only be determined by the collecting and analyzing of data. With such data and with an understanding of the basic principles involved you will be able to assure proper changes being made or proper equipment installed.

The full appreciation on your part of the value of ventilation at the box office, and your efforts to understand the whys and wherefores of it means that you are developing towards that complete theatre manager that is some day going to be recognized as indispensable to our branch of the motion picture industry.—J. T. KNIGHT, JR.

[The above was prepared by Mr. Knight to supplement his explanations of the air conditioning and ventilation factors represented by and involved in the series of four charts presented through the courtesy of the publication, Heating & Ventilating, and the American Society of Heating & Ventilating Engineers, and adapted by Mr. Knight to the purposes of the motion picture theatre.—THE EDITOR.]

(1) Classification of the public into groups (large enough to be reckoned with both by the circuit management as well as by motion picture producers) of a more or less common conception of entertainment.

(2) To find the correlation of these groups to each other.

(3) To weight approximately the contributions of the respective groups to the box office.

(4) To measure the average number of attendances of different groups as contrasted with the approximate contributions to the box office. (In other words, some people, while willing and able to spend 25c to 50c at a neighborhood theatre, will seldom attend an expensive first-run house.)

(5) To follow the ups and downs in attendance from the various strata of the public in response to changes of economic conditions.

(6) If possible (a rather difficult task) to determine the entertainment potential purchasing power of the various groups.

(7) To mark out theatres whose publics (a) belong to equivalent social strata, and (b) have similar conceptions of entertainment expressed in terms of box office figures.

(8) To measure the average seasonal fluctuations of attendance and gross receipts.

(9) To mark the sections and communities of the country which contribute as an average most heavily to the box office receipts.

(10) To weight by comparison (a) the business value of individual theatres, and (b) the comparative efficiency of their managements.

The analysis completed, theatres whose publics have similar cultural and educational levels, or similar social backgrounds; i.e., theatres whose publics have common amusement standards, would be drawn into common administrative units. Independent executive bodies would be placed at the head of each theatre group. They would select the programs and map out the exploitation policy for all theatres within each group.

The study lists certain objections that might be raised, which, however, would tend to be overcome or balanced by the several values of the so-called horizontal system of circuit organization. These advantages are stated or implied as follows:

The object of such a system of circuit administration would be to equalize the standards of entertainment for all theatres within each group. This would be possible as each theatre within a group would cater to patrons possessing similar standards of amusement. This in turn, it should be obvious, would greatly simplify the task of the administrators. With a definite knowledge of the background and daily life of the public in all the theatres of the group, the group management would have clearly in mind the type of programs each house (and consequently the total group) requires. Of course, small differences would still exist, but they would be of relatively minor importance and would require little attention.

The efficiency of this type of theatre administration would be further enhanced by the elasticity of this system. Thus, an exceptionally capable showman as group manager, by having definite knowledge of the type of public in the theatres of his group, could extend his talent as effectively from his distant office as if he were at the head of each theatre in person.

This system would also facilitate the task of central headquarters in defining the qualities (and possible limitations) required of a man for the position of a theatre executive. Knowing precisely the type of background of the public in each theatre group, they would select a man whose mental equipment and personality would correspond exactly with the average of the patrons of the group for which he is considered. Certainly such differentiation are being made now, but as the headquarters can have at present no precise knowledge of the variations of the types of audiences in different theatres (each district or territory dealing, besides, with several strata of the population), they cannot have a clear-cut idea of the type of man required for the respective houses.

vides that only residences shall be constructed therein.

Generally speaking, in order that a theatre may be operated in a zone in which theatres are not permitted, it is necessary that the intended operators of the theatre shall receive proper authority from the city council by enaction of a new ordinance rezoning the district in which the theatre is to be constructed.

CASE

For illustration, in Morris v. Lunsford (167 S. E. 297, Atlanta, Ga.), it was shown that the city council refused to pass a new ordinance rezoning a specified district. However, the building inspector, on the advice of the city attorney, granted a building permit to a company to erect its business building at the selected location. Certain property owners within the district filed suit and asked the court to grant an injunction against construction of the building. In granting this injunction, the court said:

DECISION

"In the present state of the record, we are of the opinion that the Court erred in refusing an injunction. When the building inspector refused to grant a permit to build the structure, and this refusal on appeal was affirmed by the board of zoning appeals, and the property had not been zoned, the building inspector could not issue a permit, with the conditions remaining the same."

LIABILITY FOR RENTAL

CONTRARY TO THE opinion of the majority of persons, a theatre owner may be liable for failure to pay an agreed rental, although the landlord breaches a contract to perform certain repair work on the theatre building.

CASE

For instance, in Community Theatres v. Weilbacher (57 S. W. [2d] 941, San Antonio, Tex.), it was shown that a theatre operator leased from a landlord a theatre building and agreed to pay $300 per month in advance. Also, the landlord agreed to keep the building in good repair. When the theatre operator failed to pay the rent in accordance with the contract the landlord filed suit to collect the amount due. The theatre operator contended that he was not required to pay the rent for the reason that the landlord had failed to fulfill his agreement to maintain the building in repair. However, the higher court held the theatre operator liable for the rental, and said:

DECISION

"The defenses set up by the appellant (theatre operator) were wholly immaterial, as the covenant to pay rent on the part of appellant and the covenant to repair on the part of appellee (landlord) were independent covenants, and the defendant (theatre operator) could not defeat the plaintiff's suit for rent by merely showing that plaintiff had not kept the premises in good condition. . . . Accordingly, the breach by the landlord of his covenant (if there was any) does not justify the refusal of the tenant to perform his covenant to pay rent."

However, it is well settled that any person who breaches a valid contract is liable in damages for such breach. Therefore, the theatre operator had the legal right to file suit and collect from the landlord an amount of money equal to the damages sustained as a result of the landlord's failure to fulfill his obligation to keep the theatre in good repair.

AUTHORITY OF GENERAL MANAGER

THE LEGAL question often has arisen whether or not a theatre corporation is liable on contracts made by its general manager without direct authority of the Board of Directors. It is important to know that the courts have held that where the power of a general manager is not limited, he has implied authority to bind the corporation by contracts made in good faith and within the scope of the corporation's business.

CASE

For example, in Warren v. Littleton (168 S. E. 226, North Carolina), it was disclosed that a man named Carter, who was general manager of a corporation, entered into a contract for the purchase of real estate to be used by the corporation. The contract was signed as follows:

"Signed: N. W. Warren.
"Signed: Littleton Co.
"By C. E. Carter.
"Witness: R. W. Carter, Jr."

Later it was contended by the counsel for the corporation that a contract signed in this manner by Carter was not valid for the reason that he had no authority from the Board of Directors to make the contract. However, since it was shown that the Board of Directors had not limited the power of Carter to transact business for th corporation, the court held the corporation liable on the contract, and said:

DECISION

"A general manager, if his authority is not limited, has power to bind the cor-

PLANNING THE THEATRE

A SERVICE CONDUCTED BY PETER M. HULSKEN, A. I. A.

The Question:

I AM managing the S—— theatre of this city, which is suburban house seating 490 people. It is 85 feet long by 31 feet wide by an average of 18 feet high. The ceiling has six ventilators in same and the roof is 2½ feet above the ceiling and the roof not ventilated.

We have been figuring on putting in some kind of a cooling system adequate to take care of this kind of a room and in the most economical way that it can be done. We thought probably that you may have in your files some very valuable information in regard to what has been found the cheapest and best, and also from description above might be glad to offer suggestions in regard to same.—A. D. J.

The Answer:

BY LOOKING OVER issues of BETTER THEATRES, you will find advertisements of concerns specializing in theatre cooling systems. Many of these concerns also manufacture units for small theatres such as you describe yours to be. These units are easily installed. By investigating the premises their representatives could be able to suggest to you the best method of installation and also give you an estimate of the cost.

Of course there are several ways of cooling a theatre, and the cost varies a great deal. Cooling air by refrigeration is rather expensive and prohibitive for such a small house as yours. The next system would be by washing the air. To obtain the best results the temperature of the water used should be below 60 degrees. Now if the water in your city is below that in the warm weather you could use it. If it is above that you would have to drill a deep well, as the cooler the water the better the results. If your theatre is equipped with a ventilating system of the proper size and there is plenty of room in the fan room you could install an airwasher and provide diffusers at the outlets of the air ducts, provided these ducts are in the proper location. The best location for them would be at each side of the proscenium arch about 8 or 9 feet above the auditorium floor.

The six ventilators which are now located in the ceiling are of no good use and should be closed up. In place of those install three ventilators of the proper size, evenly spaced, in ceiling near the rear wall and connect them directly with roof ventilators. The ceiling grilles should be provided with adjustable louvres so that they can be closed when the cooling system is not in use. It would be well to insulate the ceiling with 3½ inches of mineral wool, as according to your description it must be a veritable hot box in the summer time.

To obtain the best results the air must be circulated and the warm air must be exhausted, therefore it would be better to connect the ceiling registers with a fan chamber, or install fan-equipped ventilators. This system can be installed very economically. If the theatre is not equipped as described above it would be necessary to construct a fan and airwasher room on top of the auditorium roof, right in front of the stage wall. This would be cheaper than to build it in the basement as it will save a lot of galvanized iron duct work, because the fresh air can be taken directly through the wall of the pent house and the cool air can be directly supplied through one duct above the proscenium arch.

I further would advise you to use a three-speed motor for the fan and be sure to have the cool air properly diffused to prevent direct drafts, and have all ducts and grilles of the proper sizes so that you do not have to force the system. Consult the State code pertaining to ventilation so that the required volume of air is supplied for each person in the theatre, as these codes vary in different states.

If according to my suggestions you investigate these different systems I am sure you will be able to install a cooling system at a very reasonable amount of money.

The Question:

WE HAVE just purchased a theatre which has been started and due to financial conditions, same is not completed. At present we are confronted with the problem of decorating the interior. It will be a 1,500-1,700-seat house. Any suggestions or data that you have to offer will be appreciated.—F. Q.

The Answer:

THIS DEPARTMENT does not claim to be able to solve all theatre problems, but it aims to give the subscribers of this magazine advice and suggestions in different building problems to its best ability.

Your inquiry is not very plain to me and I am at a loss to know just what kind of information you really require. You state that due to financial conditions your theatre is not completed, and further on you mention that you are confronted with the problem of decorating the interior. I therefore presume that you wish to be informed regarding the cost of same. If this is the case why not consult with a few theatre decorators. They will be able to give you the necessary information.

If your house is executed in the modernistic style you will be able to obtain a very low price as for such a design blending and shading of colors is about all that is necessary. The wall surfaces are generally broken and there would be no need of murals or a great amount of stencil or free-hand work.

My advice to you is to make the decorative scheme as plain as possible, using soft and warm tones. Avoid gaudy stencils and colors so that the effect may be quiet and soothing. A lot of money has been wasted on decorating, as a great many houses are gaudy and in bad taste. Remember that the house is mostly dark. Be sure to have your decorator spend his best efforts in lobby and foyer as that is the first impression your patrons obtain. Select a good decorator who is familiar with theatre work, inspect some of his executed work to be sure that you have the right party. I believe that from $2,000 to $3,000 would give you an attractive decorative scheme.

NOTE:

IN THIS department Better Theatres will be glad to answer questions pertaining to the preliminary consideration involved in the planning of a new theatre or in the remodeling of an existing one. Only requests for ideas will be answered, since this department cannot assume the practical functions of an architect. All communications intended for this department should be addressed to "Better Theatres," 1790 Broadway, New York. They will be answered in this department. None will be answered by mail. Although only initials will be used in signing the questions published, it is a requirement that all letters bear the signature and address of their writers. The replies will be prepared personally by Mr. Hulsken, who is a practical architect and a member of the American Institute of Architects.

poration by contracts made in good faith and within the corporate power, without any resolution of the Board of Directors expressly authorizing the contracts. . . . Upon the undisputed evidence we are of opinion that the authorization of the directors was not essential to the validity of the contract."

PAYMENT OF INSURANCE

GENERALLY SPEAKING, an insurance company never is liable for more than the actual value of the destroyed or damaged property. This is true although the insured may have for many years paid insurance on higher valuation. Therefore, it is important to know how a court determines the true cash value of insured property.

CASE

For illustration, in Travellers Indemnity Company v. B. & B. Company (58 S. W. [2d] 640, Louisville, Ky.), it was shown that a company held an insurance policy for protection against boiler explosion. The policy contained a clause which stated that in no case shall the company be liable for more than the true cash value of the property.

The question arose as to the legal meaning of the term "true cash value." During the trial the evidence disclosed that the original cost of the boiler was $1,500. The cost of setting and encasing it was about $1,500, making the total cost of the boiler $3,000 at the time it was damaged. It had been in use six or seven years.

A trial before a jury resulted in a verdict in favor of the company for $1,800. The insurance company appealed to the higher Court on the ground that the "true cash value" of the boiler was not $1,800. In upholding this contention and reversing the jury's verdict, the court said:

DECISION

"The term 'cash value' is the price which the boiler will bring when offered for sale by one who desires to sell, but is not compelled to do so, and is bought by one who desires to purchase, but is not compelled to do so."

RAILROAD'S LIABILITY FOR TRANSIT DAMAGE

DISCUSSION HAS arisen from time to time whether or not a railroad company may be relieved from liability for loss or damage to shipped goods where a contract is entered into between the railroad company and the shipper specifying that the railroad company shall not be liable for negligence of its employes. This point of the law was discussed in the late case of Bernardi Greater Shows v. Boston & M. R. R. (165 Atl. 124, Farmington, N. H.).

The facts of this case are that a theatrical company and a railroad company entered into a contract by the terms of which the railroad company agreed to transport goods and the theatrical company agreed to relieve the railroad company from liability for loss or damage to the equipment, although such loss or damage should result from negligence of the railroad employes.

The goods were damaged while enroute and the theatrical company filed suit against the railroad company to recover damages. The counsel for the railroad company contended that no liability existed because the contract was made to relieve the railroad company from liability.

However, the evidence indicated that the loss resulted from negligence of the railroad company's employes. Therefore, the higher court held the railroad company liable and explained that a contract of this nature is not valid, saying:

DECISION

"It has been definitely established that the validity of any limitation upon the liability of a common carrier with reference to interstate transportation of goods, involving as it does the construction of this statute, presents a federal question depending for its solution upon the acts of Congress and the common-law rules accepted and applied in the federal courts. . . . The question submitted for decision, viz., whether the contract between the railroad and the show company 'is a bar to the maintenance of all or any of the foregoing actions,' is therefore answered in the negative."

EMPLOYER LIABLE FOR TRANSPORTATION

IT IS WELL established law that any person who employs another is liable for payment for the services performed, although the former has a written contract with another person by the terms of which the latter agreed to pay the charges.

CASE

For instance, in the late case of Israel v. Fanchon & Marco (58 S. W. [2d] 774, Kansas City, Mo.), it was disclosed that a theatre corporation was engaged in the business of producing stage entertainment or shows to be exhibited in theatres owned by others. The corporation made a contract with the owner of a theatre in Kansas City by the terms of which it was agreed that the corporation would furnish shows for exhibition, including talent, costumes, scenery, etc., for a stated period and price. One provision of the contract was that the theatre owner agreed to pay for all charges in connection with the transferring of scenery, costumes and baggage from the railway station to the theatre and return.

A transfer company, which was in the habit of doing practically all the hauling for the corporation, was notified by an employe of the corporation that the scenery and equipment should be transferred from the railway station to the theatre. After the transfer company had performed this work the corporation refused to pay the bill because of the above mentioned contract by the terms of which the owner of the theatre had agreed with the corporation to pay the transfer charges. The transfer company filed suit against the corporation and in holding the latter liable, the court said:

DECISION

"The testimony in behalf of plaintiff (transfer company) tends to show that this service was rendered solely at the instance and request and under the direction of the agent of the defendant (corporation), and that plaintiff received no request or direction from the Charno Amusement Company (theatre owner) at any time to transfer any of the property."

NEGLIGENCE IN INJURY

THE LEGAL question often has arisen whether or not the owner of a theatre building is liable in damages for injuries sustained by a patron or other person, where it is shown that the theatre owner violated a city ordinance, and also that the injured person was careless or contributory negligent in receiving the injury. This point of the law was discussed in the late case of Blankertz v. Mack & Company (248 N. W. 889, Ann Arbor, Mich.).

CASE

In this case it was shown that a city ordinance provides: "It shall be the duty of the owner, agent or lessee to provide or cause to be provided at all elevator openings proper trap or automatic doors or automatic gates so constructed as to open and close by the action of elevators either ascending or descending. . . ."

The owner of a building failed to comply with this ordinance with the result that a person who entered the building was seriously injured in an elevator. He filed suit against the owner to recover damages. However, during the trial testimony was introduced showing that the injured person was familiar with the premises and knew that the elevator was not equipped with automatic gates.

Therefore, although the lower court held the owner of the building liable in damages, the higher court reversed, saying:

DECISION

"Admitting that defendant (owner) was guilty of negligence in failing to comply with the above-quoted statute, none the less we think it convincingly appears from this record that plaintiff (injured person) was also guilty of negligence which was a contributing proximate cause of his misfortune. . . . If he fails to use the care that an ordinarily careful person would have used . . . he must bear his own misfortune."

HAIL THE CUSTOMER

IN an era of doubt and misgivings, of flutterings and dreads, this, the annual New Product number of Motion Picture Herald, with its impressive presentation of sincere box-office endeavor, is an earnest of substantiality in this industry.

Even the most casual reading of the enumeration of pictures, 504 detailed and 510 scheduled, makes apparent that a genuine effort in behalf of the box office is being made, that the production department of the industry is at work now on a realization that the customer is the ultimate consumer. Hollywood has spent a lot of time and many a million doing "something for the boss," something for the circuit and all kinds of things. But now there is evidence, not too much, but some, that there is an understanding creeping, seeping, into the production community that maybe the customers are important.

One can go no headlong distance, yet, but there is promise that motion pictures are increasingly to be made for the entertainment of the public rather than for the pursuit of the intramural concerns of Hollywood. And hectic as Hollywood is in the pursuit of notions, it may become the rage.

CURRENT ructions in the office of NRA bring along the discovery that the Press Gallery in Washington is open only to correspondents of "daily newspapers or newspaper associations requiring telegraphic service," with a recent slight broadening of the rule to admit correspondents of daily trade publications. It is obvious, of course, that special recognition should be given to publications engaged in circulating the affairs of Mutt and Jeff, Moon Mullins and the race track returns, as opposed to papers that are concerned only with the industries which employ the millions.

HOW WE ARE FAVORED

WRITING in Motion Picture Daily, Mr. Red Kann has the temerity to set forth that from the NRA point of view the motion picture industry has been specially favored, because " . . . the history of other codes hasn't allowed for anything like the scrimmages that have been entered on the record in the picture business," and pointing out that the oil men got short attention and an iron hand. One would assume from that that something had been settled in the oil business. We would remark that if there have been any favors to the motion picture industry in the code conferences they will test out to something less than 3.2 per cent. Also, there are a lot of things in a can of film that are not to be found in a can of oil.

The farther the NRA Eagle flies up the canyon the more apparent it becomes that it has not yet sighted the answers. If the NRA has found itself in a mess of complexities concerning the screen, it is its own fault. The Act was presumed to be concerned with the problem of unemployment and the spread of buying power. If the Eagle decided to take under its wings also such matters as too much money for Miss Goodie Two Shoes and the zoning of Bad Axe, Wahoo and Snohomish, double bills in Bird Center and the distribution of crockery on family nights, that was its own fault.

Eagles ought to attend to the business of eagling. Let Hugh hew to the line.

SMALLER AND MORE OF THEM

WHAT is commonly described as the over-seating problem of the motion picture industry is held by Mr. Ben Schlanger, architect and contributor to the current issue of Motion Picture Herald's Better Theatres section, to be really inefficient seating.

Some months ago this page complained of a number of things concerning the motion picture under the title of "Too Damned Big."

Now we are entertained, not to say encouraged, to find Mr. Schlanger discovering the rise of the six-hundred-seat theatre, even under today's conditions so adverse to new enterprise, right in the face of and in competition with the larger houses. He sees in the smaller theatre advantages of location, closer to the patrons' homes, minimum admission prices due to minimum operating costs, audience intimacy, better screen shopping because of the larger array of programs in a given territory, and better exhibition because of size, the accessibility of seats and better sight lines.

All of this relates to our frequent contention that the motion picture can prosper by endeavor toward making theatregoing a habit and part of the week's routine for a large proportion of the customers. The industry was vastly prosperous when the patrons came in, and it got into difficulties when it became so very necessary to go out to get them.

THE wires say that Joan Blondell wants to change her name to Barnes. The other day the press related that a chap by the name of Barnes had changed his name to Kelley—"Machine Gun" Kelley—and now they've taken that away and have given him a number.

THE stories that come out of the stock market investigation in Washington lead us to anticipate that most any day now Mr. Albert Wiggin of the Chase National Bank will break down and say that he "learned it at the movies."

BLIND, PENNILESS

From out of the Galignani home for old and impoverished savants at Neuilly, in France, and the still keen mind of a blind, penniless scientist inmate, has come new promise of practicable third dimensional motion pictures. Seventy-eight-year-old Auguste Baron, who patented many a sound film invention in the United States and Europe, long prior to its realization, working in recent years with his daughter, has evolved a method which shows characters in relief, as persons on a stage. Only one film, one camera are needed with little change in present apparatus necessary. Success at last may yet be the deserved portion of Auguste Baron's declining years. . . .

LINE OF DUTY

"In line of duty" should read the epitaph on the grave of one William Casel, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who, though on regular assignment, must rank with the boldest of intrepid newsreel cameramen. At the U. S. Army's Fort Myer, Va., last week was Cameraman Casel, there to shoot scenes for "Rodney," with Walter Huston. Set was he with his camera to "catch" a charging horse-drawn gun caisson. On came the horses, plunged past the camera, left William Casel prone, lifeless, beaten under hoofs, the scene "shot." . . .

CENSOR QUESTIONED

Ever and anon into the news creeps a story concerning one or another of the country's scissoring state censors, as they clip away at Hollywood's output. This week was the ire of Universal's James R. Grainger aroused to the point of ordering his Kansas City exchange to file suit to test the Kansas board's authority in the recent slicing of "Love, Honor and Oh, Baby," he contending they placed too vivid an interpretation on dialogue, plot. Rare is such a suit, though appeals are commonplace—and usually unavailing. . . .

FIRM GRIP

Totally inferior to Hollywood's output is that small quantity which comes from South America's native studios, last week in New York declared Universal's South American manager, Monroe Isen. "Quality pictures" in English, from Hollywood, is the demand of Latin American film-goers, preferring the original, foreign language and all, to that same product, "dubbed" in Spanish. From the U. S. comes 90 per cent of all films screened in South America, claims Mr. Isen, with comedies best able to hurdle the language barrier. Slow in reaching southward was the depression. Firm in their grip, apparently, do U. S. producers hold the broad South American market.

AMBITION

Perennial is the ambition of the dramatic actor to immortalize Shakespeare's famed "Hamlet" as it never has been immortalized before. No exception is the "royal" Barrymore family's John. At least unusual will be his rendition of the unhappy prince of Denmark. With costumes, scenery from the East, a Hollywood cast familiar with the play, Barrymore will render Hamlet in no less a setting than the huge, open air amphitheatre which is the Hollywood Bowl, on completion of a current RKO Radio role in "Long Lost Father." That should satisfy the Barrymore ambition. . . .

TURN ABOUT

Turn and turn about, whether fair play or not, is in the offing where Broadway stage and Hollywood set is concerned, thinks Al Jolson, Coast arrival this week to do "Wonder Bar" for Warner. With New York theatres on the "comeback," Broadway "is going to hit back at Hollywood and conduct some of those famous talent raids. . . . Before long Hollywood is going to lose many stage favorites that have been here during the lean days on Broadway." Broadway still has a distance to travel. . . .

DISTURBED SAVANT

Far-reaching, significant is the prediction last week voiced in Chicago by Professor Howard Mumford Jones, author, University of Michigan English professor, when he told the American Library Association the motion picture some day may absorb all other modes of education and entertainment. Low, possibly becoming lower, certainly influenced by cinema, is America's mass level of reading taste, declared Professor Jones. Wanting to kill time, people "prefer going to the 'talkies' to idling over a book. And their example is spreading," reports the obviously disturbed savant. Singularly undisturbed is the motion picture industry, ever ready with "time-killing" material. . . .

GOOD SAMARITAN

Upon herself last week, the curved, flamboyant Mae West took the role of Good Samaritan, appealing to California's Governor Rolph to refuse extradition for one Ben Jones, film projectionist, wanted in South Carolina, allegedly escaped from a prison camp while serving life sentence for murder. Miss West: ". . . Now, Jim, you know that I know men and if there ever was a man who appeared innocent, it is Jones. . . . A job awaits him here." With her "I know men" contention, "Jim" Rolph of California is unlikely to disagree. . . .

OPPORTUNITY

"Ample Opportunity" for young screen star prospects is behind the Fox studio organization of a training school of dramatic acting, physical education, looking toward screen roles, tests. To Morris Ankrum, writer-player-director, Lillian Barkley, dramatic coach, has gone the responsibility. From Fox president Sidney R. Kent comes explanation: "It is easy to discover picture possibilities in young people, but it is difficult to build them." For strictly construction purposes, via one-act plays, has Fox's training school been developed. . . .

FUTURE'S THEATRE

Hardly necessary is it as yet for theatres to install equipment for television performances, though progress in the field is unquestionably a fact. Yet is the "radiovision" theatre, offering programs transmitted by television, nearer perfection than is commonly realized, appreciated, in the opinion of R. G. Tannehill, of First National Television, Inc., Kansas City. From RCA-Victor's Camden, N. J., laboratories and its Dr. Vladimir K. Zworykin recently came the "iconoscope" tube, superphotocell, importantly concerned in the unappreciated "near perfection." The talking motion picture was once a joke. . . .

STUDIOS COMPLETE FOURTH OF PRODUCT AND THEY'RE FIRING AT BOX OFFICE

Exhibitors with an eye to the sufficiency of product to fill their programs down through the last week of the 1933-34 season need have no fear of a shortage of pictures emanating from the studios in Hollywood. Supporting that assurance, companies both major and independent, by October 20 had completed 130 or 25 per cent of the 510 features listed for the new showmanship year.

Since the start of the new picture-making season in August, one-fourth of the entire quota has been wiped off the production slate. During a similar period last year, when a slightly higher grand total had been announced, only 97 pictures, or 18 per cent of the complement, had been finished.

The larger companies announced 387 pictures for 1933-34. On October 20, 29 per cent or 111 units on their programs had been completed. Independent producers, laboring under the uncertainty of Code provisions, particularly with regard to the status of double featuring, were traveling at a slower clip. They, having made plans for about 125 pictures, had completed 19, which is 16 per cent of their entire allotment.

Columbia Pace Balanced

Among the majors, Columbia is proceeding on what is at once the slowest yet most evenly balanced pace. Forty-nine features were catalogued by that company, of which five or just a bit more than 10 per cent had been checked off during the 12-week period. Last summer the same number had been completed at that time.

Of the two companies that announced the most pictures, Paramount and Warner Brothers, each of which listed 60 productions, 36 either have left the studios or are in such condition that they can be quickly shipped to distribution centers. Paramount has written finis to 20 pictures, 33 1-3 per cent of its grand total, and Warners have checked off 16 finished productions, which is nearly 27 per cent of the announced output. Nine of these 16 will be released under the W. B. trademark, the remaining seven coming under the First National banner. A year ago Paramount had 16, or four less, wrapped up; while Warner Brothers, with the same number announced, were one ahead of this year's mark with 17 out of the way.

Fox ranks highest in the proportionate number of pictures completed. Fifty-two were announced, 21 are through the mill. Thus 40 per cent of the year's work at the Westwood Hills Movietone City and Western Avenue plant is in the vaults. This is a decided jump in comparison with last year's figures, when only 11 pictures were ready for delivery during the August 1-October 20 shooting period.

While the total number of productions on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer program has been slightly shaved, the studio has turned out four more pictures to date this year than last. Of the 46 announced, 14 completed give this studio a 30 per cent chunk of its grand total. Last year at this time only 10 pictures had been cleared at MGM.

At Radio, where 50 pictures will be made, the percentage of completions is the same as MGM's. Fifteen productions completed by October 20 tops by three last year's number when 12 had been finished.

In the case of United Artists, where foreign-made pictures scheduled for distribution are not included in these figures, seven of the known 20 productions that will be made are complete, which clocks this studio at a 35 per cent speed. Five of these pictures are credited to the newly formed 20th

Hollywood Has Gone Showmanship

Out of the Successive Cycles of "Hey-Hey" and "Boom-Boom" Pictures, "Stock Ticker" Pictures, "Depression" Pictures, Comes the New Showmanship Product

by VICTOR M. SHAPIRO Motion Picture Herald Hollywood Bureau

With the fog of depression lifting throughout the country, the spirit in Hollywood is also mounting.

Today Hollywood producers are looking facts eye to eye. They are analyzing. They are planning productions and planning for the box office.

More than ever before, Hollywood is injecting showmanship into pictures—surrounding pictures with showmanship and relaying them to New York with the old-time ballyhoo of showmanship. The spirit is there, the sincerity is unquestioned and the yardstick seems accurate.

Hollywood today is being guided by the avoidable and unavoidable mistakes of the last few years. It wants to profit by the missteps of the past. It well remembers the "hey-hey" pictures of the prosperity boom when anything went. Even a celluloid collar run through a projection machine could have made money in 1928.

Producers are not producing "boom-boom" pictures today. They know the public is selecting and rejecting. They know showmen won't book "boom."

Then again, Hollywood painfully recalls the "stock ticker" pictures—when stars, directors, cameramen, grips and prop boys had one ear on the set and both eyes and an ear on the tape.

The box office silently—and the exhibitor audibly—gave Hollywood the answer to the ticker-tape films—and Hollywood remembers.

Now they're shaking off the depression pictures—pictures produced when the air was charged with bankruptcies, receiverships and shattered morale. For over three years the minds and hearts of the creative artists were just as troubled as those of the public. Naturally, films reflected the times. And the hope today is that those days are gone forever.

Plenty of evidence is at hand to show the tide has turned in Hollywood. Popularity of the new musicals gave the first indications that the nation wanted gayer things.

Theatre reopenings gave another spur to Hollywood activity. The psychological change that swept the nation after the bank holiday is definitely reflected in the production boom that is proceeding with such confidence today.

Outstanding showmanship productions like "Lady for a Day," "Morning Glory," "The Bowery," "Dinner at Eight," "My Weakness," "Bombshell," "Footlight Parade," "I'm No Angel," "A Man's Castle," "Prizefighter and the Lady" are heralds of the new day and the new deal. Hollywood has gone showmanship.

GIVE ADVERTISING CODE MEANING, SAYS QUIGLEY

Tells AMPA Members of Responsibility To Rid Industry of Criticisms of Its Advertising and Its Publicity

A new opportunity and responsibility to give meaning to the advertising code of ethics in order that the motion picture industry "shall no longer merit the sort of criticism which has been leveled against its advertising and publicity," was pointed out to members of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers by Martin Quigley, editor-in-chief of Quigley Publications, at the weekly luncheon-meeting at Sardi's in New York last Thursday.

Mr. Quigley characterized the original code of advertising ethics, formulated in 1930, as a "hollow and insincere gesture to satisfy certain quarters of outraged public opinion," and urged the membership of the AMPA to demand the rights which their responsibility under the NRA motion picture code has given them.

He reminded the group that under the NRA, trade associations are intended to fulfill a more important function than has been possible in the absence of such a law. Failure to take this responsibility upon itself, Mr. Quigley cautioned, would result in activity in other quarters of the industry to take over those responsibilities which properly belong to the Association. Such a consequence would limit the present and future effectiveness of the Association, he said, and at the same time would limit the effectiveness of the AMPA members.

The publisher made specific reference to the clause in the advertising code of ethics which states: "Nudity with meretricious purpose, and salacious postures, shall not be used."

Urges Clauses Be Rewritten

"There can be no proper use of nudity in the advertising of a picture," declared Mr. Quigley. "Rules which apply to the Museum of Art have nothing to do with us. I urge very strongly that the weight of this Association be put behind an effort to rewrite that clause and rewrite it in a measure that will cause it to mean something."

Mr. Quigley indicated regret that the AMPA had not been adequately represented at the code-formulation conferences in New York and Washington, but pointed out that with the inclusion in the code of a clause pledging the industry to "maintain the best standards of advertising and publicity procedure," members were accorded a new opportunity and responsibility for service to the industry.

Cites Rejection of Newspaper Ads

He expressed the belief that if adequate progress were to be made toward solution of the problem posed by the criticism leveled against film advertising, it would be necessary that such progress be made by the AMPA. The impressions of the motion picture industry held by the public in general are largely as a result of the work of the members of the association, Mr. Quigley said, and he indicated a serious state of affairs had been reached when large newspapers in the United States refuse to publish certain motion picture advertisements. He added that several bill posting companies had rejected motion picture posters.

Action of the persons concerned will be necessary to give the advertising clause, as well as other clauses in the code, real meaning, Mr. Quigley indicated. If it is to function effectively, he said, it will be vital to have appropriate rules and regulations within the industry governing the conduct of those involved. Mr. Quigley recommended to the membership of the AMPA that it take immediate steps to formulate such rules as will bring about the proper functioning of advertising and publicity for the best interests of the industry.

AMPA Refutes Charges Brought by Columbia Staff

Officers of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, at the regular weekly luncheon-meeting at Sardi's, New York, last week, refuted charges by members of the Columbia publicity and advertising department in a letter to John Flinn, AMPA president, that the organization is "wanting in usefulness," and was deteriorating from the original purpose in permitting membership other than active advertising and publicity men.

Hal Horne, former president, presented an analysis of membership, in which he noted that of 147 total membership, 100 are accredited advertising and publicity men, 24 are press representatives, six are artists, eight are mechanically employed and nine are lay members.

It was understood that an echo of the Goldberg-Columbia-AMPA dispute will be heard Thursday when the regular weekly luncheon of the AMPA will be held behind closed doors. Mr. Goldberg, it was said, will air his views further on the association's policies.

Southeastern Exhibitors Meet in Atlanta Oct. 29

The annual convention of Southeastern Theatre Owners' Association will be held in Atlanta October 29-31, Col. Thomas E. Orr, president, announced last week. Invitations were extended to the Tri-States Theatre Owners' Association and the North and South Carolina Theatre Owners.

Tri-State held its annual convention October 22-23 at Hotel Chisca, Memphis.

A. S. Metzger in San Diego Managing New Spreckels

Arthur S. Metzger, former manager of the Paramount-Publix real estate department, Midwest division, has been appointed manager of the New Spreckels, San Diego. His brother, Lou Metzger, operates the house.

Paramount's Plan To Be Ready Soon

A plan for reorganizing Paramount Publix Corporation will be submitted soon to creditors and security holders' committees, Sir William Wiseman, of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., bankers for the corporation, announced last week. Sir William said operating results in the past few months had encouraged the belief that reorganization within a reasonable time was possible.

"Further progress in straightening out the company's affairs must be made, however, before a comprehensive reorganization plan for the entire Paramount Publix enterprise can be definitely worked out and submitted," Sir William said.

Klein Reported Making Plan

The plan referred to in the Wiseman statement is understood to be that in preparation by Dr. Julius Klein, former assistant secretary of commerce in the Hoover administration, who, as the representative of the Paramount bondholders' protective committee of which Frank Vanderlip is chairman, has been receiving the cooperation of the trustees on a reorganization plan for the past two months.

Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Chase National, and First National Bank of Chicago are among Dr. Klein's principals. The bondholders' committee which he represents holds approximately $24,000,000 in Paramount bonds.

Although a final tabulation of claims filed against Paramount has been completed, counsel for the trustees last week declined to make public either the aggregate amount, or the principal claims, many of which, it was said, have either been filed in duplicate or are characterized as "discredited."

Ask Zukor and Hertz Be Called

Request that Adolph Zukor, president, and John Hertz, former chairman of the Paramount finance committee, be called to testify at the corporation's bankruptcy hearings before Referee Henry K. Davis, was made last week by Saul E. Rogers, counsel for a creditors' group.

Mr. Rogers said the testimony of these witnesses was desired to throw further light on the company's affairs, and Samuel Isseks, attorney for the trustees, said he would take the request under advisement.

Herschel Stuart, recently in charge of Paramount Publix's Detroit theatres for the company's theatre reorganization department, will be assigned to similar work on the Rickards & Nace circuit, Publix Arizona division.

Mr. Stuart returned to New York last week from Detroit. The 10 Publix houses there are now being operated by George W. Trendle on a salary and percentage basis in accordance with a management deal recently concluded between him and the company's trustees. Mr. Stuart leaves for Arizona this week.

Paramount Gets Dowling Film

Paramount has acquired distribution rights to the first Eddie Dowling-Arthur Hopkins production, titled "The Great Adventure." The picture was produced at the Eastern Service Studios, and features Lillian Gish and Roland Young. Mr. Hopkins and William deMille directed.

FILM CODE GOES TO WHITE HOUSE; SALARY INQUIRY IS MADE GENERAL

Exhibitors in Towns Under 2,500 and Employing Not More Than Five Persons Exempted from Recovery Codes

Late Wednesday, as this edition of Motion Picture Herald closed, Sol A. Rosenblatt, deputy commissioner of the NRA in charge of the motion picture code, expected to deliver the fourth and final draft of the document for the signature of President Roosevelt within a few hours. It was a possibility that the code might go to the White House Wednesday night, but a larger probability that it would be some time Thursday.

In view of the considerable contact that has been had between President Roosevelt and both General Hugh Johnson and Mr. Rosenblatt on various aspects of the motion picture code, it is expected that it will be signed promptly.

Upon submission of the code, Mr. Rosenblatt expected to announce the appointment of the members of the Code Authority, which will follow the slate previously presented in Motion Picture Herald.

Wednesday there were no indications that the final draft of the code would differ in any important respect from the third version.

The motion picture industry will not see a copy of the code in its final form until after its approval by the President, when it will be made public, as a printed document, by the National Recovery Administration, in routine manner.

That the recovery code for the film industry will go to General Hugh S. Johnson, administrator, and then to President Roosevelt, before the end of the week, was confidently predicted Wednesday by Deputy Administrator Solomon A. Rosenblatt.

With reports and recommendations on the document received from all three of the advisory boards of the NRA—labor, industrial and consumers—Mr. Rosenblatt cleared his desk for the writing of his review of the negotiations leading up to the approval of the third revision and his analysis of the contents of the code, for submission to General Johnson and, through him, to the President for approval.

A number of changes have been made in the third revision of the code and more may be incorporated before it leaves Mr. Rosenblatt's hands, but it is understood that these amendments, in the main, are of minor importance, principally changes in phraseology. It is doubtful whether details of the changes will be available to the industry generally until the code has been signed by the President and the approved version made public in printed form by the NRA.

The past week was marked by a number of outstanding code developments at Washington, at least one of which demonstrates that the motion picture industry has not been unduly discriminated against by the President, as has been charged by various Hollywood interests, as in the matter of star salaries.

That the film industry will be put on a footing with all others in matters of federal policy was made clear with the announcement last week that the Federal Trade Commission, acting under a senate resolution passed last session, was making a survey of the salaries and other emoluments of corporation executives with a view to submitting a report to Congress.

A questionnaire, asking for information as far back as 1928, has been sent by the commission to all corporations engaged in interstate commerce, except public utilities, having assets of $1,000,000 or more, whose securities are listed on the New York stock or curb exchanges. Returns of the questionnaires are due on Thursday at Washington but the information developed will not be made public.

Defining salaries as including "any compensation, fee, bonus, commission or other payment, direct or indirect, in money or otherwise, for personal services," the commission demands information as to the total assets, net sales and net income of the corporations, the number of directors and executive officers and the total compensation to each for the years 1928 to 1932, inclusive; the name and official positions of directors and officers and the compensation of each last year; the cash value of all compensation other than salaries, at the time such compensation was paid or delivered to directors or officers, last year; a description of any special compensation to directors and officers, and the rates of compensation of directors and officers in effect Sept. 1, 1933.

Included in the list of corporations to which the questionnaire is sent will be a number of motion picture companies, according to the listings of the stock and curb exchanges.

The question of salary control, it was developed, has been under study by the President for a considerable period and he has received from his attorney general a voluminous report, in which such control is held to be feasible but requiring definite action by Congress. The implication is that the President's message to Congress in January will outline a plan for restriction of salaries, possibly through the medium of heavy taxes on excessive remuneration. Excessive star salaries undoubtedly would be included.

Although no indication was made as to what extent the exhibition field would be affected, a rather unusual order came from the White House in the week decreeing that exhibitors in communities of less than 2,500 population which are not parts of the trading area of larger centers, and having not more than five employees, may be relieved of the increased costs of operation which will result from application of the labor provisions of the code.

The executive order was issued by President Roosevelt and made public on October 23 by the National Recovery Administration. It practically withdraws from small establishments in small towns all necessity for compliance with recovery codes or the President's reemployment agreement.

The President's action was dictated by the showing that compliance with maximum hour and minimum wage requirements by such business places would be ruinous. In addition, any attempt to comply would result in raising prices so high in such communities as materially to affect farmers.

Liberal Interpretation Expected

No official interpretations of the order, as to whether all classes of business are covered, have yet been issued, but it is understood that the administration will construe it in the most liberal manner.
